

INDIANA FARM LOANS SPURRED BY VAN NUYS

Federal Land Bank Agrees to Center Attention on State.

By Walker Stone
Times Special Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A drive to complete refinancing of farm loans in Indiana will be started next week with a force of 200 farm appraisers in the field.

Spurred into action by Senator Frederick Van Nuys, the Federal Land Bank of Louisville has agreed to center its attention on Indiana farm loans.

Two hundred new farm appraisers will be employed early next week and rushed through a four-day period of training. Of the 200, it is estimated at least 150 will qualify as appraisers, and, together with appraisers already attached to the Louisville bank, more than 200 men should be at work appraising Indiana farms by the latter part of next week.

Follows Wisconsin System

The procedure to be followed in Indiana is the same as that started in Wisconsin early in the summer, when a swarm of appraisers worked the state and speedily concluded action on all farm loan applications in Wisconsin.

Senator Van Nuys started harassing the farm loan administration here about a month ago when complaints began rolling into his office from Indiana farmers, who wrote that appraisals had not been made on loan applications sixty and ninety days old.

Indiana farmers also complained that appraisals which had been made were so low as to make a refinancing loan impossible. They said that the Louisville land bank was granting only so-called "edge loans"—loans that easily could be obtained from conservative private banks.

Train Appraisers Soon

An understanding was reached that the appraisers to be hired and trained next week will be instructed to make liberal appraisals.

Practically every farmer in Indiana whose farm is mortgaged will be affected, because the farm loan law authorizes loans to be made at 5 per cent, at least 1 per cent less than most outstanding farm loans—and over a long period of years.

Thomas W. Neely, chief appraiser of the Louisville bank, has been ordered into Indiana next week and organize the appraisal force. The "appraisal schools" will be set up in different cities over the state.

A BOOK A DAY
BY BRUCE CATTON

IN "The Paradise Case," Robert Hitchens undertakes to do two things: To show the slow deterioration of a lawyer who is so ill-advised as to fall in love with a lady who is defending on a murder charge, and to provide an atmosphere of horror and suspense which rises to a climax when the jury brings in its verdict.

His success, one must report, is only moderate. Perhaps it is because so many of the characters seem to be pompous and humorless asses. There is good entertainment in the book, but it is buried pretty deep beneath a lot of words.

Our lawyer is a successful British attorney with a brilliant record as defense counsel in murder cases. He is rich, popular, blessed with a charming and devoted wife, and all goes well with him until he is retained to act for Mrs. Paradise, who is accused of poisoning her husband.

His client first puzzles, then fascinates and finally entralls him. He wobbles and wavers, wrecks his own home, destroys his reputation—and, to cap it all, loses his judgment so that instead of getting his client off he sends her to the gallows.

Accompanying this is the slow crescendo of fear which Mr. Hitchens builds up. The judge who tries the case is revealed, bit by bit, as a sadistic monster; and the trial itself lays bare, slowly and ominously, a grewsome crime.

The final third of the book, in fact, is pretty exciting. The only trouble is that a lot of readers are going to stop before they get that far.

Published by Doubleday, Doran & Co., this book sells for $2.50.

FAIR PLAY FOR CUBA ASKED BY NEW PRESIDENT

Terms Warships Handicap to Peace Efforts, in U. S. Appeal.

By Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Through Scripps-Howard newspapers, President Ramon Grau San Martin of Cuba today appealed to the people of the United States for fair play for his government.

Ringed by American warships as the island is, he indicated, he finds himself handicapped at the task of restoring peace and unity in the republic.

Sinister forces are at work in Cuba, he charged, to block his efforts despite the fact that his government has the support not only of the youth of the island but of "all sound national elements."

"Misguided diplomacy," President Grau San Martin asserted, is backing the opposition to the present regime whose success will advance the cause of Pan-Americanism but whose defeat only can intensify the existing international problems.

But despite the Cuban view, Washington is in receipt of information leading to the conviction that but for the presence of the warships the comparative quiet which has characterized the revolution thus far quickly would be shattered by violent excesses.

The American warships, it is observed, offer a certain protection to the Cubans themselves. Were they to withdraw, Great Britain, France, Spain and Italy likely would send their own vessels to Cuba to protect their nationals, and that would add to, rather than lessen, the tension.

The True Story of MARY PICKFORD'S BROKEN ROMANCE!

MARY PICKFORD and DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS have gone their separate ways—while the world looks on with profound regret—and profounder wonderment.

In the heart of every thoughtful woman is at least a trace of personal concern.

For here apparently was the ideal union—on both sides charm, wealth, world-wide popularity and above all, a mutual love as deep as life itself, everything to make for life-long happiness. If such a marriage can go on the rocks, may not any other marriage in the world succumb to the stress and strain of life as it is lived today?

It was love at first sight. When Doug and Mary met they knew instantly that they must love each other. There never was a moment's doubt in either of their hearts. It was not even necessary to speak the words. Their eyes met—and it had happened.

The result was a union and a oneness such as the world has rarely seen between a man and woman—a marriage to which, when the black bird of scandal flapped its soiled wings over the heads of other movie folk, Hollywood pointed with pride and the comment, "Yes, but look at Doug and Mary."

Yet, into this apparently impregnable stronghold of love and constancy, insinuated itself a malign, destructive influence—into this modern Eden crawled a serpent which with fangs dripping poison, coiled itself to strike at the heart of the sweetest romance and the happiest marriage of recent years.

At last it struck—and the Fairbanks-Pickford happiness is dead—the greatest love ideal of the modern age is shattered.

Why? Was it another woman, or another man? What broke up the greatest of all screen marriages? Since the announcement of the bare fact of the separation, millions have asked these questions but until now there has been no answer. Doug and Mary and the few close friends who knew the facts have maintained the strictest secrecy.

NOW THE TRUTH IS TOLD

The complete answer is revealed for the first time by one who knows both Doug and Mary intimately. Entitled "The True Story of Mary Pickford's Broken Romance," you will find it in True Story for November on sale at all newsstands today. It is an amazing story, replete with thrills and smiles and tears—the intimate account of the valiant fight of a valiant woman for the things that life holds dear, the sort of fight that you perhaps have already made or some day may have to make. But to tell more would be to ruin for you one of the greatest true stories that have ever been put in print. Do not fail to read it—page 19 True Story for November.
