STREAMS CLEAR,
BETTER FISHING IS PREDICTED

Wardens' Reports Increase
Anglers' Hopes for Week-End.

By LEFTY LEE
Times Fishing Editor

The fishing over the week-end should be better than last week when the heavy rains muddied the waters in practically all the streams and riled up many of the lakes. As a general thing the lakes now are in fine shape and the streams rapidly are clearing. Here is the report as received from the wardens.

Warden Walker, La Porte—The lakes and rivers in this territory are higher and the fish are biting better. The warden also reports seeing a large covey of quail and that the pheasant released in this district are doing fine.

Warden Roth, White and Carroll Counties—Shafer lake is a trifle muddy. Lake Freeman is clear. Bass and crappie are biting in both lakes. Several large black bass were caught in Freeman and some fine silver bass taken at the Oakdale dam.

Warden Downey, St. Joseph and Elkhart—The St. Joe river is muddy. Better catches of fish are being made in the lakes, however.

Warden Havel, Rensselaer—The Iroquois and Kankakee rivers, Jungle Ditch and Beaver creek all are clear and some fine strings of bass, redeye and rock bass were taken during the week. Fishing is fine.

Warden Mass, Whitley and Allen Counties—Many fishermen were on the lakes this week and the fish really were biting. The crappie are biting good at night and the bluegill taken are very large. Many ducks also are coming in and the duck hunting should be good this year, as many ducks hatched and raised their young on the lakes in this region.

Warden Grossman, Wayne, Henry and Randolph Counties—Very few have been fishing the waters here during the last week—but the rivers and streams are clearing fast and should be in fine shape for the week-end.

Warden Park, Vigo and Vermillion Counties—The Wabash river is up and muddy. Brulette, Sugar, Big Raccoon, Little Raccoon, Big Vermillion, Little Vermillion and other creeks are clearing fast and should be in good shape for the week-end.

Warden Merideth, Fountain and Montgomery Counties—Coal and Shawnee creeks are clear but Pine and Sugar creeks and the Wabash river are high and muddy.

Warden Riley, Putnam, Owen and Clay Counties—Walnut creek and Eel river are murky, but all streams are clearing fast and should be o.k. for the week-end.

Warden Bennett, Martin and Davies Counties—Both forks of White river have been rising all week and are muddy but the fish have been biting. Bass, blue gill and cat fish were taken.

Warden Lacey, Decatur, Rush and Crawford Counties—All streams are in good fishing condition. This report covers big and little Flat Rock, and Clifty creek, McCoy's and Alen's lakes and the Big Four reservoir.

Warden Casady, Shelbyville—One of the most favorable reports of the season. All streams in Shelby and Hancock counties are clear and bass fishing is good. During the last week some fine catches have been made. Good outlook for the week-end.

Warden Thompson, Jackson County—Sugar and Young's creeks and Blue, Driftwood and White rivers are in fair condition and should be fine by Sunday. The anglers outnumbered the hunters in this territory during the week.

LAYMEN GIVEN 'BREAK' IN NEW COSMOS BOOKS

Briton Writes of Universe for Ordinary Class of Readers.

BY DAVID DIETZ
Scripps-Howard Science Editor

Sir James H. Jeans, brilliant British astronomer, has conferred a favor upon the world of intelligent laymen, by writing a series of books designed to explain in popular language the newer views of science about the universe.

First came "The Universe Around Us," setting forth the new views of astronomers upon the subject of cosmogony, the structure, origin, age and future of the universe.

Next came "The Mysterious Universe," in which, among other things, Sir James sought to develop the philosophical implications of modern cosmogony and to set forth some of his ideas about God.

Departing from mechanistic views of the nineteenth century which placed God as the engineer of a mechanical universe, Sir James depicted a God who was essentially a mathematician.

The next book by Jeans for popular consumption was "The Stars in Their Courses." This was an extension of a series of radio talks which he had given in Great Britain for the British Broadcasting Company.

It represented a brief popular survey of the facts of astronomy and was richly illustrated with many fine photographs.

The fact that all of these books leaped into the best-selling class was proof enough that the world of intelligent laymen was not unappreciative of Jeans' services. Now he has added a fourth book to the list "The New Background of Science." It is published by the Macmillan Company at $2.50.

I can say at once what I have said upon other occasions of Jeans' previous books, namely, that no layman can consider himself abreast

The modern world of science until he has read this book.

The mechanistic view in science that cause and effect were always discernible and that the universe followed the laws of mechanics may be said to have started with Kepler and Galileo in the sixteenth century. (Although Galileo's contributions were greater than Kepler's, we must not overlook the fundamental importance of Kepler's planetary laws.)

Sir Isaac Newton combined the work of Kepler and Galileo in his own three laws of motion and with his law of universal gravitation, marked out the path of scientific thought for the next two centuries.
