

Hunters of State Eager as Date for Opening of Fall Season Draws Near

Devotees 'Brush Up' on Rifles and Rules, Anxiously Awaiting Arrival of Time for Bagging Native Game.

Times Woman's Page Editor

HUNTERS are keeping their eyes on the calendar, as assiduously as a child marks off the days until Christmas. They are on tiptoe until the crack of the rifle sounds the opening of the hunting season.

In their eagerness to begin their participation in the sport, they must beware of mixing their dates. It's flirting with trouble to hit a quail when the conservation department says "no quail shooting until Nov. 10." Dr. and Mrs. Gayle B. Wolfe are getting ready to leave for Michigan on Oct. 16, when they'll lodge themselves in a cabin at a lake near Traverse City. They'll hunt duck and grouse, and have visions of bringing home a bag as worthy of a "story" as any fishing trip.

Dr. and Mrs. Wolfe should have good fortune on their trip, which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cox contemplate making. They've had a summer of practice on their skeet range at their country home on White river near Carmel.

The Wolfes have a regulation range and their friends have found it a delightful place to satisfy their interest in shooting during the closed hunting season. Mr. and Mrs. Cox are good shots, but their experience has amounted mostly to actual hunting.

Randolph Coats is a frequent visitor. Mrs. George Denny just began shooting recently with George Denny Sr. and George Denny Jr., who match in magnitude their shooting interest with their fishing instinct. Miss Ethel Swartz is a guest often of the Wolfes as are Po Denning, Hathaway Simmons, Albert Smith, Warren Tressler, Sheridan, Dr. Glenn Pell, Dr. Robert Blakeman, Dr. Kemp Westfall and Colonel Wells. Mrs. Simmons anticipates joining in the sport when she returns from a vacation.

Later in the season, Dr. and Mrs. Wolfe will go to Bloomington, near Mrs. Wolfe's family home, and Brazil to hunt quail. They won't begin duck hunting in Indiana until Nov. 1, when they will take river trips. For prairie chicken they journey to the northern part of the state.

"On our trips down the river, we never return without a duck or two," Mrs. Wolfe said. "However, duck shooting isn't as profitable in Indiana as in other states."

Week-End at Lodge

The Wolfes spent the summer at their country place with its many sports facilities. With Betsy and Walter in school now, the family spends Wednesday afternoons and week-ends at the lodge. Betsy and Walter received their first guns this summer, and their interest in the sport is mounting.

Mrs. Wolfe arouses an appetite when she describes her favorite prune dressing which with a bit of lemon sweetens the duck meat to a delicious flavor. And she warns, "Bake your duck, breast down so the juice will drip down from the back and prevent dryness."

Recipes Call for Wine
She suggests that if you object to the gamey flavor, parboiling with an onion will remove the distaste. She adds, "Don't rely on a cook book for the length of time of cooking. Simply cook it until you think it's done."

Duck eating will become more palatable to many when wines become a part of every complete dinner. Hunters say a bit of Burgundy helps wash down the duck. Some particularly delectable recipes call for a glass full of red wine poured over the properly seasoned game to make it the "piece de resistance" it should be.

YOUR CHILD

Youngster's Health Governs How Long He Must Sleep

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
There is an old saying that "He lives longest who is awake most hours."

Another that "God gives help to early risers." Literature is replete with maxims about getting out of bed when "rosy fingers dawn" begins to creep up over the sea.

Three mothers wish that school would keep from 10 to 5 instead of 9 to 4. Not only would they get another hour to rest, but the children wouldn't be such bears.

My sympathy is with the mothers. It always seems to me that I am much more tired in the morning than at night. But this is not the problem I am approaching here.

It is the effect of early rising upon children.

Better to Rise Early
The child who gets ten hours sleep should be rested in that if he is well. Some children repair and build enough in nine hours, others take eleven.

A mother can regulate bedtime according to age and state of health. Little children need from twelve to thirteen hours at night. A tired grown-up eight or nine or even ten.

The regulating has to be done in the evening because the family gets up at the same time. That end of it is even.

When it is better to get up early than to let it later? Oh, yes, because there is school. And because we all think better in the morning.

Builder of Character
Well—we don't all think better in the morning. I think much better in the afternoon. Unless we are physically exhausted many of us do. And children, I have discovered, are pretty much like us. No one rule fits them all.

However this may be, I think there is a more real benefit to children than that. It doesn't concern school, or the best pancakes for breakfast, or beating the rest of the family to the bathroom.

It concerns character itself. That line on God helping the early riser comes in here. There is something about getting out of bed at a given time, much as one hates it, that adds one more bit of iron to the human makeup.

Excellent for Disciplining
Overcoming and doing things they dislike is a more real benefit to children. All the better discipline because they do not build up any personal resentment about it.

It is simply done, that is all. One thing to do that they can't argue or question. Of course they do both, but under it all they nurse no grudge. They may not be healthy, wealthy or wise in the end, but we usually find early risers people of plan and leading organized lives—successful in some way not mentioned in Richard's almanac. Nearly always people of "character."

Mothers to Be Guests
Mother's club of the Butler university unit of Trianon will honor mothers of new pledges at a mother and daughter meeting at 8 Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. William T. Harris, 529 East Fortieth street. Mrs. Robert P. Claffey is president.

Mothers Will Meet
The season's activities of the Phi Delta Theta Mother's Club will begin with a 1 o'clock luncheon on Wednesday at the chapter house, 705 Hampton drive. Hostesses will be Mesdames George O. Stewart, A. S. Johnson, L. M. Langston, Hiram J. Raffensperger and A. E. Coddington.
