

WIDER ROADS NEED OF STATE, CLAIMS ADAMS

Right-of-Way to Be Extended
Past 60 Feet, Says
Highway Director.

As a safety measure to cut down Indiana's rapidly mounting accident-death rate, the Indiana state highway department proposes to widen many of the state's highways, according to James Adams, state highway director.

This part of the department's program was explained to county commissioners at a district conference at the Severn Thursday afternoon.

"We are going to increase the right-of-way past 60 feet average," Adams stated, "because we feel we must look to future needs of the motorists."

Michigan Far Ahead

"I am convinced Indiana has made a mistake in not making her roads wide enough."

After inspecting roads in several states, he said he was convinced Michigan is ahead of other states in road construction.

The Michigan road width is a 120-foot standard, he explained.

"There is no doubt," he said, "but that Indiana lays the finest type of concrete slab in the country. Other states have asked how we get such a smooth riding surface."

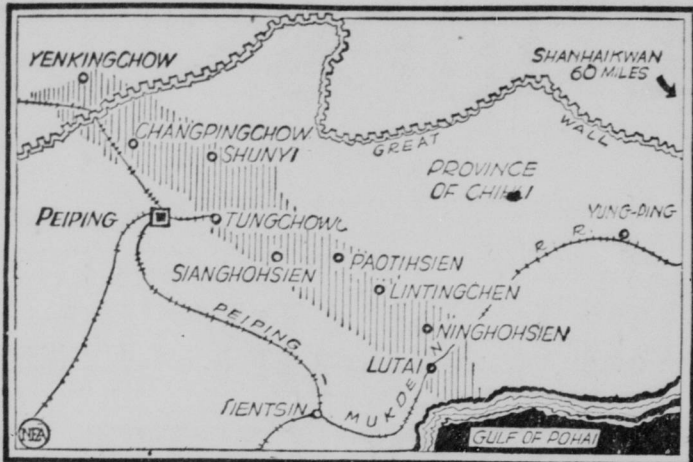

Discuss Construction

Road construction was the topic at the conference at which Thomas H. Ellis, Marion county commissioner and president of the Indiana County Commissioners' Association, presided.

Other speakers were Edward Cooper, of the state board of accounts; J. P. Johnson, Indianapolis, road material contractor; Earl Kiger, Indianapolis school supply dealer; Bruce Short, Marion county surveyor; Donald Hill, Hancock county auditor; and Warren Rumbaugh, of the J. D. Adams Company, Indianapolis.

JAPAN, CHINA SET UP NEUTRAL ZONE

Facing each other across the neutral zone shown by the shading on the map above, Japanese and Chinese troops await adjustment of the conflict between the two countries. Japanese troops have withdrawn north of, and Chinese troops south of, the shaded area in an effort to protect Peiping and other cities.

McNutt Misses Parade! Reaches Fair Hour Late

Details Trickle Out With Return From Chicago
of Observers.

BY DANIEL M. KIDNEY
Times Staff Writer

Governor Paul V. McNutt missed a parade!

That was last Saturday, but details only reached the statehouse today with return of several persons from A Century of Progress exposition at Chicago.

They report that the Governor not only missed the delegation awaiting him at the gates there Saturday, but arrived on his way late with a high hat, high temper and a semi-wild collar. He blamed Richard Lieber, whose arrangements went awry.

Here is the story: McNutt was scheduled to speak on the program in which the Indiana exhibit was presented to the fair.

Notables come in the Fourteenth street gate, while the crowd comes in at Twelfth street. But the Governor had two charts from Lieber showing he was to be greeted at the Twelfth street entrance. So he arrived there on time.

But the automobile caravan (special permission having been procured to drive cars by the reception committee) awaited at the Fourteenth street gate.

In despair the Governor hiked the mile or more through the crowd to the Indiana show. Arriving he flouted the charts at Lieber, who explained that the gate shift had been made later and he had sent a courier to inform the Governor.

BEATEN BY HOODLUMS

Postal Employee Attacked When He Objects to Cursing on Sidewalk.

When he objected to cursing by four sidewalk hoodlums, Chester L. Rigby, 26, Louisville postal employee, was "beaten up" Thursday night on Illinois street near the Union station, he told police.

The men, after beating Rigby, fled in a taxicab. Police later arrested Earl Shome, 35, of 824 North East street, cab driver, who brought Rigby's coat to police headquarters.

STATE BANKERS TO MEET IN CITY JUNE 13 AND 14

Left to Right—Richard A. McKinley, M. B. Nahm and L. A. Andrews.

Speakers at the annual meeting of the Indiana Bankers' Association to be held in Indianapolis, June 13 and 14, will include Richard A. McKinley, state banking commissioner; Max B. Nahm, Bowling Green, Ky., and L. A. Andrews, bank commissioner of Iowa.

Governor Paul V. McNutt will be a guest at a luncheon. He signed the new Indiana financial institutions' law, which was based on recommendations of the Indiana study commission.

McKinley heads the department which applies the new law. Nahm, vice-president of the Bowling Green Trust Company, is a member of the policy commission of the American Bankers' Association, in which Andrews also is active.
