

Big Game Hunting? Ah! Lend Ear to Stories of Army Officer at Fort

Major J. K. Boles Has Repertoire of Tales of High Adventure in Philippines, Indo-China and Borneo.

By BEATRICE BURGAN Times Woman's Page Editor

Some one may dare to mount a mule at the saddle horse roundup Oct. 15 at Grege farm. Someone else may venture to ride with E. W. Kiger's side-saddle. That will be something to talk about afterward; perhaps something to soothe.

But it's for Major J. K. Boles of Ft. Benjamin Harrison, chairman of the awards committee, to startle the ears with stories of riding water buffalo in the Philippines on big game hunting trips.

To be exact, the animals are caribou, and they venture where horses can not survive. "You've never seen such mud as you'll find in the rice paddies," Major Boles said. "You might imagine the animals are boisterous, but they've been domesticated until they have respectable manners." After all, it might be safer to ride a buffalo than a mule.

Major Boles found it real sport to saddle a buffalo and penetrate the marshy depths in pursuit of timarau, which is one of the deadliest of the bovine hunted by big game enthusiasts. And incidentally, he put me right on the idea of a buffalo. What we think is an ordinary buffalo is a bison, he says. Buffalo or bison, let's still ride a horse.

Major Boles has done big game hunting in every country in which he's been stationed. In Africa, Indo-China, Borneo and the Philippines, he's shouldered his gun and defeated the deadly animals in life and death struggles. In his den at the fort, he has the head of a saladang of Indo-China, which recalls a mighty struggle. The foot of an elephant he uses as a door-stop.

Sights Mouse Deer Herd

One of the most exciting experiences, while not at all terrifying, was the sighting of a herd of mouse deer in Borneo. The deer are tiny, about the size of a tom-cat, Major Boles said. "For a minute I thought I was looking through the wrong end of my field glasses," he explained.

"I'd planned to save the hide to use on my desk, but after we'd released the delicacy of our dinner, I learned that the cook had utilized the whole animal," Major Boles said. "I didn't have another chance to kill one."

Wins Shooting Medals

Besides hides and mounted trophies, Major Boles has medals and cups, which were awarded to him in various international shooting matches. His most prized awards were won in 1931, in the international matches at Poland, when he was the only American competing. He won both the single and double shots in the "running deer" events, being the only man who ever won both contests.

Other contestants used double barrel rifles, but he stuck to his own, with which he had to throw the bolt to eject the empty shell and put in another cartridge in the chamber for the second shot.

Tapestry Is Trophy

But he was accurate and speedy enough to win with this disadvantage. The running deer is a target shaped like a deer. It is manipulated on a trolley and moves rapidly across the range, in leaps and bounds, up and down hills.

In the doubles event he was given an exquisite silk tapestry, interwoven with gold, a reproduction of a rare Polish tapestry. A large crystal cup was the award in the singles contests.

"It shines like diamonds when it's dusted," Major Boles said, with a twinkle in his eye. "But no one is allowed to move anything in my den. It doesn't always sparkle."

Daily Recipe COCOANUT DROP COOKIES

3-4 cup sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon combination baking powder
2 tablespoons butter or other shortening
4 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 tablespoon milk
1 cup shredded cocoanut
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, mixing well.
Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add cocoanut. Drop from teaspoon onto greased baking sheet. Bake in hot oven (400° F.) four to five minutes. Makes two dozen cookies.

Manners and Morals

By JANE JORDAN

The letter below deals with a very controversial subject. Jane Jordan solicits letters of opinion on both sides of the question.

Dear Jane Jordan — I was brought up in an orphan's home. At the age of 15 I fell in love with one of the boys. I was so dumb I let him know it, and he took advantage of me. When I awoke from my dream, as I call it, I hated him and all other men. Now I am 24. I have led a very clean life and never see the boy I knew at the age of 15. I can't feel that at that age I did anything terribly wrong.

Now I have met a man who has fallen desperately in love with me. I told him about some friend of mine (meaning myself, of course) and how she was jipped at the age of 15. He says it is best that she never tell the man she wants to marry about her affair. If I told him that is the girl he never would marry me. As it is, he can't understand why I keep putting off our marriage without giving him any reason. I want to marry him, but I am afraid he might learn the truth, though I don't see how he could. Please tell me what to do, for I love him.

Answer—The man himself has given you the answer to your question. Don't tell! He prefers not to know. Besides what earthly difference can it make? A biological

'College Inn' Shoe Shop at Marott's Opened for High School, College Boys

Unique Room on Second Floor Furnished in Typical Masculine Style, With Campus Atmosphere Stressed for Students.

By HELEN LINDSAY

REALIZING that the modern young man desires to make his purchases in an atmosphere thoroughly masculine, the Marott shoe store has furnished a most unique setting for the convenience of high school and college boys. This is Marott's College Inn, on the second floor of the store. It is built overlooking Washington street, and has been completely furnished in an attractive but simple fashion, in seventeenth century decorations. The windows are draped with bright-colored, loosely-woven drapery cloth. Leather cushions, in deep, warm red are on benches along the walls. Tables, smoking stands and chairs are of dull-finished oak.

In an attractive seventeenth century cabinet, a radio has been installed, through which young men are invited to listen to broadcasts of football games and other sports events.

Pennants of the Indiana colleges and universities are shown on the walls, which are finished in dull, mottled wooden panels.

Red leather lounging chairs, and others with attractive leather woven backs and bottoms, are grouped about a table on which are two lamps with shades on which polo scenes are displayed.

In the new shoe shop for every occasion are displayed, "Apparel Arts," a publication which is used extensively in advising on proper clothing for occasions, is kept there, with a marked section calling attention to the suitable shoes for different costumes.

Custom-Built Shoes Narrower

THE most unusual feature of young men's shoes, according to the authorities at Marott's, are to be seen in designs of genuine black seal, made with boot heels, like those on riding boots. Other interesting new fashion notes in men's footwear show the tendency toward suede, in brown and eel grey, and suede and leather combinations.

The last, which is suggested for young men, is a modified copy of the custom-built shoes affected by the well-dressed older men for several years. They are much narrower than shoes of former seasons, and are made on what is known as a "spade last." Shoes sold in the College Inn will bear an imprinted stamp showing the shop, and bearing the name "Marott's College Inn."

Ayres Opens "Prep Shop"

IN the Ayres store, young men of prep school age have been considered in the furnishing of the new "Prep Shop," where clothing of all kinds is shown for the young man from 14 to 22. Copies of clothing which is worn by older men and college men, specially sized for the young man of prep school age, are shown.

Prominent in the display are coats of the Balmaccan type, with raglan sleeves, wide full backs, and high Russian collars that button tightly about the neck. They are made of materials which are of suitable weight to be worn as topcoats, or in severe weather. They may be worn with belts, although the true Balmaccan style is a beltless model.

Double-breasted suits of banker's stripes, small checks and hounds tooth weave are shown. The best colors are browns, blues and grays. Corduroy coats, which are really "monkey jackets," are made with separate waistbands, pleated backs, and take-up straps on the sides and sleeves.

"Klikker" Shirts Shower-Proof

"K LIKKER" shirts are made of an all-woolen material, shrunk in the meat, they are shower-proof, and are made to fit snugly, so that they may be worn under sweaters or jackets.

Shaker knit sweaters are shown in Indianapolis high school colors, with matching toboggans, for sport wear. Cathedral's colors are shown in V-neck sweaters of shaker knit.

Oxford cloth shirts, with button-down collars, first made popular in the eastern colleges, are shown for high school boys.
