

CAFE OWNERS DELAY MOTION TO LEAVE NRA

Executive Committee Given Power to Order Down Blue Eagle.

At a meeting of the Indiana State Restaurant Association, at the Severin, yesterday—in which only thirty-six counties of the state were represented—the original recommendation to remove the blue eagle from restaurants operated by 1,275 members was held in abeyance.

The executive committee of the restaurant men's association was, however, given authority to order down the blue eagle whenever it may decide such a course is necessary.

Eighty delegates attended the meeting at the Severin and reported that local associations in twenty-eight counties have voted in favor of giving the executive committee the authority to use its own judgment in the matter.

Disapproval Is Voiced

Not all of the restaurant operators present agreed, it was learned, many of them voicing their disapproval of the recommendation to take down the blue eagle.

Edwin Hobson, assistant to Francis Wells, Indiana recovery director, told the delegates that local compliance boards had been instructed to use wide latitude in adjusting cases, where restaurant operators could not abide by the code because of high operation costs.

NRA Aid Warns Group

Hobson also warned the restaurant men that they were bound to co-operation with the NRA program by virtue of their having signed the President's re-employment agreement.

The action of the organization will be submitted to General Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator.

Operators of Charley's restaurant, 130 East Ohio street, which has been at that location since 1910, told The Times today that they had taken a firm stand against any proposed removal of the blue eagle, as recommended by the executive committee of the Indiana State Restaurant Association.

HAVE you ever seen a hand where the declarer had to get rid of some trump, even though he had no losing trump trick, so that he could discard a losing card on dummy's trump? Such is the hand that was sent to me the other day by Heman G. Geisert of Indianapolis, and I want to say it is one of the most interesting I have seen for some time.

When South opened the contracting with one diamond and his partner answered with two no trump, he knew he was going places with the hand, as the bid of two no trump practically marked North with two aces. After South bid club and North supported the club bid, South now felt quite positive that North's holding was at least four clubs to the ace, and the ace of hearts.

While the bid of seven might be termed optimistic, the grand slam bonus in rubber bridge is large enough that it pays to gamble.

The opening lead was the jack of hearts by West, which was won in dummy with the ace. Mr. Geisert in the South could see that his only chance to make the contract was to get rid of the ten of spades.

THIS looked rather difficult, especially when you see that the diamond suit will not set. But he proceeded to play the hand in the following manner:

After winning a heart with the ace, he led a small heart and trumped with the ten of clubs. He then led a diamond and won in dummy with the queen. He returned another heart and trumped with the jack of clubs.

Mr. Geisert then played his king of clubs and followed it with the queen, but overtook the queen with dummy's ace. He played the nine of clubs and picked up the last outstanding trump.

On the eight of clubs he discarded his losing ten of spades. This was one of the most unusual plays in bridge.

1 ♠	Pass	2 N. T.	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	5 ♣	Pass

A diamond was returned, won with the king the ace cashed, and Mr. Geisert ruffed another diamond in dummy with his last trump. Then he returned a spade, which gave him thirteen tricks for his grand slam.

More births and deaths occur at night than in the daylight hours.

We dedicate the following poem, "In Flanders Field," to Armistice Day and to those who made the supreme sacrifice. It was written by Lieutenant-Colonel John McRae, who died on duty in Flanders.

In Flanders Field the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky,
The larks, still bravely singing fly,
Scarce heard amidst the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago,
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved; and now we lie
In Flanders Field.

Take up our quarrel with the foe!
To you from falling hands we throw
The Torch. Be yours to hold it high!
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders Field.
