

SCHOOL OFFICES ARE CLOSED IN STUART TRIBUTE

Last Rites Held Today at Central Avenue M. E. for Educator.

Offices of the board of school commissioners are to be closed today from 1:30 to 3:30. Arsenal Technical high school offices are closed all day, and activities in Indianapolis libraries halt for one minute at 2 in tribute to Milo H. Stuart. Mr. Stuart's funeral services were to be held at 2 this afternoon in Central Avenue M. E. church.

Mr. Stuart was assistant superintendent of Indianapolis schools in charge of secondary education and first principal of Arsenal Technical high school. He died Monday in the Methodist hospital, after an illness of five weeks, following an operation.

The body will be taken to Sheridan, his birthplace, for burial. Pallbearers include K. V. Ammerman, principal of Broad Ripple high school; De Witt S. Morgan, principal of Technical high school; Hanson H. Anderson, Edward E. Greene, Virgil Steinbaugh and Harry E. Wood.

Dickson Rites Thursday
Funeral services for Mrs. Bertha Dickson, 78, who died Monday at her summer home in Minocqua, Wis., will be held at 11 Thursday in Flatner and Buchanan mortuary, with the Rev. F. R. Davies, pastor of Zion Evangelical church, in charge. Burial will be in Crown Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Dickson was born in Indianapolis. She was the widow of George A. Dickson, and the mother of Fred C. Dickson, president of the Indiana Trust Company.

Mrs. Froelich Dies
Private funeral services at 8 tonight are to be held in the Krieger funeral home for Mrs. Mathilde Froelich, who died Thursday at the home of her sister, Miss Rose Webb, 1920 North Meridian street. The body will be taken to Cincinnati for burial.

Mrs. Froelich was born in Indianapolis. At the time of her marriage in 1895, she went to Cincinnati to make her home. Her husband, Henry P. Froelich, was a former leader of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra. He died in October.

Survivors are Miss Webb and three daughters, Mrs. Fred Livezey of Huntington, W. Va.; Mrs. George W. Stevens and Miss Esther Froelich of Richmond, W. Va.

Ex-Railroader Dies
Final services for Henry Samuel Whitehouse, 64, who died Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Minnie Glendy, Scottsburg, will be held at 10 Friday in the residence, 2410 North Gale street. Burial will be in Crown Hill cemetery.

Mr. Whitehouse was retired from the Big Four railway eight years ago. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Surviving him are Mrs. Glendy; two other daughters, Mrs. S. D. Herbert and Mrs. Abbie Ax of Indianapolis, and three sons, G. E. Whitehouse of Ontario, Cal., and Lee and Charles Whitehouse of Indianapolis.

ville dump into Henderson lake, with the resultant release via Henderson ditch of the town's wastes into the lake that borders the last Indiana home of the "Lady of the Limberlost."

The ditch resembles an open conduit in a city sewage system. Mosquitoes that would chase a bull hider there. Snake-feeders, dragon flies, skunk, over the stagnant pool near its outlet into Sylvan lake.

ONLY this year a $25,000 suit was filed by Arthur Fredericks, a farmer living along the ditch, against the city because of his loss in revenue when Kendallville's ice cream plant refused to buy milk from his cattle because of a claim that it was contaminated by the ditch.

The ditch skirts Fredericks' farm. It is a city sewage system. Mosquitoes that would chase a bull hider there. Snake-feeders, dragon flies, skunk, over the stagnant pool near its outlet into Sylvan lake.

At home the Fairbanks managed to be both honeymooners and leaders of the film colony's elite social set. All their entertaining was done at Pickfair, and their guest book held names of celebrities the world around. When they went out it was only to homes of a select few—the Swansons, the Chaplins, the Bill Harts.

NIGHT spots never saw them. Doug never drank, because he didn't particularly care for it and because he always kept in top condition for those heroic screen antics of his. Mary didn't like drinking either.

At the studio they had separate bank accounts, separate producing units. That was their common sense.

They financed their pictures from their separate personal funds. This usually was an easy matter for Mary, because she made less pretentious films.

Doug's pictures were so vast that his whole private fortune was at stake in them. He usually was "broke," or close to it, when a film was completed. He had to wait for box office receipts to get back his money.

Once Mary was "on location" at a railroad station. She telephoned Doug twice, but the third time failed to reach him. Her company hastily was returned to the studio, where the anxious movie queen was reassured by Doug that he was all right.

The refusal to be separated resulted in a motion picture "revolution." Doug balked at a location trip because Mary couldn't go along. Studio managers contrived to reproduce the location scene right on the lot.

From then on Fairbanks' crews built mountains, meadows, and gardens. Sections of ships placed in tanks were built for "The Black Pirate." For long "shots" the company went on location, but a double played Doug's part.

Other studios learned Doug saved money doing this and soon all were building more sets at home and making fewer location trips.

from it. The milk, creamery officials said, had an unpleasant odor. In a survey by the sanitary engineering division of the state health board, extending from 1928 to 1931, the following conclusions are typewritten:

"Henderson lake, Henderson ditch—Serious odor nuisances are caused, which interfere with health. Conditions are created which adversely affect use of the lake and ditch for agriculture purposes, watering live stock. Beneficial animal and vegetable life are jeopardized and the use of Henderson lake interfered with for recreational purposes."

Scavenger fish have seized Henderson lake and populated it. And yet old-timers of Kendallville, between sips of 32, relate of days when sunfish, perch, and bass fought duels there as they do now with the fishermen of Sylvan and Caine lakes.

"THE condition of Sylvan lake at Rome City," continues the state report, "bathing and lake outlet at the present time, is not materially affected by the wastes of Kendallville."

With the suggestion of the installation of a sewage disposal system for Kendallville, the survey says, "Unless remedial measures are taken . . . the unsatisfactory condition . . . will become worse as Kendallville increases in size and new industries start operation."

Kendallville surveyed for the cost of installation of a plant to prevent its city and industrial wastes from placing "for sale" signs on summer cottages of the lake resort.

Fearing an over-burdened, tax-ridden citizenry would protest the cost of the plant during the present economic stress, Kendallville postponed its cleanup day.

But the gasoline bought in the summer from Kendallville filling stations, much of the supplies purchased by summer cottagers at Rome City, are paid for from pockets of vacationers from every section of Indiana.

THEY go to Sylvan lake, the cool of its trees in Limberlost, north, to hear the throaty notes of the bob-white, to see a reel's glint in the sun arching toward a spot where some one has said, "They're biting today."

Sightseers flock to the lake to browse in the cabin of the "Lady of Limberlost." They catch a bit of her books, her spirit, in a violet that peeps near a mossy bank.

They search for the goldfinches of her stories. They learn to snap water lilies from their home without upsetting the boat, in much the same manner in which the "Lady of the Limberlost" taught her grandchildren to get those lilies.

They go to hear what she heard and what may not be heard years from now: "His waters whisper songs of cheer."

GENERAL IS STRICKEN
Japanese Dictator in Manchuria in Serious Condition.

CHANGCHUN, Manchuria, July 26—Kwantung army headquarters announced today that General Nobuyoshi Muto, Japanese ambassador to Manchouquo, commanding general and virtual dictator of Manchuria, was seriously ill of cholecystitis.

There was no hint then of a change of Doug's attitude toward Mary, or in her feelings for Doug. They still were the great lovers for many years to come.

But from the day of his brother's death, Doug was a changed man.

AUTO INJURIES CAUSE DEATH OF CITY YOUTH

Traffic Toll in County Is Raised to 67 for Year.

Death of Max Bock, 21, of 3739 Brill road, in city hospital today, from injuries incurred Saturday night in an auto crash at Meridian street and Pleasant Run boulevard, raised the county's traffic toll to sixty-seven for the year.

Bock was riding in an auto driven by Clarence Weaver, 25, of 17 West Troy avenue, which crashed into another operated by Edward A. Veach, 27, Columbus, Ind. Bock incurred a fracture of the skull and internal injuries and lost two fingers on his right hand. Following the accident, Weaver was slatted by police on charges of reckless driving and vagrancy and other charges were expected to be filed today.

Death of Bock was the second auto fatality in four days. Sergeant Clarence H. Vint, 48, of Ft. Harrison, was injured seriously Tuesday night when the car he was driving collided with a truck on State Road 67, near Forty-sixth street. The truck was operated by Ernest Wawmire, 55, Anderson, who was not hurt.

Vint, who was removed to the hospital at the fort, incurred a mangled left arm, which may have to be amputated, physicians said. Drunkenness and operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor were the charges against Vernon McConaha, 32, of 5053 East New York street, today, following his arrest Tuesday night in an automobile accident investigation.

McConaha's car, police said, collided with one driven by Raymond J. White, 42, of 3801 East Eleventh street, in the 900 block North Pennsylvania street.
