

200 Will Participate in Saddle Horse Roundup Oct. 15 at Greggs Farms

True Western Rodeo Handclasp of Devotees to Be Extended to Entries in Hoosier Event for October.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

TEN GALLON HATS and bucking bronchos may be missing at the saddle horse round-up Sunday, Oct. 15, at Greggs farms, but with 200 or more horses doing their tricks the atmosphere won't be far lacking the mien of a real rodeo.

The true Western handclasp of the horseman will be extended to all, from the farm boy with the pet family mare to the play boy with a galloping aristocrat. If you have an esteemed park horse and have never aspired for the show ring, you'll have your chance at the round-up.

There'll be a place for every kind of saddle horse. There'll be something you'll want to join in. The program committee isn't sure itself just what all the entertainment will amount to. You can be sure it'll keep you enjoyably occupied.

Charles Jewett is going to be master of ceremonies, and arranging all the events with him will be J. R. McNutt, Alex Metzger, Fred Sharp of Franklin, C. F. Gregg and Maurice L. Mendenhall.

They may call upon a team to play polo with a broom, or it may be potatoes you'll have to gather in a mounted race. There'll be mad, crazy fun, and there'll be miles of wooded paths to follow if your inclinations are more staid.

J. V. Gregg, brother of C. F. Gregg, owner of the farm at One Hundred Sixth and Meridian streets, dropped the inspiration for the project, when he described the round-ups held at Painted Rock estate, near Lancaster, Cal.

Trophy Donations Pour In

INDIANAPOLIS horsemen saw an opportunity to increase interest in the animals they love. Several of them from various clubs gathered together, and after they started making plans, the round-up proportions grew with the speed of a rolling stone.

Wallace O. Lee took over the job of collecting trophies, and the other day before the group even knew what prizes were to be awarded for the table in Mr. Mendenhall's conference room was loaded with donations. There were boots, jodhpurs, bridles, lamps, cups and ornaments. And Mr. Lee hadn't even begun his pursuit of donors.

An international note will be added to the event by eight or ten Boy Scouts, who will wear costumes of various countries which they visited on an European tour this summer. Earl Kiger, a member of the general committee, had a son, in their tour, and it was his idea that these boys help police the grounds.

F. O. Belzer, scout executive, has promised plenty of scouts, and for real "bouncing," if necessary, Ralph Hitch and Al Peeney will be on hand to take care of that.

Bob Brown will be judge for show events, and Don Bose will decide winners in jumping events. Raymond Jackson will be ring steward, and Major J. K. Boles of Ft. Benjamin Harrison, will allocate awards.

Mr. Mendenhall is chairman of the general committee, Mr. McNutt is secretary, and other members are Mrs. Frank Hoke, Mrs. E. E. Martin, Mr. Lee, Mr. Metzger, Major Boles, Mr. Bose, Mr. Kiger, Mr. Jewett, Mr. Gregg, C. O. Allig, Dr. P. O. Bonham, Mr. Sharp, Mr. Brown, Mrs. Perry Lesh, and Charles Cropper.

Distinguished Guests to Have Duties

THE grounds arrangements will be managed by C. F. and J. V. Gregg. Mr. Sharp, Conrad Ruckelshaus, Mr. Kiger, Mr. Cropper, M. J. Richardson and Roy Davis. The polo games will be arranged by Mr. Sharp, Mr. Ruckelshaus, Major Boles, Lieutenant J. J. Davis and Norman Perry Jr.

Jumping events will be provided by C. O. Allig, Mr. Sharp, Lieutenant P. I. Edger and Mrs. George Bailey. Other committees are: Park horse classes, Mr. Metzger, P. E. Samuel, H. J. Lacy, Mrs. Blake Stone, Mr. Bose and Eli Lilly Jr.; stunts, Dr. Bonham, Dr. H. I. Stanton, J. V. Gregg, Major Boles, Lieutenant R. F. Bower and Tillman Bubenzer; attendance, Mrs. E. E. Martin, Mrs. E. S. Retter, Major Boles, Miss Hilda Hibben, Miss Grace Speer, Mrs. August Bohnen, Miss Beatrice Burgan, Miss Edna Levey, Mrs. Donald Fay and E. E. Whitehill, and concessions, Mrs. Lesh, Mrs. Frank Hoke and Mrs. E. C. Atkins Jr.

Junior League ways and means committee will have charge of the concessions. The money will go toward the individual members' portion of the Riley hospital occupational therapy budget. Mrs. Henderson Wheeler Jr. is chairman of publicity; Miss Frances Holliday, parking and concessions; Mrs. Frank Hoke, box committee.

Distinguished guests will have review duties, and they are Brigadier-General George Jamerson, Governor Paul V. McNutt, Senator Arthur Robinson, Mayor Reginald Sullivan, General Robert Tyndall, Adjutant-General Elmer Straub, Norman Perry, William Herschel, John P. Frenzel, Frank P. Manley, Mr. Lacy and General L. R. Gignilliat, who has promised the participation of the famous Black Horse troop of Culver Military academy.

"Come one, come all," the committee says "if you haven't a horse, come and watch those who have. If you don't live in Indianapolis, come anyway; you may win a prize for coming the farthest distance."

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

What is your problem? Write to Jane Jordan for a straightforward analysis and read your answer in this column. Comments from readers are invited.

Dear Jane Jordan—I've been married about three years and have a little girl. I was happy until my husband started letting a married woman ride home with him from work. He kept this up for at least two years. We lived in her neighborhood or it might not have happened. Recently we moved from there, but I found out it happened again.

I wonder if I'm doing right. I quarrel with my husband over this since I'm very jealous. I think this girl is decent and also my husband. He says it's nothing more than being accommodating. I wonder? Perhaps I imagine a lot that never happens.

My husband said that he would not tell me when he did it again to keep from avoiding any further quarrels. That made me furious. Do you think I gain anything by being quarrelsome and jealous about this, or would you try to forget and act as if I didn't care who rode with him or what he did?

DISCONTENTED WIFE. Answer—All quarreling over jealous feelings is senseless. Fidelity only can be given—never demanded. If your husband is faithful, your fears are groundless. If he is faithless then he already is lost and quarreling won't bring him back.

Jealousy is a sort of spiritual blackmail in which you force a person to play a painful part after he is satisfied with your love. A jealous person compels the one he loves to deceive in order to enjoy a little bit of freedom without angry scenes.

It is doubtful that the wish to be accommodating is the only motive back of two years of transportation. Your husband must enjoy the woman's company very much or he wouldn't permit himself to be bothered. After all why shouldn't any married man enjoy the companionship of other women?

The wish to talk to some one new and different is quite normal and natural to both husbands and wives. Nine times out of ten it would come to nothing except for the erotic interpretation placed upon it by a jealous mate.

When you, as an outraged wife, make yourself unpleasant, you unconsciously give the other woman an advantage which she didn't have before. With home turned into a harem, the rides from work with the woman become the only bright spot in the day. They are endowed with emotional significance, whereas before they only were harmless diversions.

Many wives condemn their husbands to a life of slavery by the simple expedient of overloving them. Apparently, if he is a great blessing to be profoundly loved, but in reality it is apt to prove a heavy responsibility. It binds the loved one to a fixed course of behavior in order to avoid hurting the one who loves. Therefore, the overpowering love that some women bear their husbands is only a convenient weapon for holding them in bondage.

The ideal relationship between husband and wife is the love which leaves each of them free to pursue other interests which can be compared from time to time to the mutual refreshment of both. Some degree of possession is, perhaps, inevitable between married people, but it should not be oversteered.

The wife whose first command is "Thou shalt not have any other woman before me," lacks the calm assurance which would permit her husband to expose himself to other charms whenever he felt the desire. She binds him to the everlasting sameness which is the universal curse of marriage.

Dear Jane Jordan—I have had several dates with a fellow who is five years older than I am. My parents object to my seeing him, although I have been meeting him outside my home. He claims he is in love with me and shows it in all ways. Do you think five years is too much difference?

BETTY. Answer—It may be that your mother instinctively distrusts the man and hangs it on his age because she can't put her finger on anything else. You should question your mother, and if the young man's age is her sole objection, she is being unfair.

It usually is considered an advantage for a young man to be a few years older than a girl. So much depends upon the temperaments of the people involved that it is impossible to make hard and fast rules. And, by the way, how old are you? If you're 15 or 16, I can see your mother's point.

Lamp Shade Fabrics 'Go' Feminine; Material First Used in Making of Shoes

New Vogue Creates Attractive Lighting Medium, as Proved in Display at Ayres; Parchment Used as Base.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

MATERIAL first used in the manufacture of summer shoes for women was the beginning of the new vogue in lamp shades, shown at Ayres. The loosely woven fabric was pasted on parchment, and found by one of the leading lamp designers to afford such an attractive medium for lighting that it was used extensively. The designer bought the material from shoe factories, and created the new shade idea.

The newest lamps are showing an adaptation of this idea, in various fabrics, fastened to parchment shades. One shown at Ayres is of a coarsely woven linen fabric, hand drawn, and pleated. Underneath it is gleaming parchment paper. Like most of the new shades, it is decorated with a Victorian bow. On a Victorian base of antique pottery, showing a grape relief, tropic cloth has been used in this same way, fastened to a foundation shade of parchment. Tropic cloth first was used as a drapery fabric, but has been found to lend itself admirably to the making of shades. Theatrical gauze, another drapery material, also is used.

Clair de lune, a thin, shining, china-like substance, is shown in the most graceful fluted designs in some of the new shades. One, of gleaming white, has a black cord laced through it at the bottom and top, and the decoration is a gray ribbon bow, faced with black. White still is the best color for lamps. It is shown in all-white designs, or in white bases, with colored shades. Alabaster bases stress the note of elegance in lamp ideas. This stone, taken from the earth in Italy, is so fragile that "fractures" in it are not considered as defects, but rather as marks of quality. In its natural state it is white or brown, but is sometimes stained delicate hues.

Mrs. Lindsay

Venetian Glass for Boudoir Lamps

BOUDOIR lamps are higher than those formerly used, so that they really have a practical use and actually throw some light on the face. Venetian glass has been used for the base of a pair of graceful boudoir lamps at Ayres. The secret of Venetian glass has been held in three factories through centuries of manufacture. It is passed from one member of the guild to another, and remains one of the fine arts. Workers in the glass factories in Venice model their products from artists' sketches, with accompanying scales of dimensions. These are fastened to the door of the furnace where the glass is blown. Each worker has a pot of color, which is fused into the glass as it is handled in a molten state.

Strauss Showing New Ties

IMITATING women, who have selected their fall colors from the rich shades of a generation ago, haberdashers now are making men's ties in fabrics of deep hues of purple and plum. They were introduced first in London, where they are known as "Fruitings colorings." L. Strauss & Co. is showing ties in these new shades, which are huckleberry, fig, plum, mulberry and cherry.

A unique demonstration for the woman who walks, but watches carefully for run-down heels, will be seen in Block's window Wednesday. A New York mannequin will demonstrate the application of the new "Fitz-On" heel lifts for women's shoes. They are extra little heel lifts, which fit on the heels of shoes much in the manner in which light fixtures slip into grooves. When the heel becomes worn, the old lift can be removed, and a new one adjusted, with no trip to the shoe repair shop.
