

CUBANS LOCK TO 'NEW DEAL' AFTER REVOLT

Eye-Witness Gives Account of Dramatic Last Fight by Machado Forces.

avengers, repaying murder with murder, seeking to exact direct penalties for the killing of brothers, fathers, sons.

The men they hunt in many instances were assassins serving prison terms when Machado released them to turn on his political enemies.

When I stood in front of the United Press offices a week ago today and saw jubilant, peaceable, unarmed people celebrating a premature report of Machado's fall, and when later I saw them shout down coldly by police, I became convinced there was little chance for Machado.

Mourning the twenty-one dead in that massacre, the Cuban people then presented a united front against him.

The army, which supported Machado for eight years, sensed national feeling had turned definitely against him and told him to his face he had to go.

Hung on Until Last

Blinded by obvious facts, Machado hung on, dickered with American Ambassador Sumner Welles, hoping even to the last that he might put his follower General Alberto Herrera in his place.

On Saturday the populace, for four years oppressed by the police and the Porristas, heard the news of liberation and lost all restraint.

A huge crowd swept into the presidential palace. From the street I hear the sound of breaking furniture and the crash of glass as pictures were ripped from walls.

The police offered no resistance and the sackers streamed out with foodstuffs, trophies, books, silverware, tablecloths, picture frames, dishes, bric a brac, and even piano keys as souvenirs.

Some trampled the gardens, leading down to the bay, uprooting flowers, ripping little palm trees apart.

SECRET POLICE CHIEF KILLED

The streets filled rapidly as news spread. Fortunately the cafes, in observance of the general strike, were closed. Little alcoholic intoxication was apparent. It was a type of intoxication much more complete than that produced by alcohol.

I saw the killing of Colonel Antonio Jiminez, chief of Machado's dreaded Porra, on the Prado. He was the first Porrista to die and it was the signal for a hunt through the city for his men.

Just after Machado fell, Jiminez left police headquarters. The crowd spotted him. He drew his gun and opened fire. A soldier killed him.

The crowd mangled his corpse and dragged it through the street. The slayers were lifted up to shoulers like a football hero and carried at the head of a cheering mob.

Later the crowd looted and burned the plant of El Herald, the newspaper owner by Machado's secretary of state, Orestes Ferrara. Furniture, ash registers, linotypes and files were broken and scattered in the streets. The crowd impeded the firemen who put out the fire.

Barker Shop Sacked

Then I saw the sacking of the shop of Machado's barber between the Plaza hotel and the American Club.

It started when a man from the crowd walked up and broke the plate glass window with a bulgeon. He was joined by others, a mob formed and everything was smashed.

Police and soldiers, realizing the significance of the people's explosive emotions, made no effort to halt by force their degradations. Under Machado they frequently shot into the crowds.

New Cabinet Sworn In

HAVANA, Aug. 14.—Cuba's new cabinet, a coalition of the strongest leaders of the factions that overthrew Gerardo Machado, took the oath of office today in the grand salon of the presidential palace, and Cuba's "new deal" officially was inaugurated.

With the government of Carlos Manuel De Céspedes, new president, solidly entrenched, and two American warships in the harbor as a gesture of support for the new regime, confidence returned to the capital, workers went back to their tasks, and the city turned from panic and apprehension to an atmosphere of joyful relief.

Normal conditions were established throughout a greater part of Havana upon the arrival of the United States destroyers Taylor and Claxton.

Destroyers Quiet Capital

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—American Ambassador Sumner Welles in Havana reported to the state department today that the presence of two U. S. destroyers, the Taylor and Claxton, off Havana, had exercised a beneficial effect in the Cuban capital and that quiet prevailed this morning.

ARREST FATHER OF DEATH CAR SUSPECT

Alleged Move to Aid Son's Escape is Bared.

William Duthridge, 48, of 644 Collier street, father of Harold Duthridge, alleged hit and run driver, who is charged with the death of Charles O'Neil, 62 Caven street, is under arrest today for this offense.

The father is alleged to have admitted repairing his son's automobile, damaged, it is said, when the accident occurred.

Detectives said facts will be placed before the grand jury to determine if the elder Duthridge should be prosecuted on a charge of accessory after the fact.

O'Neil was hurt fatally as he waited for a street car at Hamilton avenue and Washington street, early Friday.

Ruin and Death Reign in Wake of Cuba's Frenzied Revolution

The street in front of the Havana De Cuba, the Machado-owned Havana newspaper, after the mob had sacked it, is shown in above photo, with smoke still rising and men tearing furniture apart.

The above photo made Aug. 12 at the presidential palace in Havana, shows partly wrecked building and furniture and other debris completely covering street. The Cuban revolutionary mob roamed the streets searching for members of the "La Porra," secret police of Machado, and wrecking homes and buildings belonging to followers of the deposed president.

Holding aloft the gun with which he shot and killed Colonel Antonio Jiminez, founder of the dreaded strong arm squad, Lieutenant Rogerio Perez Villalon, a soldier of the Rural Guards, is hailed as a hero by delirious supporters shown in this striking photo carrying him on their shoulders in a wild celebration through Havana streets.

The wild, hysterical spirit of the Cuban revolution is typified in this street scene in the capital. The city was a destructive, bloody carnival... Men and women—laughing, singing, cheering—parading, looting, killing... Natives in outlandish costumes... little children armed with clubs... citizens bearing crude banners... all in celebration of the downfall and flight of President Machado.

ents for the last two months. Previously, they resided at 1931 West Michigan street.

PLUG BULLET HOLES

The residence in which they live is dotted with plugged-up bullet holes, the result of a shooting several weeks ago, in which police captured a hit-and-run. Members of the family said this occurred before they moved into the house and that they did not believe it had any bearing on the threats.

The first note read: "You are warned of the death of your daughter (Mrs. Mulkey) and her four kids. It will take place this week. They will be kidnapped, too. We mean business, no fun. Your worst enemies."

The second note, received Friday night, said:

"Am telling you tonight and Saturday is your daughter's and kids' last day with you, so please be good to them. All guards in the world will do no good. We will get them, don't worry. Your enemies."

SIGNED "ENEMIES FOREVER"

Sunday's threat read: "Get your daughter's and kids' flowers all ready. The time soon will be here. Your enemies forever."

The first threatened kidnapping came on a child occurred last week, when Mr. and Mrs. Claude Marsh, were warned by a note that their 16-month-old son, Claude Robert Marsh, would be kidnapped and slain. The Marshes live at 1360 West Twenty-second street.

After receipt of the note, wood alcohol was found in the baby's milk left on a porch by a dairyman.

Saturday afternoon police were notified of three phoned threats against Jerome Webb, 3, son of Mrs. Orville Webb, 2428 Park avenue, apartment 1. Money was demanded to prevent harm to the baby.

THREE FALSE ALARM SUSPECTS ARE HELD

Police Grab Linger Trio as Thrill Seekers.

Three alleged thrill-seekers were held by police today, accused of turning in a false fire alarm.

The trio admitted pulling the alarm, said police. They were caught because they stayed at the scene of the crime just one minute too long.

Watching a dozen pieces of fire apparatus roar to false alarm at Georgia and Davidson streets, the trio started to run, after every fire engine was one the scene. It was too late then.

Patrolmen Welch and Comiskey showed up at the same time. They took in James Mescol, 18, of 928 Daly street; Harry Stock, 16, of 1630 Hovey street, and Charles Potts, 24, of 823 East Georgia street.

GOES SHOPPING, THEN ENDS LIFE

WOMAN KILLS SELF ON EVE OF 22D WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

After spending all day Saturday shopping, in preparation for her twenty-second wedding anniversary, Mrs. Anna Griffith, 44, of 3025 East Michigan street, fired a bullet into her head and died Sunday at Methodist hospital.

Mrs. Griffith had been despondent over illness and had been induced by her husband, Cecil Griffith, to spend the afternoon shopping with him, in an effort to cheer her up.

They returned home and while Griffith sat in the dining room, talking with their son, Carroll, 19, Mrs. Griffith went upstairs. Father and son heard a shot and raced upstairs to find Mrs. Griffith on the bed, a bullet wound in her forehead.

Neighbors were shocked in the Griffith home, a family of substantial citizens. Griffith collapsed after his wife died Sunday, and was in the care of a physician today.

Funeral arrangements have not been made.

RACE DRIVER IS HELD

Negro Nabbed by Cops in Auto Believed Stolen.

Joseph Copps, Negro, who says he is a Chicago race driver, is held in city jail today, because his explanations of luggage in his possession didn't satisfy police.

Driving a car with Tennessee license plates, Copps was stopped in the 600 block, Indiana avenue. Police suspect that the car is a stolen machine.

In his possession, police said, was a suitcase containing clothing and books bearing the name of Dewey Winton, Moreland, Ga., who reported to police last week that a Negro, driving a car with Tennessee license plates, had picked him up near Franklin and, nearing Indianapolis, had put him out of the car and had fled with his suitcase.

Lawrence today came assurances that their cities would be among those to enter floats and delegates in the parade.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys, who has consulted General Hugh S. Johnson and the President, requesting them to deliver speeches at the meeting on Aug. 21, had not heard from either official today.

Charles W. Chase, "general" of the local recovery forces, returned Sunday from Washington, where he had gone to confer with national recovery heads on plans for codification of the unemployed and investigation of violators of the NRA in Indianapolis.

Chase was to confer with Louis J. Bernstein, president of the Chamber of Commerce, Mrs. Elias C. Atkins, Charles M. Bryan and T. M. Overly and Fisher.

District meetings under supervision of recovery army officers are planned for this week. First meeting will be held at the West Michigan street branch of the Fletcher Trust Company Wednesday.
