

KILLER KELLY
THREAT FEARED
BY WITNESSES

Bailey Trial Drawing Near
Close: Feverish Hunt
On for Slayer.

Urschel testified against his alleged abductor. He mailed a brazen threat to Herbert K. Hyde, U. S. district attorney, and Joseph B. Keenan, assistant United States attorney-general, promising to either murder or kidnap every member of their families.

The letter bore Kelly's fingerprints and ended: "See you in hell."

Prosecutor Hyde moved his family to safety, Keenan hurriedly fled to "underworld rats," and the Urschels courageously made prompt announcement they were "on the side of the government and law and order to the finish."

Courtroom Is Electrified

Fred Coleman, uncle of Katherine Kelly, electrified the courtroom when he marched to a place in front of the jury, unannounced, and demanded to be heard.

He told Judge Edgar S. Vaughn privately that Kelly appeared at his farm home in southern Oklahoma Wednesday night and threatened to kill his family for their activity in the trial. It was at the Coleman farm, the government charged, that the $200,000 kidnap plot was hatched by Bailey, Kelly and Albert L. Bates, one of the defendants.

The story of Urschel's abduction from his luxurious home is in the trial records. Urschel told of his nine days' captivity at the farm home of R. G. (Boss) Shannon, his wife, Ora, and their son, Armon, near Paradise, Tex. E. E. Kirkpatrick friend of Urschel, testified he paid $200,000 in marked $20 bills to Kelly in Kansas City.

Tell of Capture

Urschel and federal agents told of the dawn capture at the Shannon farm of Bailey, sleeping beside the same machine gun used in the kidnaping.

Part of the $1,200 found in Bailey's pockets was from the ransom money. A $510,000 loot was located in St. Paul and Minneapolis and seven men were arrested for attempting to dispose of it.

These seven attend the trial daily with their attorneys. Government testimony against them will be given today.

FIRE LOSS IS $1,650

Blaze Spreads to Three Houses; Two Alarms Turned In

Fire starting in the home of Mrs. Sarah Lockwood, 1433 Shelby street, set fire to two other buildings Thursday with a loss estimated at $1,650.

Gaining headway before the arrival of fire apparatus, the fire spread to 1437 and 1439 Shelby street, setting fire to the roofs in those buildings. Two alarms were turned in.

ACE BERRY ASKS YOU TO READ THIS

DURING my thirteen years in furnishing your entertainment, I have only taken the liberty of publishing three signed endorsements of motion pictures.

I told you "The Sea Hawk" was great entertainment; that Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist" would warm your heart; that "Gold Diggers of 1933" would startle your eyes. In each case record crowds proved the reliability of my recommendations.

And now... I join the critics and fans of the nation in urging you to see "Lady for a Day." I believe you will give it the same record-breaking reception it received at the Radio City Music Hall (world's largest theatre) in New York.

Come early. I feel certain you will want to see it more than once.
