members during the depression; summer vacation Bible schools for young people, which take care of the morning hours of hundreds of children in Indianapolis for four or five weeks; splendid gymnasiums for young people; splendid classes in music for both young and old; health clinics for all; co-operation with the church named or affiliated hospitals of the city; support of vacation camps for young people, and many other services which directly meet the social service needs of the community.

The Rev. L. C. E. Packler, pastor of St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran church, East New York and Oxford streets, goes very deeply into the question of taxation. "Church property in which church services are conducted or the parsonage or church classrooms, used for church purposes, should not be taxed," Mr. Packler states.

Taxation Is Favored
"Any and all property, including vacant lots, owned by the church or in the name of the church, should be taxed," he continues. "Dormitories, hotels and office buildings held by social clubs or the like should be taxed."

That, Mr. Packler contends, will reduce some of the fifty-million non-taxable properties in this county and will place more property on the tax rolls.

The Rt. Rev. Joseph M. Francis, bishop of the Indianapolis diocese of the Episcopal church, lays much emphasis upon the "public service of the church."

"A church in the community is there not for the purpose of raising money for itself," Bishop Francis states, "but to render public service free to everybody. Its ministers are called upon to render any service within their ability."

Should Be of Service

"As long as a church is fulfilling that service, it should be free from taxation. Whether or not doing nothing for the good of the community, it should be done away with altogether or then tax it."

The figures show that the estimated Roman Catholic membership in Indianapolis is 40,000 and the estimated Protestant membership in Indianapolis and Marion county is 120,000.

The number of school children in the parochial schools of the Roman Catholic church is 6,880 in the grades and 1,767 in high schools and academies.

The report of the executive committee of the Indiana Council of Religious Education for the year 1932-1933 gives the Protestant Sunday school enrollment of Marion county at 63,976.

All Faiths Unite

The work, social and religious, done by these great schools will be considered in a special article dealing with the Bible School Cavalcade of this city and county.

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish leaders of Indianapolis have united in a movement to aid the successful operation of the National Recovery Act.

In this program, these church leaders, both national and local, not only see a "new deal" for a better religious life, but a social program of which they have dreamed for years.

This co-operation again throws much light on the question of church taxation and the common sense attitude of local church leaders.

Co-Operation Is Urged

Dr. Evans of the Church Federation has on his desk a joint statement of three great religious bodies, calling upon Catholic, Protestant and Jewish leaders of Indianapolis for "heartily co-operation of all in the successful operation of the national industrial recovery act so there may be realized the maximum social justice and economic co-operation possible."

This great forward appeal of the church, aiding to bring a better social and industrial life to Indianapolis and all other cities, is signed by three of the most important national leaders of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish churches.

This statement, the suggestions of which Dr. Evans already has put into effect, according to the church leaders, "commands interest because of its human and ethical significance and because it has incorporated into law some of the social ideals and principles for which our religious organizations have stood for years."

The church is aiding to push President Roosevelt's new deal forward to success.

The next article in this series will deal with the People's Search for God.

SPORTSMEN OF STATE JOIN IN POLLUTION WAR

Decision for Finish Fight Is Reached at Meeting of Officers.

By LEFTY LEE
Times Fishing Editor

At a meeting in Hotel Washington Tuesday night, officers and directors of the United Sportsmen of Indiana, Inc., decided to launch their battle against pollution of streams of the state. These men will wage a war against this menace with every legal weapon available.

The organization has become affiliated with the American Game Association, a national body of sportsmen that is doing a wonderful work in this field, and efforts of the United Sportsmen will be watched closely throughout the nation.

Officers present at the meeting that officially went on record to fight until the streams are free of pollution were Howard Meyer, president; Ernest Stoner, Greencastle, vice-president; Joe Waite, secretary; Lee Emmelmann, treasurer; Dr. Clarence Bock, Muncie, and James Flynn. The only method the organization has to raise these funds is by donations and memberships. The fee for one year is only 50 cents, an amount that any sportsman should pay. Those interested can enroll at any of the local sporting goods stores.

The battle of Westlake, between Art and Carl Velling, shows Art slowly pulling away, the score now standing 20 to 16. Each year these two boys stage a friendly contest to see which takes the largest number of bass.

W. W. Downard and F. W. Fancher and their wives have returned from a trip to Lake Nipissing, Ont. The party spent nine days on an island fourteen miles from the mainland. The island was five miles long and three-quarters mile wide, and had only three cottages.

Downard took two musky, one twenty-six and the other twelve pounds. Fancher's prize was a fifteen-pound northern pike. Bass and perch were the fish taken for food, and the boys returned any number of four-pound bass to the water, after taking all they wanted for food, as they had no way to carry them back.

The round trip showed 2,200 miles, but the party felt the experience was well worth the long trek, and plan a return trip next year.

COLLAPSES IN COURT

When the prosecution witness collapsed in municipal court today, Judge Dewey Myers continued until Friday the case of Leslie Todd, grocer, 2461 Northwest avenue, charged with selling tainted meat.

The prosecuting witness, Minnie Lewis, 35, Negro, 364 West Twenty-fifth street, collapsed in court during questioning of Todd. She was unconscious for fifteen minutes.

She testified that she had become ill after eating meat purchased at Todd's store. Police substantiated her charges.

She's the most fearless and reckless rider of rearing and jumping horses in the world, it is claimed by horsemen, but she's only 18 years of age.

She wins this distinction, they say, because she rides without reins, with her hands held high over her head as she clears the highest bar.

She is Dorothy Herbert, the pretty madcap of the equestrian displays with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus, coming to Indianapolis next Tuesday, and she is a star among the many star equestriennes in those impressive and exciting numbers.

Dorothy is daring and Dorothy is good to look upon, and you'll never forget her once you have seen her starting in the huge high school and jumping numbers, with their ninety expert and alluring girl riders.

CLEANING SHOP PICKET GIVEN TEN-DAY TERM

Fine of $25 and Costs Also Is Assessed in Court by Sheaffer.

A "picket" who paraded in front of a north side cleaning establishment Tuesday, bearing a banner reading, "This Cleaner Is Unfair Competition," today was fined $25 and costs, and sentenced to ten days in Marion county jail by Judge William H. Sheaffer in municipal court. Sam Misenhimer, 36, of 117 1/2

North Alabama street, said he had been employed by a stranger, who gave him the banner and $2 as his pay, to carry in front of the store, which displays an NRA sign.

The store operator insisted that he could give no reason for the action, asserting he had complied with every city code and with all provisions of the NRA.

Misenhimer, questioned by the judge, stuck fast to his story.
