

Club Offers Awards for Swimmers

Activities at Highland Pool Are Given Impetus.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

HIGHLAND Golf and Country Club swimmers have a determination in their method which promises excellence of form and championship laurels. If members really take the sport seriously, Alvin Romiser will see to it that the resolve to improve is kept unbroken.

Highest award of mastery for swimmers over 10 is the medal for a twenty-one mile swim. That sounds easy enough, but consider the limitations. Contestants must not swim less than a fourth or more than a mile a day, and the deadline is Aug. 26.

For those who find an inner tube a boon, it requires a bit of persistence to struggle along with a daily attempt to be serious about the thing. But then there are those who were born to be ducks in the water, and it's no end of annoyance not to race right through the twenty-one miles. For the younger swimmers, a ten-mile record is the goal.

In case the swimmers pass the tests, which Romiser sets down, there are several emblems which can be won to grace the suit. After earning the "H" for beginner's skill, there's no rest for the ambitious until the "H" is winged with the symbols of speed.

Fourth of July the youngsters of the club paddled their way to club fame. In the various age groups, the following won firsts: Bobby Hanley, Georgia Dedrick, Tom Joe and Ed McNamara, Doris Abbott, Nancy Scott, Betty Medcitt and Margaret Blakley. These swimmers are among the group who heed Romiser's instructions, on Tuesday and Friday mornings.

Meet Is Labor Day

On Labor day, all the club swimmers will take part in the annual club championship meet. All ages and all types of swimming and diving will be included in the features.

Prospect of a triangular meet the Sunday preceding Labor day with Woodstock and Meridian Hills Country clubs, suggests reasons for such intensive training other than personal aspiration. Last year's victory is something worth repeating, in sixty events for all ages, Highland totaled 334 points to Meridian Hills 169 and Woodstock's 17.

Membership Is Incentive

Woodstock and Meridian Hills also are preparing for the competition. Cecil Wyant at Woodstock is busy training novices. Emmy Jean Harrie and Jane Cox are two of his younger swimmers. Miss Priscilla Miner is a pupil he's proud of—daily she improves in diving and swimming form.

Bill Weiss has provided incentive to improve with organization of his Sharks Club, which makes it one of the swimmers who have mastered various difficult tests.

Campfire Girls

Camp Fire Girls held council fire Saturday at Camp Talahi, McCormick's Creek state park, to award honors won during the week. Charlotte Carpenter, Anna Belle Comstock, and Lois Stratman took part. Jo Anne Jackson received Wood Gathers' rank, the first rank in Camp Fire.

The following honor in swimming was awarded to Barbara Sternfels, Carolyn Rude, Betty Lemen, Jean Evans, Rose Lee McQueen, Jo Anne Jackson, Doris Fesler, Susan Alvis, and Betty Davis. Norma Overbay received the rank of frog.

Daily Recipe

APRICOT BATTER PUDDING

1 1-2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1-2 cup sugar
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-2 cup milk
1 egg
1-4 cup shortening
1 1-2 to 2 cups stewed apricots

Sift the flour with the baking powder. Cream the shortening; add the sugar, salt and the egg, well beaten; then add the milk and the flour alternately.

Place a thick layer of stewed apricots in the bottom of a greased baking dish and pour the cottage pudding batter over it. Bake in a moderate oven for about thirty minutes. Use any fresh or canned fruit that is not too juicy, or dried fruit that has been soaked.

Curly Sculptured; Set Off Hat

Here is an arrangement of curls, somewhat sculptured in line, that sets off the large "Merry Widow" sailor. No short ends nor sausage curls are allowed to straggle about the neck. The hair is cut slightly longer on one side, the ends drawn across the back of the head to finish in a cluster of flat curls.

Rose Growers Waging Annual War Against Plant Disease

Rose lovers now are starting to wage their annual war against plant diseases and destructive pests which destroy bushes during the summer months. Brown canker, mildew, black spot and leaf-eating insects now are making their appearance in gardens which have not received the attention necessary to prevent fungous diseases and insects, and it is vital to the welfare of the plants that a definite campaign be waged to overcome and control these evils.

Black spot, which is undoubtedly the most destructive of rose diseases, affects almost all varieties. Black circular spots appear on the leaves, which turn yellow and drop off. Vitality of the plant is weakened and often winter killing results.

Brown canker attacks the canes of roses, and causes a reddish, circular spots which frequently girdle canes, causing death of distal portions.

Mildew causes grayish white spots to appear on leaves, shoots and buds, resulting in stunted growth and malformed buds.

Numerous studies for the control of plant diseases and destructive pests have been made from time to time, and many mixtures now are available.

One of the most recent is a chemical dust made of manganese arsenate and other materials, which is at once a fungicide and insecticide. Exhaustive tests are said to have shown the high efficiency of the dust in the control of black spot, brown canker and mildew, and also most leaf-eating insects and the red spider, as well, without deposits of prominent residues on the foliage or flowers.

One of the necessary points to be remembered, however, in successful combating of diseases, is the collecting and burning of all dead leaves which fall to the ground. No diseased leaves should be allowed to remain in the rose beds.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

This column attempts to hold a mirror up to the passing panorama of life. Do your bit by writing your letter. Adverse opinions are as welcome as agreement.

Dear Jane Jordan—I read Bitter Pill's letter and little as I think of him for what he said about punching women in the nose, I almost agree with him on some things. When a girl goes the limit with her sweetheart, she lessens her chance to marry him. I have asked dozens of fellows if they would marry such a girl, and all except one said they would not.

When I asked their reasons, most of them said, "If a girl has relations with me, how do I know that she doesn't do the same with other fellows?"

Nothing is more disappointing to a young man who loves a girl and intends to marry her for her to submit to him beforehand. What I have told you is true, and if you want to pass it on to the girls, you can do so. To put it plain, we men just aren't as big as some of you women think we are.

Answer—I firmly believe that this letter represents the viewpoint of the average man, and that it should be read and pondered by every girl. Men look to women for the virtues which they do not practice themselves, and are disappointed bitterly when they do not find them.

This is not the first time I've had to confess that even when he brought the most pressure to bear he was hoping against hope that his idol would not fall off her pedestal. Even when he establishes a relation with the girl he loves without benefit of clergy, he wishes it might be otherwise, as the next letter will show.

Dear Jane Jordan—I agree with Bitter Pill to a certain extent. He has the right idea as far as most girls are concerned. Once they are possessed of the experienced body, their moral character deteriorates so fast that it is but a short time until they are little more than scum. But here is one exception.

I am engaged to a girl. We will be married as soon as I can get a job. But that hasn't hindered us from having relations. We had many, many discussions first. She was against it, of course. I was for it. I won. I love the girl more now than ever and couldn't respect her more if we were married legally.

We realize we are ethically wrong, but what of it? How many people in this world adhere strictly to a standard code of ethics? My future wife and myself are responsible for our actions and will take the consequences, good or bad, accordingly.

Answer—To scold you now would be like locking the stable after the horse was stolen. Those who object to unions before marriage would be wiser to attack the present economic system which makes it impossible for couples to marry young. Couples in love will not always heed the stolid command, "Grin and bear it," but I am convinced that if you can show them how then can afford to get married, they willingly and gladly will engage in lasting ties. A letter situation.

Dear Jane Jordan—There are enough young people being ruined without being patted on the back for it by you. Those who want encouragement in the thing will stand by you, but there are others who agree with Railroad Man.

A MOTHER.

Answer—I neither condemn nor condone the young. I merely listen. They exist upon the right to make their own mistakes in spite of you and me. Opposition only makes them stubborn.

Dear Jane Jordan—Tell Bitter Pill that if boys would be as decent as they want their wives to be, there would be plenty of decent women.

WIZZY BLONDE.

Answer—it is very confusing to a girl to be violently pursued, coaxed, cajoled and courted by her suitor until he gets what he wants, only to be just as suddenly dropped and deserted afterward. Women in love try not to be themselves, but the woman the lower hopes to find in them, but they are misled hopelessly by such contradictory behavior.

Dear Jane Jordan—Tell Bitter Pill for me that an experienced body does not always mean a flimsy mind.

RED HEAD.

Answer—Sometimes the most purring minds are found in puritan bodies.

Dear Jane Jordan—Your philosophy is as far from mine as the north pole is from the south. Nevertheless, I look on you as being a really good sport. It gave me great satisfaction to read Bitter Pill's letter. Three cheers for him.

I. O. D.

Answer—Ditto, I. O. D. With Voltaire let us say, "I do not agree with one word that you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." Write again!

Electric Hearing Device Revolutionizes Life for Deaf; Thousands Helped

Inconspicuous Mechanism Gives Clear, Distinct Sound for Afflicted Persons; Showing at Robinson Optical Co.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

LESS than a year ago, Dr. Hugo Lieber of New York, added to his other L distinctions a revolutionary gift to the deaf people of the world. On Oct. 31, 1932, Sonotone, a device for hearing with bone-conduction technique, first was introduced to the public.

In principle, the device dates back to the days of Beethoven, who placed a stick in his mouth and rested it upon the keyboard of a piano, so he could hear the notes. Dr. Lieber, a former associate of Mme. Curie, is credited with first bringing radium and x-ray to this country. For the past ten years he has been interested in the perfection of auditory aids, and finally completed his inventions in the Sonotone.

Formerly, hearing aids were based on forcing intensified sound waves through the impaired outer ear. This method usually resulted in distorted sounds. Dr. Lieber's device detours the sound around the outer ear directly to the internal hearing organs, clearly and distinctly, without strain.

It is practical in many cases of catarrhal deafness, and in deafness caused by any weakness except that of nerve deafness, where the auditory nerve is damaged.

Unlike many other hearing aids, Sonotone is not conspicuous. A small device fits over the bones behind the ears. To this is attached a small covered wire, which can be worn beneath the clothing, where it is fastened to a small metallic box. A microphone, similar in size and design to a case for spectacles, can be concealed easily, too. An amplifier can set the sound waves up to a greater degree of intensity.

Children Hear First Music

SPECIAL demonstrations of the Sonotone have been made in institutions throughout the country.

It brought the voice of Knute Rockne, former coach of Notre Dame's football team, to children in St. Francis school, Milwaukee, in one of the first demonstrations. A phonograph record of Rockne instructing his team between halves of an exciting game was used for the demonstration.

A similar demonstration in St. John's institute for Deaf Mutes in Milwaukee, conducted by Dan D. Halpin, assistant to Dr. Lieber, brought to some of the children the thrill of band music for the first time.

In the office of the engineering societies, in New York, fifty prominent persons, many of them women, listened to a lecture and musical recital when the Sonotone was being introduced for the first time to the public. In the audience were adults who until this time never had heard.

Dr. Lieber estimates that approximately 14,000,000 people in the United States partially are deaf. Of these, nearly 5,000,000 people in the hear at all without aid of mechanical helps. It is this number that he hopes to aid with his invention. About 20 per cent of the deaf, Dr. Lieber says, have no bone conductivity, and can not be aided by the Sonotone.

The machine is being demonstrated at the Robinson Optical Company.

Enamel Compacts Distinctive

SUMMER has brought distinctive enamel compacts and cigaret cases, being shown at Charles Mayer's. The compacts, intended to be used with the popular piques this season, are made of enamel designed to look like pique. They are in bright summer colors, and white.

Cigaret cases, which will hold a half pack, are of white and colored enamel, with broken silhouettes of a girl and a wire-haired terrier. Cigarets are extracted when halves of the case slide apart.

Mitten Removes Superfluous Hair

"VELVET MITTEN" is a new hair remover, shown in a special demonstration at L. S. Ayres and Company. It is a small mitten, which fits over the hand, and removes superfluous hair when rubbed in a circular way over the skin.

The mitten is covered with carborundum, a diamond dust, similar to that used by dentists in removing film from the teeth.

One mitten furnishes twelve treatments. The mitten
