

EDITORS TOLD OF STEPS TO HELP FARMER

Production Control Held
Big Need By and to Agriculture Chief.

"Control of production, as intended in the agriculture adjustment act, is necessary to bring back prosperity to the farmer."

This was the message given delegates at the National Editorial Association convention at the Claypool today by Paul H. Appleby, assistant secretary of agriculture.

Appleby, publisher of the Radford (Va.) News-Journal, appealed by statement to editors and publishers to use their papers to tell farmers how the adjustment act will operate.

"I can give you assurance the act reasonably can be expected to do what it is devised to do," the assistant secretary's message from Washington assured.

Scheduled to speak on "The Place of Agriculture in National Recovery," Appleby could not attend the convention. His speech was read by Harry B. Rutledge, executive secretary of the association.

Urges Production Control
"To effect any lasting improvement, there must be control of production," Appleby stated.

"We must learn to stabilize the process of exchange so that people may not starve, may not even be in want, in the presence of plenty. It can be done."

The necessary thing is to put purchasing power where it does not now exist, to stimulate the process of trade, and to achieve stability and balance between the basic producing and buying groups," his message said.

Appleby further cited to editors "various adjustments in hours of labor will be necessary."

"Restoration of buying power to farmers is essential. The thing to do is to restore a fair trading basis between town and city."

Four-Point Program
The convention is considering a four-point program. It calls for a vigorous campaign to control free publicity in weekly and small daily newspapers.

Immediate objectives were presented in the report of Rutledge, Tuesday afternoon.

Creation of an accredited newspaper department is meeting opposition among delegates.

Delegates were entertained Tuesday night by Indianapolis publishers at the Athenaeum with a buffet supper and dance.

Nicholson to Be Speaker

After the business session this morning, delegates were to go to Brown county state park, and will be guests of Indiana university at a dinner tonight.

A memorial service for Kin Hubbard will be held at the "Abe Martin" lodge in Brown county.

Meredith Nicholson, Hoosier author, was to be among morning session speakers. "The Glories of Indiana" was his subject.

Five places are bidding for the 1934 convention: Toronto, Canada; Alaska; Williamsburg, Va.; Washington, D. C.; and Des Moines, Ia.
