

—Let's Go Fishing—
BASS FISHING IS REAL SPORT
FOR ANGLERS

Casting Becomes Favorite
Pastime at Indiana
Lakes, Rivers.

BY LEFTY LEE
Times Fishing Editor

Whatever reasons or excuses are given for going fishing the real reason is that it is good fun. Regardless of the kind of angler one might be any whether he uses live bait, artificial casting or fly casting the fact remains that bass fishing easily takes the top rank. There are many times that the angler gets out the old can of worms and hunts the popular blue gill but, in the majority of cases, he is merely doing this to kill time until he figures it is time for the bass to start striking. Of course, there are some anglers who do not go out until they think it is bass time and all of their fishing is devoted to this species of game beauties. But if you ever have fished the lake region of this state you will have noticed many boats leave the blue gill beds about 4:30 in the evening and pull for the shoreline or blind islands, and the occupants start casting. With the coming of the level wind reel, many fishermen, who were unable or not willing to secure the practice needed for the art of casting, this form of going after the wily bass has become the most popular. Thousands of fairly good casters are on the lakes and streams of this state each week. Some of the boys still stick to and swear by the live minnow bait fishing and some use the fly rod almost exclusively, but by far the major portion are addicts of the bait rod casting method. Bass time now is approaching in Indiana and, with the possible exception of the crapple, this fish will be hunted more than any other until the ice comes.

The bait caster's outfit should be simple, the rod, tackle box, and the means of landing a fish, either a gaff hook or landing net, the reel, line, and a few baits, and the angler is all set for the day's sport. Two or three casting flies, a couple of surface baits and a like number of baits that work under water should be ample. Of course, one should carry an extra line and a repair kit in the tackle box as it is possible you will get a hold on that big one that plays havoc with your rod and line before he gets away. Having the extra line and the means of repairing the damage at hand may save you hours of fishing time just when the fish are striking.

It just has been a short while since this column told you that Vern it was the champion when it came to bringing back the channel cat fish. You can imagine the shock it was when we were in the Shirley Brothers chapel Tuesday, and learned that the services being conducted were for Mr. Reed, the former champ. Mr. Reed had a host of friends among the fishermen of the city and state and they certainly will miss his hearty voice and that ever-ready smile, that was on tap even in a rainstorm when the fish were not biting.

One of the greatest private collections of fishing tackle in the city is in the possession of Emil de Luse of the Em-Roe Company. For the last thirty years this lad has been adding to his assortment and, at the present time has enough reels, rods, flies, home-made baits, and other fishing gadgets in his collection to keep you interested for hours just looking it over.

Hey, hey, you bass fishermen, don't any one ever catch a large-mouth bass? All of the entries in The Times bass contest to date are of the small-mouth family. We also have the same medals to present for the winners with large-mouth bass, so start turning in this species, or has the small-mouth bass received so much blowing up that you are now classing the large-mouth with the catfish and carp? Don't forget the contest closes Nov. 1, so be sure and get your entry in by that time.

Of course, the state and other championships are finished now, but the members of the Indianapolis Rifle and Pistol Club still hold their meetings each Friday night at the club range, in the basement of Tomlinson hall. If you are interested you are invited to take in these shoots, and we will tell you now, that the boys are good. There are no admission charges.

Broad Ripple Leads in Sky Ball Contest Teams

Scores of Children Flock to Stores Selling New Game.

Sectional rivalry has become increasingly intense in The Times-Em Roe Sky Ball Contest. From each district of the city came reports of a wealth of championship material quite capable of capturing not only the grand prize, the completely equipped Em-Roe bicycle, but also most of the other valuable prizes.

Thus a new feature is evolving in this fascinating contest-game. Where at first boys and girls were interested primarily from an individual standpoint, they now are concerned with upholding the integrity of their respective neighborhoods.

Broad Ripple youngsters are in the lead and new contestants in that district are daily swarming to drug stores and other places where Sky Ball rockets and balls may be procured. In order to facilitate future participants, The Times today publishes a list of dealers in the Sky Ball contest in the northeast section of the city.
They include:
Harbison Pharmacy, 1740 East Tenth street; L. A. Massey pharmacy, 2401 East Michigan street; Lyons pharmacy, 2725 East Michigan street; Daniel Drug Company, 3432 East Michigan street; Forsythe pharmacy, Emerson avenue and East Michigan street; Brown's pharmacy, Riley and East Michigan streets; Dopp's pharmacy, 4620 East Michigan street; Price pharmacy, 4101 East Michigan street; Gell's Drugs, 3750 East Michigan street; O'Brien's pharmacy, 2801 East Michigan street; Harbison pharmacy, 2302 Central avenue; Central Tire and Battery Co., Third and Central streets; Binkley pharmacy, 802 College avenue; Binkley pharmacy, 316 Third street and College avenue; Broad Ripple Sporting Goods store, 803 East Sixty-third street; Fisher's pharmacy, 5202 College avenue.

SMALL X-RAY MACHINE WILL AID MEDICINE

Portable Device Invented
for Use in Treating Cancer Patients.

BY DAVID DIETZ
Scripps-Howard Science Editor

The smallest X-ray machine ever built in the United States was demonstrated this week at the meeting of the American Congress of Radiology in Chicago by John H. Clough, president of the General Electric X-ray Corporation.

The little machine is an interesting contrast to the X-ray machine installed earlier this year in the Mercy hospital of Chicago for the treatment of cancer. That apparatus is the largest X-ray machine in the world.

America's smallest X-ray machine operates from an ordinary light socket, and, according to Mr. Clough, is shock proof and may be operated safely by a layman. It was designed by J. B. Wantz, one of the founders of the General Electric X-ray Corporation.

The unit contains a transformer which "steps up" the ordinary 110-volt current to 50,000 volts. Its current consumption, however, is only ten milliamperes.

Valuable in Hospitals
It is expected that the new unit will find use both in the medical profession and in industry. Doctors will find it valuable where a small portable X-ray is desired. It will be possible, for example, to carry it into hospital rooms when it is not considered desirable to move the patient.

Portable X-rays are finding many uses in industry. One is the examination of castings for flaws. The device can also be used by electricians, plumbers and other artisans who find it necessary to deal with the wiring or plumbing of buildings or houses. Instead of ripping out a piece of wall in order to explore it the mechanic can make use of the X-ray machine.

Other uses suggested for it are in government customs houses to examine clothing and baggage for hidden objects. It has also been suggested that the postoffice might use a portable X-ray for the examination of suspicious packages.

Danger Is Lessened
It is interesting to contrast this small X-ray outfit, easily carried about from one place to another with the setup at Mercy hospital.

The big tube at Mercy hospital operates at an electrical pressure of 800,000 volts and furnishes rays which would be equivalent to those of a mass of radium worth, at current prices, $75,000,000.

It is housed in a special wing of the hospital, the floor, walls and ceiling of which are lined with forty tons of lead. The patient, while under treatment, is placed in a special lead-lined chamber.

While it is said that a layman can operate the little tube without danger, it would be fatal for anyone to remain in the room while the big tube is in operation. Its rays are so penetrating that they would do terrific damage to an unprotected person.

Modern X-ray tubes are sometimes called Coolidge tubes. This is in honor of their designer, Dr. W. D. Coolidge of the General Electric Company.

SPAIN TO FIGHT FOR U. S. WINE MARKET

Expect Fierce Competition From France Over Trade.

MADRID, Oct. 4.—The National Wine Institute of Spain has announced it is preparing to launch a propaganda campaign in the United States in an effort to obtain a portion of the United States market, if prohibition is repealed.

The institute's announcement presages a keen battle for United States' business. The Spaniards, it is understood, will be willing to offer certain trade concessions in order to gain a foothold in the imported wine market. They also feel that France's war debt default will work against that nation.
