

School Held at Ayres by Vote League

Groundwork for Discussion Groups to Be Laid by Classes.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

Women interested in things civic and political will have their opportunity today and tomorrow, when the Indianapolis League of Women Voters will conduct its annual citizenship school at Ayres' auditorium.

The league changed its custom this year. Instead of concentrating on one subject, the school has been prepared to present a background for a variety of subjects to be studied later in the Wednesday morning discussion groups.

Mrs. W. W. Ramsey, Chicago, who originated the technique for this type of school, has come here to lead the project. Mrs. Ramsey, vice-president of the Cook county league in Chicago, has studied extensively civic, political and educational subjects and disseminates her fund of knowledge in an easily understandable manner.

Daughter of Editor

Her father was a newspaper editor and her experience with a newspaper taught her to present important details in a clear-cut concise manner. Members of many leagues all over Illinois vouch for her ability to "put across" the significance of the subjects she embraces in her lectures.

The value of the school was recognized by Miss Elizabeth Watson, vice-president of the Indianapolis Junior League, for she selected it as one of the educational centers in the training course of provisional members of the league.

School to Lay Groundwork

Most of the members of the Indianapolis and Indiana Leagues of Women Voters will be in attendance today and tomorrow. However, Miss Florence Kirlin, Indiana league executive secretary, expects many women who are not affiliated with the voters' group.

League members and their guests who attend the discussion groups will approach with more understanding, for a groundwork will be laid at the citizenship school.

The first of these discussion classes will be held Nov. 1 when the subject will be "A New Deal and Where It is Leading Us."

Attendance Voluntary

Last year several of the leaders were brought from out of state, but an effort has been made to use local talent in the current series.

Attendance is voluntary, but the popularity of the undertaking last year indicated the universal interest of the members in civic problems. The aroused interest is militant, too, for the league does more than inform itself. It directs its knowledge in bringing about legislative changes. Once it forms a conviction, it's more than a guess that something will be done about it.

DUNCAN TO REVIEW BOOKS FOR WOMEN

Paul Duncan will begin a series of book reviews Wednesday for the applied education section of the Woman's Department Club with discussions of "Invitation to the Waltz" by Rosamond Lehmann, and "Beveridge and the Progressive Era," by Claude G. Bowers.

Other book reviews to be given by him on the third Wednesday of each month will be of "Sheltered Lives," by Ellen Glasgow; "Mathias at the Door," by Edward Abington Robinson; "Mozart," by Marcia Davenport; "Human Beings," by Christopher Morley; "Conquistador," by Archibald MacMish; "From Flushing to Calvary," by Ward Doherty; "Matiny on the Bounty," by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, and "Mary Lincoln, Wife and Widow," by Carl Sandberg.

CHURCH DINNER TO HONOR WOODARDS

Dr. and Mrs. Abram S. Woodard will attend a dinner at 6:30 Thursday as guests of the Meridian Street M. E. church. Dr. Homer G. Hamer, president of the church Men's Club, will preside.

H. Foster Clippinger Jr. will talk on his trip to the International Boy Scout Jamboree and Mrs. Howard L. Clippinger will present an organ program.

Mrs. L. A. Hurt is in charge of the dinner arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Harry O. Garman and a committee from the woman's association. Members and their friends may attend.

Sororities

Miss Roberta Waughtell, 2450 North Pennsylvania street, will be hostess for the meeting of the Theta Club at 8 tonight.

Alpha chapter, Omega Kappa sorority, will meet at 8 tomorrow night with Miss Margaret Wheeler, 1048 North Beville.

Beta chapter, Beta Tau sorority, will meet tonight at the home of Miss Marjorie Jean Taylor, 3420 East Twenty-third street.

Miss Pauline Watson is chairman of the progressive dinner to be given by Gamma chapter, Rho Delta sorority, tonight. She will be assisted by Misses Mary Ann Seale, Emma Kathryn Rupp, Virginia Glass and Dorcas Morris.

Directors to Meet

Mrs. Guy H. Shadinger will talk on "What One Mothers' Group Accomplished" at the meeting of the board of directors of the Mothers' council of Butler university Friday in the university recreation room. The board includes one delegate and alternate from each Mothers' Club on the campus.

Novel Use of Fur for Coats

A black velvet afternoon coat (left) by Lucile Paray has wide bands of silver black fox trimming which are detachable. The coat fastens all the way across in front and ties with a sash of self material. The sleeves are long enough to allow them to wrinkle fashionably at the wrist. When you want to wear a coat without fur, simply unfasten the band across the front and remove the caplet. Another afternoon coat (right) of gray velvet is an unusual model created by Worth. The large bow and the sleeves are of black seal.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

Jane Jordan invites letters of opinion as well as letters asking for advice. This is your column—join in the discussions.

Dear Jane Jordan—Eight years ago I was married to the son of a hotel manager in a small town. My husband and I lived at this hotel and I worked. One day a married couple came to the hotel for a room. A few days later the wife left to be confined in a local hospital, where she gave birth to a baby girl. The husband stayed at our hotel. I liked him from the start and made up my mind to get him. My own husband was a soda jerk and I wanted something better.

My chance came when this married couple came to the hotel. I won out. To prove his love for me he went to the hospital and told his wife the way he felt about me. Finally his wife left town and I lived with her husband. Our son was born. A couple of years ago she divorced her husband and I married him. Our happiness is complete. The ex-wife earned her own living and we pay so much a week for the child.

Should I allow this situation to bother me? Am I not entitled to happiness? You have such liberal views in regard to what is called morals. You stated a short time ago that our acts are summed up and judged by their results and not by the act itself. You also stated that only the ignorant would call an act foul when a man and woman live together without marriage. Please assure me that I have the good wishes of the intelligent, including yourself, of course.

H. R. Answer—Your account has not the ring of a true experience. It is such an obvious fraud that I use it only because it is such a remarkable invention, originating in your own feeling of malice toward those whose behavior does not comply with your standards.

I believe that the unthinkable situation which you sketch and the atrocious character of the woman you describe illustrates perfectly the average person's concept of unconventional behavior.

Your letter is all the more remarkable in that it was stimulated by an opinion which I gave on a situation as different from the one which you delineate as day is from night. A happily married couple who had anticipated their marriage in secret two years before it became legal without involving or hurting any one else, asked for an opinion on their conduct.

While I refused to approve of it because of the harm which might result to the young and foolish, I wrote as follows:

"To the pragmatic viewpoint, whatever works is right. Any act which raises the level of human happiness without interfering with the welfare of others is not regarded as wholly foul by intelligent people."

Salad Fine Basis for Light Meal

Meat Dishes Excellent for Lunches and Suppers.

Miss Ruth Chambers, whose articles start today as a daily feature of this paper, is a home economics lecturer and writer of wide experience. She is a member of the staff of the national livestock and meat board, has done considerable work in experimental cookery and is a devotee of the art. She will appear later in the city under auspices of The Times.

BY RUTH CHAMBERS

While salads which have their part on the dinner menu are usually an accompaniment to the main dish and are therefore light and designed to stimulate the appetite rather than to satisfy it completely, there is another category of salads which form an excellent basis for a lighter meal, such as lunch or supper.

These salads have meat as their basis, combined with vegetables, both starchy and succulent.

Cold potatoes or macaroni are used for the starchy ingredient or it may be supplied by the rolls, sandwiches or biscuits served with the salad. Potato chips may also accompany the salads which do not contain potatoes.

The dressings for meat salads are somewhat different from the light cream or French dressing of the dinner salad.

A boiled dressing or mayonnaise is better with these meat and vegetable dishes. If the ingredients of the salad are very rich, the boiled or cream dressing is preferable to mayonnaise.

Some Combinations

Here are some suggestions for salad combinations:

Cold beef, string beans, new onions, with garnish of tomato jelly. Corned beef, potatoes, carrots and celery with a garnish of gherkins.

Veal, cabbage and pimento. Lamb, celery and asparagus, with garnish of mint jelly.

Pork, celery, chopped olives, red peppers. (This is sometimes called mock chicken salad.)

Ham, potato and celery with tomato garnish.

Bacon, spinach and cold cooked eggs. Lamb's tongue, potato and endive with garnish of dill pickles.

Sweetbreads, celery and peas in cucumber cups.

The meat in these salads is given a more delicate flavor if it is marinated one or two hours with a dressing of one part oil to three parts vinegar, salt and pepper. The vegetables should be fresh and crisp.

Combine the ingredients and the salad dressing shortly before serving, blending well, but taking care not to mash the food.

Veal Salad

Cut cold roast beef into small dice. Add one-half the quantity of crisp celery. Marinate with French dressing. Chill in a cold place. When ready to serve mix with mayonnaise.

Season with salt, pepper and paprika. Pile in a mound on a platter garnished with lettuce leaves. Spread a little mayonnaise over the top. Garnish the base with sliced beets, olive rings and pimientos. Sprinkle finely chopped hard-cooked eggs over the top.

For variation, instead of garnishing with vegetables, surround the mound with slices of pineapple. This which has been sprinkled with cream cheese. The pulp of a grapefruit may be added to it and it may be garnished with sections of the fruit.

Sweetbreads and Celery Salad

Cut sweetbreads, which have been parboiled and blanched, into small dice and add as much diced celery. Marinate in a cold place until needed. Mix with mayonnaise dressing. Serve in a cup of crisp lettuce leaves and garnish with slices of sweetbreads coated with jellied mayonnaise.

Jellied Mayonnaise

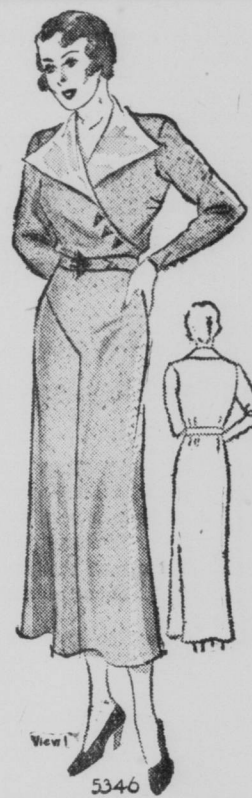

Soak 1 teaspoon of gelatin in 2 tablespoons of cold water for ten minutes; dissolve over hot water. Beat into 1 cup of mayonnaise. Before it hardens spread over the slices of sweetbreads.

This recipe will serve six persons. Tongue and Spinach Salad Cook 1 peck of spinach until tender; drain and press out liquor thoroughly. Season with salt and pepper to taste and 1 teaspoon of lemon juice. Pack in small tinable molds and chill. Slice cold boiled tongue and chill. Garnish each slice of tongue with jellied mayonnaise just before it gets firm and chill again. Unmold the spinach, arrange the tongue around it and garnish with lettuce. Top each spinach mold with mayonnaise.

SLNDERIZING MODEL

No woman wants to look her years—or her weight. Nor does she want to look coy in a frock designed for her sub-deb daughter. The answer is a frock designed especially for her age and size, yet youthful and slenderizing in every line.

Here it is—a perfect model for the larger figure because it has wide revers that accent her shoulders, thereby making her waistline look slim; and diagonal lines that do nice things to her bust and hips.

There's no secret about this frock's magic—it's easy-to-make. Sheer wool or the newly-smart bengaline will be excellent fabric choices—and you might choose both, in different colors, and make the same frock twice. For other easy-to-make designs for home or business, formal or sports wear, see our new fall fashion book.

Pattern No. 5346 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 bust. Our new fashion book is out! Send for it—put check here ☐ and enclose 15 cents extra for book. Price for pattern, 15 cents. (Copyright 1933, by United Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Arrival of Fall Brings Bridge Party Ensembles Display at Ayres Store

Accessories Exhibit Includes Many Valuable Suggestions to Aid Hostesses at Social Events.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

WITH the coming of fall, Indianapolis women are turning their thoughts to entertaining with bridge parties. L. S. Ayres has anticipated this season with ensembles of bridge necessities on their first floor, where they are displayed in booths. New cards, score pads, prizes and other novelties are shown.

Among the interesting features of the new bridge accessories are wooden novelties, made in Poland, in the form of ash trays, cigar boxes and candy jars. These are in old-world figures, brightly painted and cunningly designed. A new summary of the Culbertson system of contract bridge has been arranged by F. E. Buehlheide, Culbertson associate, and printed on scoring pads. Other summaries of the principles to be followed in contract bidding are printed in small booklets, to be carried in the purse.

In the collection of articles which may be used for bridge prizes, Ayres is showing figures in pearl and black lacquer. These are designed as ash trays, book ends and other figures suitable for the bridge table.

Cigarette snuffers, of chromium and bakelite, are shown in cunning animal designs.

Help Given Luncheon Hostesses

MRS. J. R. FARRELL, home consultant at the Banner-Whitehill furniture store, has prepared a series of suggestive menus for the fall and winter bridge parties. For the bridge luncheon, she offers a menu beginning with a sea food cocktail. Following this, Mrs. Farrell suggests chicken croquettes, peas, creamed potatoes, hot baking powder biscuits, spiced currants, frozen fruit salad with whipped cream dressing, pineapple cream cheese and crackers, and coffee.

Offers Menus for Bridge Parties

TAKING into consideration the tendency toward more elaborate meals served with cold weather, she offers suggestions for two elaborate hot buffet suppers for night bridge. One starts with a pineapple and grapefruit cocktail. Following this, the hostess may serve sliced roasted turkey surrounded with cranberry molds on orange slices, biscuits, a casserole of sweet potatoes and apples, lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers, cider ice, and nuts, cheese and coffee.

Another suggested hot buffet supper features caviar, cucumber rings, fruit juice cocktails, sweetbread and mushroom patties, surrounded with grenadine pineapple slices; Saratoga chips, chocolate ice box cake and coffee.

Simple Buffet Supper Suggested

FOR the simple buffet supper, to be served following the bridge game, Mrs. Farrell suggests cold cuts of meat, including chicken, tongue and corned beef; Swiss cheese, water cress, fan-cut pickles, olives and rosebud radishes, and coffee.

Next month will mark the second year of the home making center at the Banner-Whitehill store. Under its regime, organizations giving card parties have had the opportunity to use two social rooms at the store, where tea is served without charge.

The classes in the home-making center have been conducted along the line of laboratory work in universities. Mrs. Farrell also assists customers at the store in spending the money they have allotted to furnishings in the most suitable way. She advises them in what they can buy, with reference to how it can be used with the furnishings they already have.

Gift Shop Is Reopened

MRS. RENICK'S gift shop has been reopened at 15 East Thirty-fourth street, following the proprietor's return from her shop in Petoskey, Mich. The new location has been arranged attractively, with the sun porch used as an entry and display room. Glass shelves have been placed in the windows, where small novelties are shown.

Outstanding in the collection of suggestive gifts for entertaining, or to be used as bridge prizes, are pieces of hand-forged and hand-hammered aluminum. This group includes a large covered dish with a long handle, for the convenient serving of hot dishes; a large decorated hand-hammered tray, on which individual aluminum dishes can be arranged for the Sunday night supper, and other small pieces.

Small sequin purses for evening use, are shown in the shop. Another interesting new item is a collection of hand-painted, clay fruits and vegetables, for attractive winter table centerpieces.
