

Horse Owners' Mounts Are Groomed for Entry in Show at Louisville

Recognition Won at State Fair Spurs City
Fans' Hopes of Winning Honors at Kentucky Event.

WINNING recognition at the Indiana state fair horse show is, without doubt, the greatest of local horse people as they consider the Louisville show next week. "We're going and to win," is their cry.

The local entries will have their gallery of admirers, for besides their owners any number of fans are going down. It'll be a gay party for the show-goers.

Mrs. Robert Masters will be in the gallery cheering the five Arlington horses. August Bohlen with Bobbie will be proud of Mrs. Bohlen as she rides Rayon D'Or, who showed to advantage last year.

Mrs. and Mrs. Lucius Hamilton, Mrs. Dorothy Alford, Mrs. Robert Trimble and Mrs. William Mooney will be on hand to give the proper enthusiastic send-off.

Joan Metzger will ride Statesman, with Al and Dorothy, her brother and sister, looking on with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Metzger.

Al had a time with Puss-in-Boots Wednesday night at the state fair show. The band aroused a playful mood in the pony, and he refused to become serious about showing off his championship qualities. Al was patient, but provoked.

Miss Audrey Pugh hasn't decided yet whether she'll ride Golden Whirlwind, her stallion, or choose some one else to mount him for his second Louisville experience. Miss Pugh will enter Nancy Hoke, in the hackney saddle pony class.

Miss Pugh's fox terrier, Pat, mascot of his first show this week, and if the excitement and all the attention he received, isn't too upsetting he'll make the trip to the Kentucky affair.

Pat might have changed hands this week, if his mistress hadn't been so attached to him. One little boy bargained and plead to spend his last dollar for the dog. "I'll give you nine dollars," he proffered.

Cynthia Test tied a record this week at the fair. She won the girls riding classes for the third successive year, which was the accomplishment of Miss Pugh and Miss Margaret Aoramus, when they were eligible for the under 16 classes. Cynthia is only 10, so she has an opportunity to set a new record.

Dorothy Metzger was second to Cynthia and Madelyn Pugh, the 12-year-old sister of Miss Pugh, was third.

Mrs. Robert Trimble has been putting in a smart appearance in a new formal riding habit, the proper costume for the three and four gaited classes. The costume is striking and copies the full dress apparel of men.

The resemblance is complete to the stiff bodomed and studded shirt, small black bow tie, wing collar, and satin lapels. White pigskin gloves, a gardenia and high silk hat complete the ensemble.

Mrs. Frank Shields will add to the list of Indiana entries with two horses from her stables near Martinsville. Her track equipment is colorful, carefully carried out in green and white. The blankets, the trunks and harness are smartly trimmed in these colors. Arlington's colors are blue and yellow.

After the horsemen return from Louisville, they'll begin thinking about the Junior League show, which will draw champion horse owners Sept. 23. This show is fashionable, with all society supporting the project of the league.

Mae West Corsets Set Pace as Fashion Turns to 'Hour Glass' Figure

New Models Solve Problem of Accenting
Hips, Pinching of Waists; Curves
Predominate Silhouette.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

THERE'S no use denying it. Mae West has stamped her mark of influence on everything in today's feminine world. There is Mae West jewelry, the return of the elegant velvet and satin which she advocates, and all of the other frills which are synonymous with "Lady Lou."

But to achieve the proper Mae West effect, women just have to get down to fundamentals. The new corsets and girdles are answering this problem. Made to accentuate hips, pinch in waists, and uplift busts, they are the most necessary purchase the fashion-minded woman can make. Mae West herself has an honest remark to make about the new corsets. "If they bring corsets back—they'll have to have something to put into them," September Vogue quotes her as saying.

Harpers Bazaar, while denying that American women are returning to the "hour glass figure," admits that the Mae West bosom is an important part of the new silhouette.

In the corset department of the Wm. H. Block Company, the new trend to "full, curved figures" has been particularly noted. It has brought an increase in corset business, and in addition, has increased the sale of bust pads, which are shown in various styles.

'Hucatel' Popular Design

THE most popular of these is the "Hucatel," designed originally for the use of Hollywood stars, who wished to emulate the Mae West figure. It is a padding to be worn inside brassieres, and comes in small, medium and large sizes. Other popular forms, intended to be worn inside the brassiere, are made of milanese, filled with down. For the more youthful figure, net rosettes in dainty pastel shades, are displayed.

One of the newest corset models shown at Block's which conforms to the new figure idea is the one designed by the makers of Madame Louise corsets, in what is known as the "bow knot and streamer" model. It is made of a heavy silk material, called "Luxor cloth," and is in two tones, combining girly and brassiere in one garment. This new one-piece garment is extremely popular this season, since it distributes the flesh evenly, and gives the "pinched in" waist line that is essential.

Two-Way Stretch Added Feature

OTHER new models, also made in one-piece garments, are made with lace brassiere tops, over net foundations, with latex bottoms. Shoulder straps are either of elastic or satin ribbon. La Gant corsets, which are made of a two-way stretch material, known as "youthlastic," have an added feature in removable supporters, fastening to the elastic by rubber buttons. This is an advantage in laundering. Like many of the better corsets, the supporters on these are equipped with tiny straps of satin ribbon, which fastens between the corset clasps on the supporters and the stocking, giving protection against hosiery runs.

Although all of the Mae West features are more particularly adapted to the younger figure, the fashion points which they emphasize are used in moderation for the matronly figure. Corsets are longer, supporters shorter, and hosiery is worn much shorter than in previous years.

The college girl and the young woman who has an athletic tendency, still prefer the latex girly and separate brassiere. All brassieres, however, are made on extreme uplift lines.

Locality Has Effect On Figures

ACCORDING to authorities in the corset department at Block's, there is a great difference in the figures of women in different localities in the United States. In New York and the east, women have broader shoulders, fuller busts, and small hips. In Indianapolis and other sections of the middle west, the figure naturally conforms to the "Lady Lou" requirements. Busts are noticeably smaller, they say, hips and thighs are larger, and waists are full.

The new gowns are designed on lines which make proper corseting imperative, these authorities say. They call attention to a number of instances where it has been necessary to fit women customers in the new corsets before they could be fitted in some of the new figure fashions.

Quoting again from the article on the new figure trend as outlined by Miss West in the September Vogue, "What can be accomplished by the feminine figure, once it is nipped here and there, but allowed free rein elsewhere, would surprise you."

Sororities

Miss Helen Perry, 818 East Seventeenth street, will entertain members of Pi Omega sorority on Wednesday.

Miss Martha Wegheest, Bluff road, will be hostess at a meeting of Beta chapter, Sigma Delta Zeta sorority, Monday night.

Alpha chapter, Sigma Delta Zeta sorority, will meet at 8 Wednesday night at the home of Miss Ruth Burke, 421 North Wallace street.

RUSH PARTY HEAD

Miss Janice Kellogg will be in charge of the "Sweetheart Sweet Shop," rush party of the Butler university chapter of Pi Beta Phi Tuesday at the chapter house, 345 Blue Ridge road. Assisting will be Misses Helen Carson and Helen Bonnell. The theme of the party is a traditional idea for the opening rush tea.

Card Parties

A card party will be held Sunday, Wednesday and Friday at Holy Name auditorium in Beech Grove. The September committee is sponsoring the project.

Card parties will be given Sunday afternoon and night in St. Roch's hall, 3600 South Meridian street. Supper will be served between 5 and 7.
