Dietz on Science— GASOLINE, ONCE WASTE, NOW IS 'GOLDEN FLUID'

Invention of Auto Solves
Big Nuisance' for Early Distillers.

BY DAVID DIETZ
Science-Howard Science Editor

The twentieth century child, born in the midst of the automobile age, will find it difficult to believe that there ever was a day when gasoline was regarded as a waste product.

But forty years ago there were only four automobiles in the United States, Gustav Egloff, chemical engineer of Chicago, tells us, and gasoline in those days was just something that nobody wanted.

"From 1859 to about 1905, gasoline, always present in crude oil, was a nuisance to the refiner," he says. "He was at his wit's end to get rid of it. He ran it into streams, rivers and lakes until the law called a halt due to the many resulting fires. The unscrupulous dealer adulterated his kerosene with the worthless stuff, resulting in many disastrous lamp explosions."

"In 1871, in New York City, the great chemist, Prof. Charles F. Chandler, discovered that there were kerosenes being sold which were pure gasoline. Again the law intervened and drastic measures were taken to remedy this evil."

Situation Is Reversed
Then came the advent of the auto. Today there are 26,000,000 autos in the United States. And as the auto increased in use, the demand for kerosene fell off. Oil lamps were rapidly supplanted by the electric light.

"The position of the oil refiner was completely reversed by this change in public demand. "His problem now was to increase his output of gasoline and decrease his output of kerosene," Dr. Egloff continues. "As some unscrupulous dealers earlier had mixed as much of their worthless gasoline with kerosene as possible, they now tried to get rid of their unwanted kerosene by mixing it with gasoline."

"For a time it looked as though the oil industry never would be able to keep up with the mounting demand for gasoline. Prophets of gloom predicted a shortage of crude oil, fearing that the oil resources would last only a few years."

These prophets, however, failed to take into account the progress of science. The picture changed with the development of new means of locating oil pools and with the invention of the cracking process. As a result, the oil industry is producing at the rate of 18,000,000,000 gallons a year, and Dr. Egloff believes that there will be enough oil to last a century more.

"Not only has the chemist shown the way to produce more than 300 per cent increase yield of gasoline from crude oil in twenty years, but in addition, he has produced a new and superior gasoline to that distilled from crude oil in the ordinary way," he says.

"Cracking produces gasoline of different chemical composition from that naturally present in crude oil. Instead of merely boiling off the gasoline fraction of petroleum, cracking subjects the oil to intense heat and pressure; temperatures of 900 to 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit, and pressure of 400 pounds."

Natural Product "Knocks"
The sort of gasoline made by nature consists of larger molecules than those which result from the cracking process, Dr. Egloff tells us.

"The cracking process does just what its name indicates. It cracks the larger molecules of hydrocarbons in the petroleum into smaller molecules."

"Nature's gasoline burns too rapidly and knocks violently during combustion in engines of most modern cars," Dr. Egloff said. "So we crack nature's oil—even gasoline—to make anti-knock motor fuel."

"Motor car manufacturers have been quick to take advantage of the constantly improved quality of gasoline to better the operation of their cars by increasing compression pressure."

Contract Bridge

BY W. E. M'KENNEY

I WISH to clear up a point regarding original third hand bids in the constructive one over one system.

As you already know, in order to make an original first or second hand bid, you must have between hand and one-half high card tricks.

In addition to stating that you have this strength when making a first or second hand bid, you also tell your partner that your hand contains re-bid values; therefore you are often required to pass a fairly strong hand in first or second position.

So, of necessity, third hand must open very light. At a matter of fact, the better players today seldom pass in third position, especially when not vulnerable.

If this is true, how can you tell whether your partner, bidding third hand, is bidding a psychic or has a real bid?

First, if partner's hand contains no strength and he simply wishes to make a bid, he should open with one club. This bid of one club does not signify that he holds a club suit—it is simply an opening bid, and unless partner re-bids clubs or makes a constructive bid in another

CHARGES VOTER LAW VIOLATION
Fountain County Clerk in Protest on Registration Funds Refusal.

Action of the Fountain county council Wednesday in turning down request of $4,500 to defray the expenses of the permanent registration of voters was in violation of the state registration laws, it was charged here Friday.

Complaint was registered with the state board of election commissioners by Esten Goodwin, Fountain county circuit court clerk, that the total amount of money for election registration was omitted when the 1934 budget was passed by the council.

Goodwin asked that the matter be taken up with the state board of accounts or the attorney-general.

William W. Spencer, member of the state election board, stated today that the action was in violation of the statute passed by the last session of the state legislature providing for registrations.

Spencer said that he would write immediately to the Fountain county officials advising them what steps to take.

According to section forty of registration laws, any person willfully neglecting to perform duties required by the registration act is liable to a maximum fine of $500 to which may be added an imprisonment of six months in the county jail.

INDIANA FLOOD CONTROL PLAN IS CHALLENGED

Army Engineer Questions
Federal Obligation on White and Wabash.

BY WALKER STONE
Times Special Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The federal public works administration had under advisement today the proposal to allot $18,000,000 for flood control on the Wabash and White rivers, following an exhaustive hearing Friday.

Near the close of the hearing, Major General Lytle, Brown, chief of army engineers, warned the public works board that if it undertakes the Wabash-White flood control project as a strictly federal enterprise, thereby will establish a precedent.

Cites Huge Cost

The general counseled the board to determine its national policy on flood control before making a decision to the Wabash and White rivers. He said that a nationwide flood control program along the lines necessary for the two Indiana rivers would mean expenditure of approximately $400,000,000.

The $18,000,000, General Brown said, will pay only the cost of erecting levees to protect the farm areas. An additional $16,000,000, he said, would be necessary to give proper protection to the cities.

The general also declared that half of the bridges crossing the Wabash would have to be torn down, and new bridges erected, to give greater clearance for flood waters. He estimated an additional $3,000,000 for bridge improvements.

Machinery Is Ready

General Brown did not oppose the Wabash-White improvement as such, but said merely that many other like projects were equally justifiable on economic grounds.

Representative Virginia E. Jenckes was asked whether owners of land along the river would give the federal government title to rights-of-way for levee construction.

"If necessary," said Mrs. Jenckes, "I'll ply a rowboat up and down the river and get the landowners to sign."

She said machinery for securing rights of way already had been set up by the various levee districts.

General Brown told the public works board that it should not embark on the flood control work without first securing some legal protection to the federal government against claims that might arise because of the backwash of flood waters.

He said levee construction would raise the flood level as much as six feet in the vicinity of Vincennes. Among the Hoosiers at Friday's hearing were Senator Van Nuys, Representative Louis Ludlow, George Compton, secretary to Senator Arthur Robinson; William McClellan, Muncie; State Democratic Chairman Earl R. Peters; John Hogan, secretary to Representative Greenwood, and the three members of the Indiana public works advisory board—Otto P. Deluse, John N. Dyer, and Lew G. Ellingham.

NEGRO ROBBER SUSPECT SLAIN BY POLICEMAN

Sergeant Yoh Shoot* Down
Fugitive When He Draws Gun.

A scant half-hour after he is believed to have taken part in the holdup of a street car operator, an unidentified Negro youth was shot dead Friday night near the intersection of College avenue and Eleventh street.

The slain bandit suspect was shot by Police Sergeant Kenneth Yoh, after the Negro stopped during his flight, turned and drew a revolver. He ran a few steps, then plunged through a basement window of the Utopian apartments, 1109 College avenue.

Car Operator Held Up

He was found dead, the bullet having passed through his heart.

Two Negroes held up Arnold Hoover, 40, of 518 North New Jersey street, operator of an Indiana-Columbia avenue street car, at Massachusetts and Cornell avenues at 8:46 p. m. They took his money changer and some money and tokens from his pockets.

A few minutes later, Yoh and his squad, consisting of patrolmen Ralph Chambers and Orville Quintette, drew up beside a pair of Negroes, near the scene of the slaying, and started to question them.

One Negro ran south, the other north. Chambers and Quintette started after the southward-bound man, Yoh after the one running north. When the Negro darted into an alleyway and drew his gun, Yoh fired.
