

Mrs. Herbert Woollen Is Hostess to Girl Artist Given Commission in City

Acquaintance Made in Italy at Studio of Florentine Master Is Renewed; Work of Pittsburgh Girl Gains Praise.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

THE Italian setting of Mrs. Herbert Woollen's home is bringing back memories to Marcela Rodange Comes, its guest. Miss Comes of Pittsburgh is the 26-year-old artist who was studying under Giovanni Romagnoli, the famed Florentine master, near Rome, when she met Mrs. Woollen.

Miss Comes' talent has been recognized internationally with prizes since that time, and she's in Indianapolis doing a commission. She's had many commissions since Mrs. Woollen first met her through Arturo Grassi, and her technique has merited the praise of many critics.

Always it has been in an Italian background that Miss Comes and Mrs. Woollen have shared their friendship, and their visit together now is the first since their contact abroad. The art, the antique pieces and architecture of the Woollen home are such as Miss Comes lived close to at Florence and Rome.

She remembers the picturesque Abruzzi mountains at the Antico Corrado art colony, where she was the only private pupil Romagnoli ever taught. Romagnoli won a prize in the international exhibit at Pittsburgh and acted on juries. Miss Comes was impressed by the master's art, and when she decided to study abroad she wrote to him and asked to be his pupil.

He consented, and she worked in a room near his studio and profited by his teachings and criticism. Some critics have praised the Italian sense of her art, her colorings—especially her golds and yellows—which they say are rich and ruddy like the Italian.

First Paintings Wins

Miss Comes, daughter of the late John T. Comes, who caused a renaissance in ecclesiastical architecture, returned from two years' study at the British Academy of Arts in Rome to win recognition with the first picture she ever exhibited.

The portrait was of her younger sister, Alice, and the freshness of the wistful, faraway look she caught in the portrait captivated judges of the celebrated all-American exhibit in the Corcoran gallery in Washington. The acceptance by this jury stamped her definitely with genuine promise, for the gallery is famed as a comprehensive test to American accomplishment.

Records Fair Impressions

Miss Comes came here from Chicago, where she painted the son of Daniel Burnham, one of the architects of A Century of Progress Exposition. She brought with her several water colors, her impressions of the fair, and her impression is spontaneous and pleasing.

She will return to Pittsburgh to continue work on a series of portraits of Pittsburgh women, who exemplify to her modern American young women. She is painting them in their natural setting, and when she finishes the group she will present it in an individual exhibit.

Garret Is Made Studio

Miss Comes works in a studio which was transformed from a garage. The architect of the apartment building where her mother lives is the owner. He appreciated the ideal setting of the garage for a studio. He put in a skylight, so with beams overhead, nooks and crannies all about, Miss Comes contributes her share to American art.

Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts at Carnegie Institute, hails her essentially as a colorist. Others have praised her feel for form. Her figures, they say, have the solidity of sculpture.

European Influence Wanes

Miss Comes believes that America soon will discover its own talent, and will be influenced less and less by Europe. "And the western artists will be the nucleus of American art," she predicts. "American artists are finding subjects in their own country, among their own people and affairs."

One of Miss Comes' favorite portraits is "A Swiss Guard" with which she won the "best portrait" prize in one of the exhibits of the Art Society of Pittsburgh. The portrait is of one of the pope's guard, who was induced to pose in his colorful uniform because he wished to learn the English language.

Jackety by Michelangelo

The uniforms are not supposed to be worn outside the Vatican, so he carried his helmet and jacket, designed by Michelangelo. Others in the studio and posed after Miss Comes gave him his English lessons.

Miss Comes painted the family's Italian cook in Rome as enthusiastically as she reproduced the likeness of Baron Wrangell, nephew of the leader of the Russian White Guards, and dozens of other prominent subjects.

She honestly is interested in painting something good. "If I can, I want to contribute something to American art. It isn't just money that I want as my reward."

Candidate Is Honored

Mrs. E. O. Paul and daughter Elizabeth honored Mrs. Robert Hicks, candidate for president of the Indiana Federation of Clubs, at luncheon at their home in Cambridge City, Saturday. The next district meeting will be held with Mrs. Nelle Brown in Rushville, Nov. 7.

Auxiliary Will Meet

Southern Club auxiliary will meet at 12:30 Friday with Mrs. Kennedy Reese, 1437 Fairview avenue. Assistant hostesses will be Mrs. W. H. Bobbitt, Mrs. W. B. Friehof and Mrs. J. F. Wilson.

Daily Recipe

HARVEST MOON FROSTING

2 egg whites, unbeaten
1 cups brown sugar, firmly packed
1-4 cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla

Put egg whites, sugar, salt, and water in upper part of double boiler. Beat with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, beat constantly with rotary egg beater, and cook seven minutes, or until frosting will stand in peaks.

Remove from fire, add vanilla, and beat until thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover top and sides of 8x8x2-inch cake.

Artist Is Guest in City

Marcela Rodange Comes

It's only been about six years since Marcela Rodange Comes of Pittsburgh was a student at Carnegie Tech school of fine arts, but since she left the school where she drew for the school paper, she has progressed with meteoric speed. She returned from Florence, Italy, to enter a picture in an exhibit, whose jury accepted it.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

What do you think of the situation described in the letter below? Do you agree or disagree with Jane Jordan's opinion?

Dear Jane Jordan—I have been married for eight years to a good provider. I have everything in the way of luxury that one could want, but my husband does nothing but nag from daylight until dark. Every thing I do is wrong. I can't please him although I have tried every way I know. He is not only that way with me, but with every one.

I met a man whom I am crazy about and wants to marry. I told my husband, but he has decided that he will do better, and I must stay with him. It is too late. I lost my love for him a long time ago. Now, here I am hoping that he will release me. I am supposed to stick it out. I doubt if he would do any better if I gave up this other man. What am I to do?

It may be that your lover is entirely sincere and really wants you for a wife. But what has that got to do with your decision to leave your husband? If your love for him is dead, I should think you would get out, whether you had another man waiting for you or not. It is a sin against the spirit to insist on the continued union of two human beings who are antagonistic to each other.

Your desire not to hurt your husband is laudable. But how much of it is due to the willingness to sacrifice your own happiness to his? And how much to reluctance to give up the economic security he provides? Fear of the unknown is another factor which makes you hesitate. It is curious how old habits hold, even habits which make us unhappy.

You are so accustomed to kow-towing to your husband and suffering under his criticisms that you actually find it difficult to forsake the subservient role.

It may sound a little hard, but I do not believe that a person who has made himself consistently unpleasant over a period of years deserves any consideration. John Cowper Powys (although I do not quote him exactly) says that people who darken the lives of those whose fate it is to live with them are bad people, and that he never hesitates to help their victims to escape. I should like to see many of our readers as possible to write their opinions on this subject to the column. Get your pencil and paper now.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am a young woman of 21, and I come from a refined German-English family of mentionable social standing and comfortable financial resources. I should like to marry within the next couple of years, to find a man as good as my father, and have a home as nice as the one I now have.

It seems that I can not find my man. I can not find one to fill my requirements, who shows signs of being ambitious and worth-while. I've looked everywhere! He's not in my business world, or even in our church society. All the young men are silly and shiftless. Where does one meet the industrious kind of man about 30 years old? Goodness sakes!

NOT A GOLD DIGGER. Answer—Usually the young lady who sets her heart on finding a man just like her father, is doomed to disappointment. I suggest that you try to judge the young men on their own merits and not insist too strongly on the paternal pattern.

Miss Shea Wedded to J. R. Hilger

Cathedral Scene for Marriage of City Girl.

Blue vases of fall flowers and greenery banked the altar at St. Peter and Paul cathedral at 10 this morning for the marriage of Miss Mary Helen Shea and James Robert Hilger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Hilger of Columbus.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah C. Shea, 1928 North Delaware street.

A wedding breakfast at the Indianapolis Athletic Club, followed the service. Members of the immediate families and the bridal party were seated at small tables arranged with centerpieces of yellow roses. A reception at the Shea home was held this afternoon.

Wore Velvet Gown

Bishop Joseph Chartrand and Bishop Elmer Ritter read the ceremony and Miss Helen Shepherd, organist, played traditional airs.

Miss Margaret Shea, maid of honor, appeared in a gown of Chinese gold velvet, fashioned with flared tiered skirt and ruffled shoulder line. Her turban, slippers and gloves matched her gown and her flowers were Souvenir roses.

Bridesmaids, Miss Claribel Ratterman of Cincinnati and Miss Margaret Hilger, Columbus, wore gowns of pale yellow velvet, fashioned like Miss Shea's. They carried arm bouquets of Tailsman roses.

Brother Is Best Man

Mrs. Shea, mother of the bride, wore black crepe and velvet. Both had corsages. Joseph J. Hilger was the bride's best man and ushers were Lawrence Sexton and Robert Leppert.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore ivory satin with slight train and bouffant sleeves. She wore a small cap edged with braided tulle, long tulle veil, and carried roses and lilies of the valley.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Markus and daughter Jeanne, and Mrs. William Kemp of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Hilger and Mrs. Joseph P. Hilger, Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Fleming and Misses Clara and Margaret Pierre, Moline, Ill.

Honeymoon in South

The couple left on a wedding trip south and will be at home in Columbus upon their return. The bride traveled in a brown suit with matching accessories.

The bride is a graduate of St. Agnes Academy and St. Mary-of-the-Woods college and Mr. Hilger attended St. Thomas Military Academy, St. Paul, Minn., and was graduated from Notre Dame.

DOMINO COSTUME

Of course you'll want to look mysterious — and just a bit spooky — though you may shudder at the traditional witches and ghosts. So wear a domino costume of black, dark brown or dark red cambric, adjust that high pointed hood at an intriguing angle, put on your mask, and there you are! Your very best friends will be baffled — which is half the fun of a masquerade party.

The domino is a slim, straight coat, with hip-length cap and hood attached at the neckline. It's one of the easiest costumes to make, and thoroughly in keeping with the spirit of all Hallow's eve. You can run it up in a few minutes, so don't be worried, even if the invitation is late. Size 36 requires 7 1/2 yards 36-inch material.

See the fall fashion book for costumes for all daytime and evening occasions, and for news of colors and fabrics.

'Slightly Cockeyed' Is Harper's Bazaar Tag for New Dress Accessories

Originality and Oddity of Articles Add Gusto to Feminine Adornment; Color, Fabric Combinations, Leading Features.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

THE current issue of Harper's Bazaar, which is devoted to the Paris openings, mentions with much gusto the accessory, which continues to be one of the most important items in women's adornment. According to this magazine, accessories are becoming so original as to seem sometimes even "slightly cockeyed."

One of the oddities shown in the Augustaberner collector was a pink leather belt, worn with an olive green dress. Augustaberner's belts are made this season almost entirely of leather, irregularly scalloped with a shears, to look uneven.

Gloves are of satin, moire, tweed, velvet, and are not supposed to fit smoothly, but to furnish a note of color or an amusing contrast. Bright red ones are worn with black evening gowns, and bright purple ones with white. Short gloves of pink velvet have a fringe of fine feathers around the cuff. All evening gloves, according to Harpers, are smarter if they end half-way between the wrist and the elbow, instead of higher toward the shoulder. Gloves and pumps may match, although this is not necessary.

Instead of the clinging satin with which we have been familiar, the new satin is so stiff it can stand alone. Sometimes, instead of being stiff, it is heavy and double faced, dragging over the hips in a heavy fashion. Chanel shows it faced with Canton flannel, to give the impression of thickness and weight.

Bracelets in pairs, as they were worn in Victorian days, are the "best taste" in jewelry. Jeweled clips are worn in the hair.

'Zip' Opens New Muff

ONE of the most unusual features of the new fashions is the color and fabric combinations. Lacquer red buttons are shown on a pale pink gown; flame velvet is combined with grey flannel; beaver and bright blue suede; a lemon yellow frock under a dull black coat, and mink in bands, used as ribbon, is shown on an evening wrap of dark, smoky green.

In the accessory shop at Ayres, some of these new notes are gaining particular attention. White chiffon handkerchiefs, edged with black ostrich feathers, are the finishing touch to exotic evening clothes. Other chiffon handkerchiefs, with sequin edges, are shown in bright colors.

Ostrich feather muffs, with velvet lined purses in the top, which "zip" open, are shown. To make a two-purpose frock of a formal, velvet cape collars, are shown in the accessory shop, to transform the gown into an afternoon frock. The collars are cut square, in a sailor-like fashion, with a deep ruffle around the edge. They are fastened with square cut pins in the new mirror jewelry.

Book Is Midget Radio

THE newest note in midget radios are radio cabinets which have the appearance of volumes of books. These are shown at Charles Mayer's inclosing the latest of the new tiny receiving sets, which now are equipped with a simple lever for short wave reception. The cabinet shown at Mayer's is, in appearance, seven volumes of biographies of musicians and authors, in imitation red and blue leather. The fronts open, showing the dial control, and the radio set can be placed on the book shelf, or on a table, in perfect disguise.

Doriot-Hess Nuptials to Be Solemnized at Bride's Home

The Rev. George Arthur Frantz will read the marriage ceremony at 8:30 tonight for Miss Marguerite Doriot and Herman H. Hess, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Hess of North Baltimore, O. The service will take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Doriot, 606 East Thirty-second street.

Palms, ferns, and a seven-branch candelabra will bank the fireplace. Mrs. Helen Harrison Dailey, harpist, will play bridal airs and Mrs. Paul Finney will sing "At Dawning" and "O Promise Me."

The bride, who will be given in marriage by her father, will be unveiled. Her gown of ivory satin is made with long sleeves and train. Princess lace from her mother's wedding dress will form the yoke and a Queen Anne collar, from which will fall her tulle veil. She will carry a shower bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

Mrs. Doriot will wear blue velvet and Mrs. Hess has chosen a grey crepe outfit. Both will wear gardenia corsages.

A reception will follow at the Doriot home, with the following assisting with hostesses: Mrs. William Hslet and Misses Jean Goulding, Phyllis Shipes, Harriet Henderson and Helen Hich.

Out-of-town guests will include Mr. and Mrs. Hess, parents of the bridegroom-elect, Mr. and Mrs. William Hess, Miss Edith Hess and Clyde Brown, all of New Baltimore, O.; and Mrs. Donald M. Higgins of Champaign, Ill.

The couple will leave on a wedding trip following the reception, the bride traveling in a brown tweed suit with brown accessories. The at-home announcement is for Indianapolis for Oct. 15.

The bride is a graduate of Butler university and a member of Delta Gamma sorority and Phi Kappa Phi, and Mr. Hess attended Wittenberg college, where he belonged to the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

NEW PROVINCE OFFICERS NAMED

New province officers of Chi Sigma sorority will be installed tonight at a meeting of the local council at the home of the former province president, Mrs. Charlotte Perrin, 1509 Shannon avenue.

Miss Winifred Kavanagh, former president of Omicron chapter, will become president, and Miss Irene Parrish of Psi chapter will be secretary. Miss Mildred Saffell of Omicron chapter, national president, will attend the installation.

Working Women Meet

Mrs. Florence Thacker, 2448 Pierson avenue, will be hostess for the meeting of the National Association of Working Women at 8 Thursday. Plans for reorganization will be made and Mrs. Ida Broo and Mrs. Thacker will report the national convention of the group. Mrs. B. B. McDonald will discuss the International Congress of Women, held recently in Chicago.
