

FT. HARRISON'S CHIEF TO LEAVE

General Jamerson Is Given Leave of Absence From Service.

Brigadier-General George H. Jamerson, who has commanded Ft. Harrison since August 1927, has received orders from the war department giving him leave of absence, effective Oct. 25, prior to his retirement Nov. 30. General Jamerson relieved the late Brigadier-General Dwight E.

Aultman as commanding officer of Ft. Harrison and has been responsible for the many great improvements at the fort in the last few years. General Jamerson graduated from the United States military academy in 1903 and has been in the army ever since. He saw active service in France during the world war, commanding the 19th brigade of the Eightieth division. His brigade served with the British in the Artois sector north of the Somme during July, and participated in the Meuse-Argonne offensive from Sept. 26 to Oct. 9, 1918. General Jamerson was awarded the distinguished service medal for exceptionally meritorious service as regimental commander, 317th infantry, and later as commander of the 159th brigade.
