

Past Aped by Modern Gentleman

He's Just Throwback to Knighthood Days of Old.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN Times Woman's Page Editor

I FELT inquiring and imperious today—like asking a man a question he couldn't answer, or assuming the privilege of being Dutchman-like in an argument. And I started out impelled by such provoking intentions.

I wearied myself, clashing my ideas with masculine determination. There's really not so much fun in having the last word, when you have to wear yourself to a frazzle to hush up your opponent. It's something of an effort to keep yourself composed, to remain cool and unperturbed. It's so easy to become blustering and heated.

So I gave up being argumentative and head-headed. I tried to assume an intelligent interest in knowing the why of things. I met a friend who is fastidiously correct. His attentions make you feel important being a woman. So chivalrous is he in manners that you feel a little apart from the general run of things—like being put on a pedestal and handled with solicitude care.

Remember, I still felt imperious, despite the fact I enjoyed a little knightly attention. So I sweetly approached him, "I wonder why men ever began tipping their hats?" I secretly thought of the disillusioning effect of the age-sign bared by this courtly custom.

He graciously replied, "It began back in the days of chivalry, when you had reason to suspect the intentions of every passerby. As a knight, I would have saluted to show my hand was unarmed and my feelings were friendly."

Was I taken aback? I had no idea he would have such a ready reply. So I went on, "Why do you stand up when a woman enters?" "That, too, has come to us from those days of adventure and romance," he suavely told me. "A woman in her voluminous riding habits needed aid to dismount from her horse. So young squires jumped up to her assistance and landed her safely on her dainty feet." I was seething inwardly. Had I been put in my place? He went on, "Did you know that the stiff shirt of our formal dress apes the armor of the knight? And the two buttons at the back of the swallow-tail coat recall the fastening of the sword belt."

What a romantic idea, I thought. I always had considered men's dress so conventional in their unchanging style. Now my imagination will wing its way back to those medieval days.

Never again will I note the bulging of the shirt front; I'll see a knightly figure, brave and stalwart and dazlingly encased in its gleaming coat of mail. I forgot my original intent. I became a rapt listener. I began to envy a man's privilege of aping the knight. I realized the futility of trying to act like a princess. How long would I stay on a horse, riding in the side-saddle fashion? How long would I escape the ridicule of my friends if I became coy and medieval-minded?

Deserves Word of Praise I began to look admiringly at my friend. "You deserve a word of praise. I'd like to put you before my readers," I changed my tone of voice questioning to one of coaxing warmth. "I need a story. So I have to tell you about him anonymously. He may have had an idea of self-protection. After all, he's eligible, and my story tells his attraction."

Hollywood Goes Plaid Colorful Summer Outfits Are Worn

Judith Allen

HOLLYWOOD, July 12.—Scotch plaids add zest to the colorful summer look these days. For a travel outfit, Judith Allen wears a gray red, blue, black, beige and white plaid blouse with a beige corduroy suit. The sleeves are very cute, long and tight, with little flounces clear around them at the armholes, over the tight sleeves. The neck is high, with an Ascot tie.

Maureen O'Sullivan, having a short vacation at Catalina island, wears a two-piece blue and white plaid gingham beach outfit with a gingham sailor cap. The Yellow Kid had nothing on Sylvia Sydney, lunching at the Roosevelt hotel with B. P. Schulberg. Sylvia was all in yellow—yellow plaid dress, of woven material, yellow linen broad-brimmed hat, yellow tie, yellow seashell belt and pumps.

Elizabeth Young, newcomer in Hollywood, wears a red, green and white quilted plaid gingham jacket over white tailored pique sports dresses, on the Paramount lot. The jacket is a very short sweater one.

Dancing at the Coconut Grove with Robert Young, Muriel Evans wears a very smart, novelty linen evening dress, white plaid with narrow lines of grass green, lipstick red and black. It had a halter strap neckline, backless beneath it. And a trim jacket of white linen with lapels of the plaid, over it.

Kay Francis, with her husband Kenneth McKenna, at Alice Brady's, wore an amusing gray plaid suit with a very summery blouse of white organdy.

CHURCH GROUP WILL SPONSOR DANCE

Miss Virginia Moran is chairman of the dance to be held Friday night by the young people's group of St. Philip Neri Church.

The affair is in connection with the lawn party scheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday on the school grounds.

Altar Society is holding a fish fry Friday night and a supper Saturday night with Mrs. Charles B. Lines in charge. Holy Name Society, headed by John McAllen, is in charge of booths. Boys' club and the St. Philip A. C. are in charge of the refreshments.

Party to Be Sunday

Mrs. E. E. McFerrin, 7939 White River drive, will be hostess Sunday for a swimming, breakfast and bridge party with members of the Woman's Athletic Club as guests. Misses Anna Forberger, Naomi Fike and Lillian Nieman will assist the hostess.

Wedding of City Girl Is Solemnized

Miss Elizabeth Hereth Is Married In Church Rite.

Within the intimacy of a family group at high noon today, Miss Elizabeth Marie Hereth and Edward Robert McKinley of Cleveland, exchanged nuptial vows, with Dr. John G. Benson of Second Presbyterian church officiating in an Episcopal ceremony.

The home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grant Hereth, 4508 Broadway, was decorated simply for the ceremony, which was followed by a wedding breakfast.

The bride's attendants were her sister, Mrs. Gaylord Barton Millikan, and Mrs. Francis J. Feeney. Mrs. Millikan's gown was of French blue crepe, the sleeves falling in capes over the shoulders. The gown was accented with a shoulder spray of gardenias. Mrs. Feeney wore a pastel printed chiffon gown and a spray of gardenias. Mr. Feeney attended the bridegroom.

Gown of Navy Blue

The bride wore a navy blue mouseline de soie gown, fashioned on princess lines. The short fitted jacket was trimmed with wide white pique revers, with which was worn a shoulder corsage of white orchids. Mrs. Hereth chose a peach colored chiffon ensemble and a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley. At the wedding breakfast, the centerpiece of the table was of calla lilies, and appointments were in white and silver.

Leave for Cleveland

The couple left for Cleveland where they will live at the Lake Shore hotel. Mrs. McKinley recalled the navy blue and white color scheme in her crepe going-away dress. With it she wore a light gray lapin jacket. The bride is a graduate of Tudor Hall and Smith college and is a member of the Indianapolis Junior League. The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Robert McKinley of Newburgh, N. Y., is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

Write to Jane Jordan, who will answer the questions that puzzle you, most, in this column.

Dear Jane Jordan—I went steady with a boy for several years and during this time we became of the indecent type. I do not hold myself entirely to blame, because my mother and dad would permit me to have company only at home and we got tired of holding hands and had to do something else for amusement. We found out that we couldn't get along and so we split up.

Recently, a clean, honest, decent boy has fallen in love with me and has been talking about the future, but I never have committed myself either way. One of these days he is going to ask me all about this other affair. No one knows for sure, as we never were caught, and neither of us ever told.

I always have been very strict since. I read your column daily and no words could express how much you have helped me. I remain.

STILL PAYING FOR MY SIN.

Answer—The kindest thing you can do for the young man is to protect him from the truth. I have asked innumerable young men what they prefer, and the answer would be in such a situation, and the majority have admitted that they rather would not know.

Had you been promiscuous and unscrupulous, I should hate to see the young man deceived, but one mistake in love is powerless to make a good girl bad.

On the contrary, you have swung to the opposite extreme, and become more strict in guarding your conduct, instead of less so. Therefore, he would run no risk in marrying you.

Intellectually, the young man probably would agree that the experience had done you no damage, but emotionally he would suffer a revelation difficult or impossible to control.

If he knows anything, you have a chance to make him supremely happy, as long as you both may live. If you tell him, you bring a great deal of useless pain into his life. Your situation is not unique. Many a model wife and mother hides a similar secret in her heart which hurts no one but herself. The most striking point in your letter is revealed in the straightforwardness of your father and mother, who thought to protect you in cutting off your activities and keeping you at home, where you were "safe."

Dear Jane Jordan—I am eighteen. I enjoy dancing, swimming, tennis, skating, etc., very much. My parents are very good to me, but they do not want me to have boy friends. They believe in careers for women. They want me to go to college and are afraid the boy friends might interfere with my studies.

Answer—When a young man falls in love with an older woman, it usually is because he is afraid to compete for girls his own age. With his experience with the older woman he quickly gains confidence and deserts her for some one closer to his own age.

Since this is an almost inevitable conclusion to the love of a mature woman for a youth, wouldn't it be wiser for you to wait for somebody else?

DIXIE.

Six Million-Mile Test Is Given Blowout-Proof Tires Sold at Sears Co.

Flexible Fabric Construction Adds to Mileage, Reduces Cost of Motoring, Is Claim of Manufacturer.

SIX million miles of testing was necessary before the Sears, Roebuck stores placed on the market the Allstate tires they manufacture as blow-out proof. The tests were made on the proving grounds at Akron, O., where not a single tire was found to fail. The new tires are made with a Superlastic cord, shielded by intra-woven shock breakers.

Because they have from 25 to 30 per cent more stretch than tires of ordinary make, and are manufactured of a more flexible fabric, they give on striking bumps, instead of blowing out. For the last three years, the Sears, Roebuck company has been the largest dealer in replacement tires in the country. It has been estimated that one out of every eight drivers replace the original tires on his car with Allstate tires. The new construction is covered by patents held by the manufacturers, and is unique with the Sears, Roebuck company.

The six million miles of testing recently completed followed other spectacular tests made in previous years for the tires. Last year, Professor Phil C. Huntly, of the Armour Institute of Technology, at Chicago, conducted a test for the Sears, Roebuck company, to determine the value of the tires in mileage, in comparison to the money spent for them.

Ten cars were equipped with various makes of nationally known, first line tires, among them Allstate tires. These cars were driven by relays of relief drivers, until the desired mileage was reached. During the test they were subjected to the most minute inspection, and were inter-changed on the cars, so that all received the same kind of travel. They were used on all kinds of roads, from Maine to the deserts of Arizona and Mexico.

Mileage Average Boosted

At the end of the test, Professor Huntly showed figures, according to the Sears, Roebuck company, which showed that the Allstate tires gave more miles of service to the dollar of customer's cost than any other. The average reached was 4,089 miles to the dollar.

A later test, made by "Cannonball" Baker, for the local Sears store, was between Indianapolis and French Lick. Baker equipped a Graham Paige "Blue Streak" with Allstate tires, obtained from the Indianapolis store. He drove the car from Indianapolis to French Lick, breaking his own record for speed.

His recommendation for the tires was that in his opinion they clung to the curves better than did other makes.
