

Women Golfers to Pit Ability Against Men in Mixed Tourney at Club

Unusual Foursome Combinations Will Be Feature of Annual Championship Matches at Highland.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

PLAYERS in the twelfth annual Indiana women's championship tournament at Highland Golf and Country Club the week of July 24 will have no qualms about their ability. To prove their confidence, they will pair with reputedly superior masculine players in mixed foursomes.

These women aren't selecting resigned husbands or secretly condoling friends as partners. They're not ashamed of their golf—and they are justified in their stand. In case any of their friends are doubtful about the pleasure of playing with a woman, here's an opportunity to quell fears of boredom.

This feature match will be held the afternoon of the fourth day's play. Once before in the early history of the club, a similar match was held.

Mrs. C. H. McCaskey, one of the veteran players, can make a match interesting for any man; there's no doubting about her style of play. She has asked Max Buell to pair with her.

That is an ambitious gesture. Buell, being champion of the Indianapolis District Golf Association and of Highland, doesn't portend a one-sided match to her. She means to provide the element of competition.

Harrison Bennett, who is vice-president of the association, will match up with Frank Kissel, while Mrs. H. L. Cooper of South Bend, president, will "borrow" Mr. Bennett as her partner.

Other women are inviting their partners, who can be any one they choose to ask. It seems probable that some of the champion players will have wary partners. Think of the ignominy of going down to defeat at a woman's hand.

Mrs. C. A. Jaqua, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Bennett, both of Highland Golf and Country Club, frequently have been shopping together during the spring and summer, purchasing prizes for the winners in the various flights.

Mrs. Cooper and Miss Mary Livengood, both of South Bend, have visited Highland to confer with the two local officers, making preparations for the five-day event. Miss Livengood is secretary-treasurer.

Local hostesses will give informal entertainments for the visiting players, and the week's activities will open with the annual tournament dinner at the clubhouse. Every day, buffet lunches will be served by the club.

A new generation will be out to fight for the title. What they lack in experience, they will replace with tenacity and youthful confidence. Miss Alice Belle English of Lafayette, who will enter after playing recently in the Western District tournament, and Miss Dorothy Gustafson of South Bend, will threaten the reign of former champions.

Indianapolis will provide several youthful players who yearly improve their game. Misses Frances Kottman, Helen Mattice and Dorothy Ellis will be entered again. Miss Clarabel Davidson will play in her first state tournament, having made a creditable showing in this year's city tournament.
