

ORDERS HEARING FOR ALLEGED POLICE SLAYER

Judge Deals Blow to Case of State Against Indicted Gang.

A smashing blow was dealt the state's case against the alleged murderers of Sergeant Lester Jones, when Superior Judge Joseph R. Williams today ordered a habeas corpus hearing, Thursday.

Not only will the state be required to produce Edward (Foggy) Dean, in whose behalf the writ is sought, but the state will be required to bring a carefully-guarded confession purported to have been made by Al Thompson, alias Red Gibbons, also indicted in the machine gun slaying.

T. Ernest Mahom, attorney for Dean, filed the petition for the writ Monday, seeking Dean's release under bond, but the demand for the confession and the presence of Thompson in court took the state by surprise.

Prosecutor Herbert E. Wilson declined to comment on the order. An assertion by Mahom that the state planned to circumvent the move by sending Thompson out of the county to the jail at Noblesville, where the trial will be held, was denied by Sheriff Charles (Buck) Sumner.

Sheriff Sumner said that the five men held in the Jones case had been placed in solitary confinement since frustration of an attempted jail break last week.

It has been known for some time that Thompson has been separated from other members of the gang, and the rumor has been current that the purported confession was to be a key stone of the state's case.

"Nobody needs to be afraid that I will turn Dean loose on the streets, if the evidence justifies his detention," Judge Williams said. "However, the law, as rightfully cited by Mr. Mahom, declares that the evidence on which a prisoner is held must be produced in a habeas corpus proceeding."

SOCK ON CHIN PUTS CLARA BOW ON CANVAS

Down into history with the "smacks that were heard around the world" goes the "sock" that flattened Clara Bow, more or less darling of the movies. The picture above shows Clara in the carnival battle royal scene, before and after taking the wallop that rocked the film world. Harry Wood, a motion picture extra, pleaded guilty to landing the knockout, accidentally, and Clara readily forgave him. Some one in the crowd stepped in front of the camera at the moment Clara was struck.

FIRES ON AUTO OF 6 CARRYING DOPED CIGARETS

Five Men, Women Escape as Bridgeport Man Sees Theft.

Five men and a woman believed implicated in peddling marijuanas, narcotic cigarettes, were targets for a shotgun blast early today at Bridgeport, where they are alleged to have stolen an automobile tire.

Maurice Courtney and James Johnson, employees of the West End garage, said the men and woman came to the garage about 4 this morning and picked up the tire. Courtney said he struck one of the men with a flashlight, and Johnson reported to Indianapolis police that he fired a shotgun as the party drove away. He said he heard some of the shot spatter on the car. According to Courtney and Johnson, four men brought the automobile to the garage on Sept. 22 for some repair work, and at that time they had two suitcases filled with marijuanas.

Killed While Praying

Mantos Spurn Sabbath Day Observance; Spoil Arrangements for Great Fight Film.

FRANK N. WALLACE, state entomologist, reported today that his plans for making a great fight film have gone completely awry. As compensation, however, he now knows what the praying mantos do on Sunday.

For the sake of city folks who are unfamiliar with the praying mantos, it might be well to explain that they are a comical looking insect and far from Christian.

They get their name from the praying posture they assume just before assaulting their enemies. With heads bowed and arms extended in an attitude of adoration, the praying mantos remain immobile until its prey gets within striking distance.

Then down come the arms on the enemy and soon the mantos has a nice grasshopper or other insect for lunch.

KNOWING their fighting proclivities, despite their pacifist name, Mr. Wallace decided to use two of them in a fight film. This would add to the naturalist lore already taken by Mr. Wallace's camera.

So a pair of praying mantos was brought to the entomologist office.

Mr. Wallace had them in a glass cage and left them there over Sunday. Looking at them, just before leaving Saturday night, he noticed they were shadow boxing.

But believing that the praying Mantos at least would observe Sunday in perfect peace, Mr. Wallace did not separate them.

Any way, Mr. Wallace, being scientific, arrived at the following conclusions: Praying mantos are no respecters of Sunday and they love their kin so much they could eat them—and do.

BARE TRUST DEAL IN SENATE STOCK QUIZ

Dillon, Investment Banker, Grilled on Huge Scale.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Clarence Dillon, investment banker, outlined today before the senate stock market investigating committee how Dillon, Read & Co. organized the $30,000,000 United States and Foreign investment trust in 1924, and gained absolute control over it with an investment of only $5,100,000.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, charged that the transaction was carried out through a "dummy" of Dillon, Read & Co.

"I don't know whether you would call him a dummy," Clarence Dillon, head of the company, said smiling, "but he was a bookkeeper in our company."

This continuity in such an instance is bound to suffer because of its novelty of form and progression, but Sturges has so carefully tried to intertwine his events by means of a surprise technique, technically known as the "static pan-lap-dissolve," that there is no guesswork in the telling, and while the chronology may be odd, the story, for all purposes, is said to be straightforward at every point.

Trying to sell such an idea to a producer was a task in itself and Sturges realized his problem. He wrote the scenario complete, continuity and all, and brought it to Jesse L. Lasky.
