

SPECIAL HONOR WAITS DE PAUW FRESHIE CLASS

Members to Be Graduated in Centennial Year
at University.

By Times Special
GREENCASTLE, Ind., Aug. 19.—The freshman class enrolled in De Pauw university in September will have a place of honor in the history of the institution. Members of this class will be seniors, being graduated at the time De Pauw is celebrating its 100th anniversary. It will be known as the Centennial Class.

Indications are that this class will be large. Practically all rooms in Rector and Lucy Rowland Halls, coed dormitories, have been reserved and transcripts of high school credits still are being received.

About $78,400 worth of Rector scholarships have been granted to freshmen men. Three hundred fifty applications were received seeking one of these valuable scholarships which pay all tuition and fees for four years.

Freshmen are scheduled to arrive on the campus Sept. 12 for a week of orientation and registration. The first year students will have charge of the campus for two days before the upper-classmen begin to arrive for their registration Sept. 14.

Begin Work Sept. 18

During freshmen week the new students will be photographed, examined, feted, instructed and registered so that they will be ready to begin their regular class work on Monday, Sept. 18.

President G. Bromley Oxnam is scheduled to arrive on the campus Sept. 1 after spending the summer on a cruise of the Mediterranean countries with his family. He will address the first chapel before the student body as a whole and also give a word of welcome to a mass meeting of the freshmen class during freshmen week.

The plan of having one chapel each week exclusively for freshmen proved so popular and profitable that the same system of chapel services will be in vogue this year. Monday and Tuesday chapels each week will be for lectures, both off-campus lecturers and from faculty members; Wednesday will be the day for a devotional chapel held in Gohin Memorial church.

Thursday's chapel is given to the school of music to bring to the student body both student and faculty artists; Friday is Freshman chapel in which the common problems of first year students are discussed. This chapel is in charge of President Oxnam himself.

Football Call Sept. 8

De Pauw's football team will report Sept. 8 for initial practice. Letters have gone out from Coach Raymond R. Neal to all eligible candidates. De Pauw has arranged a schedule of seven games all with Indiana secondary schools.

For several years De Pauw has claimed the secondary college championship of the state without playing a full schedule of Indiana colleges. This year that title promises to be more of a scrap for all concerned.

Few faculty changes have been made for the coming year. Professor Rowland Leach resigned from the School of Music to take a place on the faculty of the University of Redlands in California. Professor Benjamin F. Swalin will be the new professor of violin and director of the symphony orchestra. Dr. Josef Piki of Austria has been given an assistantship in the department of chemistry. Eight members of the faculty were given promotions.

Expansion at Butler to Attract New Students

Journalism Department Is More Complete; Music
Course Improved.

Butler university campus is alive with activity, as preparations are being made for opening of the fall semester, Sept. 18 and 19. Administrative officials have been busy throughout the summer preparing departmental curricula and class schedules for the influx of students next month.

Additions to the general offerings of the university make the 1933-34 curriculum outstanding from the standpoint of service in history of the school. Organization of divisions on pre-law and pre-engineering instruction have widened greatly the scope of the school.

Students now may attend Butler for one or two years and take work directly applicable to later studies at vocational, technical and professional schools.

The addition of a university press to the Butler equipment greatly enlarges the opportunities for the student of journalism. Henceforth the entire process of printing the Collegian, student paper, will be conducted in the modern plant recently established in the basement of Arthur Jordan Memorial hall.

A miniature newspaper plant, operated by the department of journalism, will be available to students interested in that study. A complete city room, with its editorial departments, copy desk and reportorial staff will be housed in one end of the journalism laboratory and a linotype, press and other mechanical equipment will be housed in the opposite end.

A new division of music is creating much interest among former and prospective students as the new semester approaches. By a closer affiliation with the Arthur Jordan Conservatory of Music, eight of its faculty members will teach music at Butler and take charge of student musical groups.

It is planned to organize a university choir, directed by Max T. Krone, conservatory head. The men's and women's glee clubs will continue, the university band will be directed by J. B. Vandaworker, and other musical groups are contemplated.

Dramatic work at the university will be in charge of Miss Frances Belk. She is prominent in the city as a teacher and performer. Miss Belk will supervise the work of Thespian, student dramatic group, and will give class work along the general lines of histrionics.

Enlarged opportunities for the payment of tuition on the installment plan are attracting many of the students. Additional students are expected to be enabled to enroll because they can "pay as they go."

Y. M. C. A. to Open Night and High Schools Sept. 8

Four Separate, Complete

Four separate, complete schools are to be conducted. The night high school, fully accredited by the state department of public instruction, again will have E. J. Black as principal.

Subjects offered are algebra, geometry, English, three years; United States history, world history, Latin, two years; and chemistry. John P. Donnelly will begin his sixth year as head of the business college subjects for which high school credit is given. While the school of commerce is not accredited, it is possible for those who complete the courses to take examinations for credit in other colleges. This also is true of the trade school.

It is possible for the student to make eleven credits during the year and complete the regular four years high school work in three years or less. Students enrolling in the high school range in age from 16 to 45.

INDIANA U. TO OPEN CLASSES SEPTEMBER 21

Afternoon and Night Work Will Be Given in School Here.

Afternoon and evening courses of Indiana university in Indianapolis will open Sept. 21, with ninety-two classes. A full freshman and sophomore program is offered in the afternoon this year, as last, including pre-medical, pre-dental, and pre-commerce subjects, as well as courses in arts and sciences.

Work in teacher training and graduate fields also will be given, as heretofore.

A staff of seven administrative officers, headed by Robert E. Cavanaugh, director of the extension division for the state, is in charge of the Indianapolis center, receiving and advising students. The teaching staff consists of forty-three instructors, most of whom make the trip from the campus at Bloomington to teach one day a week in this city.

Many Departments

The following departments will offer courses this fall: School of commerce, school of education, and departments of philosophy, chemistry, zoology, physiology, economics, English, romance languages, fine arts, German, history, hygiene, journalism, mathematics, philosophy, psychology, sociology, child welfare, and visual instruction.

Professor Ralph E. Carter is in charge of teacher training work and the advisory service for teachers, both advanced and elementary courses being given leading to the different licenses. Professor Frank H. Streightoff will be in charge of accounting and commerce work.

Mary B. Orvis, general secretary of the Indianapolis center, is in charge of the college of arts and sciences, as well as the new two-year program.

Short Program Offered

The two-year program is an innovation voted by the faculty of Indiana university last spring, in an effort to meet the needs of students who expect to attend school for one or two years only. Any student selecting this course is allowed wide freedom in the selection of subjects of study according to his special interest.

Upon the completion of sixty semester hours of academic work the student will receive a certificate from Indiana university, or he can, if he wishes, apply the credits earned toward graduation from the four-year courses carrying the regular A. B. or B. S. degrees.

Enrollment dates are Sept. 18, 19 and 20, with the first classes beginning on Sept. 21. Freshman examinations for exemption in English composition will be held the evening of Sept. 18. Officers at the Indianapolis center are looking for a student enrollment that will be approximately the same as that of last fall, about 1,200.
