

SUBJECT GIVEN BY DRUELY FOR 'RUMP SESSION'

Special Assembly Sought to Act on Liquor and Road Laws.

Two points to be discussed at a Claypool hotel session of the legislators called by Senator Tholle W. Drueley, disgruntled Democrat from Boston, Ind., for next Wednesday are set out in the invitation letters dispatched from Drueley's farm, which was learned today.

Point of the meeting is to demand that Governor Paul V. McNutt call them into special session for these purposes:

"To amend a certain road bond moratorium law passed during the 1932 special session.

2. To establish a hard liquor control system to take effect after repeal, which will be early in December."

Drueley Voted Dry

Action on both points already is arranged by the state administration with the prime purpose of thwarting any special session demands.

Legislators declining to attend the meeting are raising two points of objection, which are somewhat personal. First objection is to the call coming from Senator Drueley, a Democratic insurgent, who voted dry, and then sought wholesale beer permits for friends.

Second point is that at a meeting of Democratic senators called by Senator Drueley at the Claypool Oct. 28, the keynote speaker was Representative Fred Galloway, Indianapolis, who is labeled by regular Democrats as being "completely out of the park."

Nov. 15 Date Set

However, the present Drueley letter carries the names of all senators who attended that meeting as being members of the committee calling the joint session to which both Republicans and Democrats have been invited.

The letter is dated Nov. 1, and reads, in part, as follows:

"At a meeting of several senators held Oct. 28, Indianapolis, it was decided to call a general meeting of all the members of both houses. This meeting is to be held Nov. 15, Claypool hotel, Indianapolis, at 10 a.m.

"The purpose of the meeting, among other things, is to determine if, in the opinion of the house and senate members, there is ground for asking the Governor to call a short special session."

McNutt-Ickes to Confer

The two points are then set out as reasons for the session call. On the road bond moratorium lifting, Governor McNutt has pointed out that there is no assurance that it could be done. He has tried to put over a plan of gas tax pledging to obtain public works funds for local road construction and will meet with Interior Secretary Harold Ickes in Washington regarding the matter at the time the Drueley meeting will convene. The day was selected by Ickes himself.

As to the liquor control, the Governor is given complete power to make any rulings desirable through the excise director under an opinion from Attorney-General Philip Lutz.

"Without religion there is nothing lasting in marriage," declared the Rev. Jean S. Milner, Second Presbyterian church pastor, in a lecture last night at the Central Christian church.

Dream of Indianapolis Symphony Comes True

Local Orchestra by Loyalty to An Ideal Opens New Season With a Splendid Concert at the Murat.

BY WALTER D. HICKMAN

IT seemed to me last night at the Murat that all of the dreams of Ferdinand Schaefer, conductor, and the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra have come true.

The fourth season, which opened last night, found the orchestra in the best form of its career in all of its sections.

Mr. Schaefer revealed a power of direction in his conducting last night which not only inspired the members of the orchestra but the audience as well.

The director exhibited a firmness of direction which caused the members of the orchestra to respond to his moods with the best results in the history of the orchestra.

The days of experimenting have gone and the Indianapolis Symphony today stands on its own merits as one of the most vital forces along cultural lines we have.

The director and every member of the orchestra deserve this praise because they not only have dreamed but have worked to make their dreams come true.

I sincerely believe that the splendid showing of the orchestra and the conductor last night guarantees the future progress of this organization.

The orchestra now knows that it can nearly fill the Murat with enthusiastic supporters, and I believe that capacity will be the rule on Tuesday night, Oct. 12, when Bonar Cramer, pianist, appears as soloist with the orchestra.

The first half of the program last night was devoted to Brahms' "Symphony No. I C Minor Op. 68." This is the most ambitious undertaking the orchestra has ever attempted. Many rehearsals found the members ready for the playing of this difficult symphony.

All sections responded in weaving a musical fabric of charm and beauty. It was a difficult assignment and the orchestra made a splendid showing.

The first part of the second half of the program was devoted to three songs for women's voices from Brahms' Op. 17.

The accompaniment was two French horns and harp. The singers were from the musical chorus of the Indianapolis Matinee Music scale.

Mr. Schaefer directed the unique and interesting compositions of Brahms. Both the singers and the compositions gave splendid variety to the program.

It seemed to me that the orchestra, as well as the conductor, struck its full stride while playing three of Brahms' Hungarian dances and the "Academic Festival Overture," Op. 80.

Especially in the waltzes, the orchestra caught the light and melodious beauty of the themes.

Last night was a wonderful night for the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra because it now has won the right to stand on its own merits.

Tonight at 8:15 o'clock at Caleb Mills hall in Shortridge high school the Civic Music Association will open its season with Uday Shanker and Simla in a program of Hindu dances and music.
