

Golf Still Has Thrills for Woman Player With Sixty-Three Years Past

Mrs. A. A. McClamroch Admits Age Takes Toll of Scores, but Does Not Dull Interest.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

ADMITTING unhesitatingly to 63 years of age necessarily doesn't label Mrs. A. A. McClamroch of Frankfort a wonder of the feminine clan. It's distinctly in her favor, for it undisputedly dubs her Indiana's dean of women golfers.

But she isn't any dub. She's participated in every state tournament since organization of the Indiana Women's Golf Association in 1921, and with the exception of two tournaments has qualified in the championship flight. She tied off again this morning in the twelfth annual title battle at Highland.

She's Auntie to her niece, Miss Mary Gorham, of Frankfort, and she's Auntie to all her friends at Highland Golf and Country Club, where she and Miss Gorham are members. Every Friday she motors to Indianapolis with Miss Gorham to play in the regular women's play at Highland.

It sometimes takes Auntie's steady influence to calm a young opponent. She's always out to win, of course, but she likes to see the youngsters prove their stamina under press of competition. So it's she who soothes their disturbed nerves.

Auntie never gives up without a fight. But when she loses, she's the first to congratulate her opponent. "She's a real sport," her golfing friends say. "We like to play with her because she's always friendly and never too engrossed in her play for a smiling greeting."

They add:
Mrs. McClamroch deserted the tennis courts in 1912 to become one of few women golfers. "My play was mostly with the men, who were unfailingly courteous and interested in my game," recalls Mrs. McClamroch.

She has gone through all the fashion changes, which have their telling effects upon the quality of play. She remembers the bother of voluminous skirts, the discomfort of tight ones, and the hampering of mutton chop sleeves.

As she sees the freedom of the sun-bath styles now, she can remember the day when the collar of her golf dress buttoned to her chin. "Of course, there was that period when women made themselves look ridiculous in knickers," Mrs. McClamroch remembered.

Predicts Low Score
Mrs. McClamroch has seen the qualifying scores decrease from 96 to 81, a record held by Elizabeth Abbott, now in California. She predicts that a score in the low nineties will be required for this year's championship flight.

"On the other hand the top-notchers may not play up to their game, and the also-rans may exceed their fondest expectations. Such is the life of a golfer," Mrs. McClamroch said.

Mrs. McClamroch recalls among the veteran players Miss Helen Benbridge of Terre Haute, Mrs. Ben Stevenson, Mrs. Arthur Krick, Mrs. L. M. Wainwright, all of Indianapolis, Mrs. Hillis Drayer Snyder of Fort Wayne, Mrs. Robert Tinsley of Crawfordville, and Mrs. John Bixler of Lafayette.

More Clubs Enrolled
Mrs. McClamroch pointed out that in 1924 there were twelve clubs in the association and forty-four were enrolled in the state tournament. Last year there were thirty-two clubs enrolled with approximately 100 women competing for the title. In 1924 she served as secretary-treasurer and in 1925 acted as president of the association.

"The years may take their toll when it comes to scores," Mrs. McClamroch admitted. "But they can't deprive me of the thrill of the good shots made in every round of play, even if the other fellow makes them. I'll never forget the contacts and associations I've made in the state through my participation in the tournaments."

And the state golfers won't ever forget Auntie.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

When you write your letter to Jane Jordan, please tell enough of the details to make the problem clear. If the first answer is not satisfactory, write again!

Dear Jane Jordan—Some of the things you say surely make me mad at times. For instance, here a while back, you said that if a woman lived with her husband when he was running around with other women, that she wasn't any better than a prostitute. Don't you think that when a woman keeps a clean house, cooks, washes and takes care of her children that she at least is entitled to a place to sleep and something to eat?

I wrote you before, and what did you say? That I would have to put up with my husband's chasing around until I was able to take care of my children. Don't you think it is a husband's place as much as a wife's to see that children have a home? No, you don't seem to. You think all the sacrifice must lie on the wife's side.

Answer—I do not remember the details of your problem, but I am sure I never compared you with a prostitute. There are childless women, not in love with their husbands, who exchange sex service for support. I often have referred to this state of affairs as legalized prostitution. But surely a hard-working woman like yourself does not come under such classification.

I do think that the husband should share the responsibility of the children equally with his wife, but I do not know how to make him do it. It often has been said the poor man's divorce is desertion. Where the father has no property which can be divided by the court, the mother dreads not risk divorce unless she can take care of the children herself.

To cut the father loose from his ties is to give him opportunity to disappear, leaving the mother stranded with the children. This, of course, is a very wrong state of affairs, but I am powerless to change it.

There is another question in your letter to which you say you can find no answer. If you will send a self-addressed and stamped envelope, I will tell you what to do.

Dear Jane Jordan—I have been married fourteen years and have one child. I always have been very nervous, though I am not the neurotic type. I shoulder my responsibilities and do all my work, even though I do have a delicate constitution.

I realize that a nervous person is different and does not have the bearing and poise of a normal person, but lately my husband chooses to call me insane when we have any trouble. I don't feel like it is true and, if it were, would it do any good to taunt me with it? It just hurts my feelings terribly. What attitude should I take to make him have more respect for me?

Answer—If I knew what it was that you do when your husband calls you insane, it would throw more light on your problem. Furthermore, if I knew what made you nervous I could be of more assistance.

I think it would be worth the investment for you to go to a good general diagnostician and see if there is any organic cause for your nervousness. If there is, his advice will be more valuable than mine.

Often a case of so-called "nerves" has nothing in the world to do with organic disease of the nervous system. It simply means that the personality is not equal to the strains and stresses that are placed upon it.

Miss Hahn to Be Bride
Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Hahn, 928 East Maple road, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Evelyn Hahn, to Sidney M. Hahn, son of Mrs. Louis Peysey of New York. The wedding is to take place in the fall.

Daily Recipe
FROZEN PUDDING
1-2 cup currants
1 cup canned red cherries, cut fine
1-2 cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Pinch of salt
1 tall can evaporated milk
1-2 cup finely chopped pecans
Pick over currants and wash well in warm water. Drain and mix with the cherries. Add sugar, lemon juice and salt, and let stand in a cold place twenty minutes stirring occasionally to dissolve the sugar. Add the milk and nuts. Freeze. Yield: One quart.
Hand turned ice creams are the expert's choice. No gritty ice particles, because the evaporated milk has been homogenized, as the best commercial ice cream mixtures are, and the freezer paddle beats air in, while the freezing progresses.

These days there's no cause for a smart woman to step out of the fashion parade because she has gained a few unwelcome pounds and has stopped counting her birthdays.

It just is time for her to get an entirely new point of view about dressing. There's a special sort of chic for the mature type and as soon as she learns it, she probably will be more stunning than ever.

It merely is a matter of choosing the new fashions in simple, flattering versions. This frock, for example, is perfect.

The sleeves are fashionably full, but not extreme. The neckline is designed to slenderize and the skirt makes the most of slim, straight lines.

Stunning in triple sheer crepe in soft, becoming shades such as beige, gray, green or navy, the pattern envelope gives the yardage required for all sizes in standard widths of materials. See our fashion book for a large selection of slenderizing fashions.

Pattern No. 5265 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 bust. New summer fashion book is out! Send for it—put check here ☐ and enclose 10 cents extra for book. Price for pattern, 15 cents. (Copyright, 1933, by United Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Tony Sarg of Marionette Fame Is Decorator for A. and P. Fair Exhibit

Caricature Figures of Barnyard Animals and Food Map of Entire Nation on View at Chicago Exposition.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

THE amusing cleverness of Tony Sarg has been brought to play in the decorations at the Atlantic and Pacific Carnival at the Century of Progress exposition at Chicago. The exhibit is built with an amphitheater surrounded by archways. In each of these, Sarg has placed caricature figures of cows, pigs, and other barnyard animals, made of papier mache, and lighted from within.

Sarg's marionettes perform daily at the A. & P. carnival, on a revolving stage which overlooks the boardwalk on the lake front. In 1918 he introduced for the first time an entire marionette show, and his success has made his name synonymous with entertainment of this kind.

Entertaining alternately with the marionettes are the A. & P. Gypsies, radio performers, who provide concerts and music for tea dances on the boardwalk. Refreshments are served between shows.

The famous "food map," painted by Louis Fancher, one of the foremost poster artists of the country, also holds a place of interest in the carnival. Measuring twelve by sixteen feet, the map represents not only the distinctive and amusing artistry of Fancher, but six months of research work through the archives of the department of agriculture. Although they desired to tell the magic story of food, and the part which each of the forty-eight states plays in stocking the nation's larder, executives of the A. & P. company did not wish to do this with drab statistics.

Suggests Statistics and "Idioties"
When they approached Fancher with a request to tell the story in an amusing way, Fancher said:
"Combine a few statistics with a few idioties."
Commissioned to paint the poster-map Fancher designed it, state by state, in eleven brilliant colors, with scintillating fishes, sad-faced crows eating corn, cowboys lassoing galloping cows, and dorkies eating water-melons of a size that exists only in darkies' dreams.

When the forty-eight maps were completed, with the statistics for each state inconspicuously included, they were fitted together, and the huge map photographed. It was reproduced in bright lithographed colors. The map was reduced to three by four feet in size, and put through an edition of 50,000 copies, almost all of which were sent by request to schools and government departments. The Italian minister at Washington asked for one for the library of Pisa. Other copies were sent to other great libraries of the world, including those at Vienna, Edinburgh, Algiers, Berlin, and Jerusalem.

Senator Arthur Capper, chairman of the senate committee on agriculture, brought one to his offices, and copies were obtained by the departments of agriculture and commerce, the senate committee on wild life resources, and by individual members of congress.

Now a second edition of 50,000 has been printed, to provide maps for the visitors at the carnival.

Fancher has been mentioned in several advertising art annuals, and has been the winner of prizes for poster work which he did for the Cunard steamship lines.
