STATES STUDY NEW PLAN FOR LIQUOR CONTROL

Rockefeller Scheme Would Encourage Beer Use, Remove Profit.

BY WALKER STONE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The Rockefeller plan for liquor control by states, which is being unfolded in daily installments, is attracting nation-wide attention.

It is likely that this document, when published in full, will become the "Bible" of state legislators who believe that temperance cap and should be promoted by scientific government control of the marketing of alcoholic beverages.

No part of the plan seems to bear the imprint of the financier and one-time prohibitionist. Mr. Rockefeller apparently gave a complete free hand to the men he employed to make the study and recommendations—Raymond B. Fosdick, lawyer, and Albert A. Scott, engineer. Over a period of several months, Mr. Fosdick and Mr. Scott reviewed the history of liquor control activities in the nations of Europe, in the provinces of Canada and during the pre-prohibition era.

Habits Are Studied

By comparing the results of the various control experiments and taking into account the customs and habits of our "extensive, populous and heterogeneous republic, they evolved a scheme particularly flexible and thoroughly American.

Briefly summarized, as thus far revealed, it contemplates:

1. Minimum participation by the federal government in liquor-control activities.
2. Establishment in each state of a central alcohol control authority, which will be both a regulatory agency with power to issue license and prescribe the rules governing sale of beer and "natural" wines, and an operating monopoly with the exclusive right to sell heavier alcoholic drinks for "off premise" consumption.

Propose State Monopoly

3. Encouragement of the drinking of beer and "natural" wines by making it easily accessible, and its sale unhampered by unnecessary restrictions—the sale of beer to be practically without restriction, the drinking of wine in public places to be confined, if possible, to tables and with meals, and complete prohibition against drinking stronger liquor in public.

4. Elimination of private profit in the sale of strong beverages, and thereby the prevention of efforts to promote sales and stimulate demand, the purchasers of spirits and fortified wines to be accommodated through a system of "package" stores operated by the state monopoly.

5. Observance of the local-option principle, by allowing the state control authority discretion as to the local of its package stores. (For example, should a city vote wet and one ward in that city vote overwhelmingly dry, no store would be established in the dry ward.)

Guard Against 'Leggers

6. Responsibility on the part of wet states to prevent its liquor from overflowing into neighboring dry states, and also responsibility on the part of dry states to prevent their bootleggers from expanding their activities into wet states.

7. Relentless war against the bootlegger, not only by law enforcement, but also by ruthless competition. (For example, deliveries of legal liquor to drinking residents of dry areas would be permitted.

8. Levying of taxes on light drinks and fixing of prices on heavy drinks to be guided primarily with the view of promoting temperance and abolishing crime, and only incidentally for revenue purposes.
