

Varied Woes Come to End at Book Shop

From Vest Buttons to Headache Remedy, the Zinkins Serve.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

"CAN'T you help a neglected man in distress?" implores a fastidious man with a button-minus vest.

"Ow-w-w," groans a young-man-about town, "If you'll only give me something for this headache, I'll swear off parties today."

"What am I to do?" wails a young matron. "I left my purse at home, and I haven't any money."

The telephone rings. "Your husband, why, he should be at the So-and-So Club."

And so—on and on through the day Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Zinkin of the Meridian bookshop listen to the appeals of his clientele. And they answer them, too. Mrs. Zinkin gets her needle out. She hurries to the aspirin box. She charges a loan to the young matron's account.

"We're a clearing house for those in need. We settle their woes and balance their day. Why should any one be disgruntled the rest of the day because of a missing button? queries Mrs. Zinkin as she sits in her shop, ready to chat with any one with the time and inclination.

Many Call Regularly

Hardly a day goes by that Alex Vonnegut doesn't stop in for tea in the afternoon or coffee in the morning. "If he doesn't come, we call to see what has happened to him," explained Mrs. Zinkin.

Henry Davis browses around, looking for another first edition to add to his collection. Hicks Conrad dashes across the street from his office for a few minutes of relaxation or discussion.

Mrs. Robert Tyndall and Mrs. Lee Burns pause during an afternoon of shopping. Elmer Taftlinger corners Mr. Zinkin to talk about pictures. Young Jim and Pete Daggett drop in and join a game of intelligence test.

"We know the habits of our customers. We receive messages for them from their offices. We can locate many of them most any hour of the day," continued Mrs. Zinkin.

For a Sad Movie

"We met a unique emergency the other day," she laughed. "A young matron was headed for a movie, reputedly sad. She'd forgotten a fresh handkerchief. We relieved her plight with a handful of tissue kerchiefs."

In the winter months Booth Tarkington is one of the regular visitors. R. E. Spencer, the young weather-man author, is one of the faithful followers of the Zinkins. Meredith Nicholson continues his habit of calling, which he began when the shop was located in the Spink-Arms.

The coffee and tea idea is Mr. Zinkin's. He must have his, so he shares it with his friends. He'll leave early in the fall for New Hampshire to see if "this tree" is still there.

Any trouble? From a shiny nose to a "hole in the heel?" Just signal your distress to the Zinkins, and your faith in luck is renewed.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

If you need a sympathetic listener, write your problems to Jane Jordan. If one letter does not suffice, write as many as you need to. Your answers will appear in this column.

Dear Jane Jordan—Last September my husband and I separated. After we quarreled and he had left, he came back each week-end and asked me to go back to him. I'd always say no. Then I met a man whose wife was one of my dearest friends. He and she had separated. One day he asked me for a date. I took it after he promised me that they were through. That was three months ago, and in that time we were perfectly happy. I fell desperately in love with him.

Today she writes and tells him she loves him, and that she and the children need him. I am afraid his pity or heart one are going weak again. He tells me he never loved her, only pitied her, and that he loves no one but me. But since last week when he went to see her, he has been a bit cold. He says it's due to trouble.

We have been fussing the last few weeks. Could that be it, or is it he is in love with her and infatuated with me? Anyway, please tell me what to do. I feel that if I don't get relief, I'll go insane.

Answer—It has been said that the person on the verge of divorce lives in a situation that pulls both ways. There are horses before and behind the cart, and they are pulling in opposite directions. Your love

Even after people have separated they find considerable difficulty in wrenching their lives apart. Mutual concern over children provides a constant renewal of the link. Remnants of the old love continuously arise to prevent complete transfer to another.

It sometimes happens that a man who has loved many women after he left his wife, for whom he believed affection to be dead, may be astounded by a recrudescence of love for the discarded mate. That is not to say that his reunion with her will be successful, for it is difficult to mend a broken marriage. The elements which caused the break are, as a rule, still present and lead to other conflicts.

In separating from your mates, each of you face the necessity of finding a substitute for your affections. The emotional confusion of the moment nearly always prevents people from making a wise choice. The rebound phenomena which makes a second affair seem so imperative, frequently leads the lonely into further mistakes.

Your mutual need for a new love object has involved you both in a bad situation, too complex for easy solution. You are a strong and generous person who will put no pressure on the man, but leave him free to resolve his conflicts in the way that seems best for him.

You may be faced with another uprooting process and struggle to reorganize your own life without including him. This will not be easy. If it steadies you at all to write out the development of your problem, I shall be glad to follow it with you in your letters.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am a girl of 18, married to a fine boy of 21. I knew when I married him that I was in love with a man much older than myself. Realizing the objections of my family to the older man, I chose the younger one. We do not get along, and I admit I am more than half to blame. I can not treat my husband as though I really love him when I don't.

I see the older man almost every day, as we both work in the same building. After he heard I was married, he seldom talked to me. He said he still was in love with me, but that he knew how impossible our situation was.

I have not been living with my husband for about two weeks. I am much more contented alone than with him. I hate to hurt him, because he does seem to be in love with me. Besides, it would break my mother's heart to think my marriage did not turn out happily. What would your advice be?

Answer—I do not believe that your trouble arises from your love for the other man so much as from a fixation upon your family. At least your love for him was not strong enough to break the habit of childish obedience. Now that you have offered yourself as a living sacrifice on the altar of parental authority, you find that you can not force yourself to go through with it.

Your only course from now on consists in being baldly honest with every one concerned. In the future, let your conduct be directed by your own judgment and not by the domination of your family.

"Coming right up" is the call of the young mermaids, Miss Martha Shirk (left) and Miss Helen Gearen (right) as they put all hands on deck waiting to be photographed.

Miss Lois Jackson believes in taking life easy as she views the surroundings from her position inside a life preserver.

These three young mermaids are taking advantage of the hot July days of Detroit. The wedding took place at the Butler university swimming pool.

Edwards-Fudge Rite Performed at Home Today

The Rev. David M. Edwards read the marriage ceremony at noon today for his daughter, Miss Lois Beth Edwards, and Roger M. Fudge of Detroit. The wedding took place at the Edwards home, 24 West Thirty-fourth street, in the presence of the immediate families and a few friends.

Mrs. John Jones of Milton was the bride's only attendant. She wore an ensemble of rose and white lace and a corsage of gardenias. Mr. Jones was best man.

The bride was in a navy blue suit with matching accessories and her flowers were a shoulder corsage of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Edwards, mother of the bride, wore beige and white chiffon.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Walter Jay of Dayton, O., Miss Margaret Wingate of Ft. Wayne, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allsbaugh and children of Logansport.

Immediately following the ceremony, luncheon was served for the bridal party and guests. A centerpiece of sweet peas was used on the luncheon table and the house was decorated with summer blooms and ferns.

Mr. and Mrs. Fudge left for a trip to Chicago and Mackinac Island and will be at home after Aug. 10, in Lansing, Mich.

The bride is a graduate of Earlham college and a member of Kappa Kappa Kappa sorority.

MUSIC GUILD HOST FOR BREAKFAST

Members of the Music guild of the White Cross center of the Methodist hospital gathered this morning for a breakfast party at Avalon Country club.

A musical program followed the breakfast and was presented by Mrs. Mary Traub Busch and her house guest, Miss McWhorter of New York. Mrs. Jane Johnson Burroughs, Mrs. Georgia Nagle, Mrs. Fred Appel and Mrs. Julius Tindler.

Hostesses were Mesdames Sherwood Blue, Harold W. Brady, Gilbert Templeton, Wood Moll, Mrs. Tindler, Mrs. Nagle, and Misses Mary Helen Borcheding and Victoria Montani.

Party at Club Monday

Another of the summer swimming, bridge and luncheon parties will be held at the Indianapolis Athletic Club Monday with Mrs. R. C. Fox in charge. Swimming will be from 9 to 9:30, and bridge from 9:30 to 12:30, when luncheon will be served.

Wives, daughters and their guests will attend the affair. Luncheon tables will be placed along the edge of the pool.

Miss Lambuth Is Bride

The marriage of Miss Mildred Lambuth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lambuth of Lafayette, and Millard Kerl, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Kerl, 1129 North Keystone avenue, took place at 7:30 Tuesday morning at the St. Boniface church in Lafayette.
