

DEATH CLAIMS JAPAN'S 'CZAR' OF MANCHOUKUO

Silent General Who Defied League of Nations III for Several Days.

By United Press
HSINKING, Manchoukuo, July 27.—General Nobuyoshi Muto, Japanese envoy to the new state of Manchoukuo and commander of the Kwantung army, died today of inflammation of the gall bladder, from which he had been ill for several days.

General Muto, by virtue of his two posts, practically was dictator of Manchoukuo. He assumed command of the Kwantung army eleven months ago. Formerly he was educational inspector-general of the Japanese army. He was 53.

Called the "silent general," Muto rose daily at 5:30 a. m., spent an hour at his desk, and rode, regardless of the weather, for an hour with his adjutant.

He started his office day promptly at 8:45 and after working hard all day retired early, refusing to attend banquets or other functions. He was extremely frugal in habits. He usually ate a 7-cent lunch in the army dining room when at Mukden.

He was little over five feet tall, but of forceful character. He spoke bluntly when necessary. To the League of Nations he said last year: "Neither the league nor any other power can change Japan's determination to pursue her established aims in Manchuria."

WALLY WILLING TO MATCH PAR WITH DIDDEL

Recreation Chief Gets Self a Manager for 'Clash of Century.'

This, folks, is the second round of the battle of the century between Glenn Diddel, local golfer, and Wally Middesworth, city recreation director.

Today, Middesworth takes the offensive.

The recreation director announced that he didn't intend to apologize to Diddel because the latter didn't receive a prize with a net score of 72 in the city employees' gold tourney ten days ago.

He also refuses to fight Diddel in any private place in a boxing match to the finish.

But, Middesworth says, he has selected Johnny Noonan, city light inspector, as his manager, and may meet Diddel in a 18 or 36-hole golf match. He didn't say whether that match will carry the $10 side bet that Diddel demanded in his challenge.

No reports came from the Diddel camp today, but it was understood that several fight promoters had their eyes on the battlers, hoping to get them to stage a public alteration with the gloves. This possibility is very remote.

Diddel contends that with his net of 72 in the Pleasant Run course tourney, he was eligible for one of the valuable prizes distributed by tournament directors.

He didn't get it, though, and wrote his challenge to Middesworth and also called the matter to the attention of Mayor Reginald H. Sullivan.

HO, HUM! CHUCK GETS ANOTHER DRUNK FINE

60-Day Jolt Suspended in Car Collision Case.

Chuck Wiggins, pugilist, tried in municipal court Wednesday on a charge of drunkenness, was fined $10 and costs and given a sixty-day suspended sentence.

Wiggins was put on probation by Dewey Myers, judge pro tem.

Wiggins was arrested after his auto struck the car of Harry Reeves, 401 Peoples Bank building, at Sixteenth street and Broadway, July 15.

Reeves refused to sign a warrant charging Wiggins with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor.

and Warren, jobs. I think Mr. Roosevelt's done a mighty fine thing, making it possible for us poor folks to get back again."

In front of one of the great furnaces Martin Rafalco, 3333 Roosevelt avenue, stripped to the waist, a paper cap set jauntily over his swarthy features, pulled sheets of red-hot steel through a roller.

"It's great for the kids to be back," he said. "and for my wife, of course. But kids kick through shoes quicker even than the steel workers on these hot floors. I've got four—Mary Elizabeth, 11; Martin Jr., 9; Harold, 7, and Leroy, 4.

"Don't ask me how we've lived in these last three years. It's been like a nightmare. If it hadn't been for relatives, we'd have been dead by now, I guess."

And those, with slight variations, are the stories of the 500 men who have come out of the slough of the depression.

The work in the steel mill is hard, but a happier human refrain swells the thunderous song of the steel industry.
