'STATE HAS NO LIQUOR LAW,' JUDGE HINTS

McNutt Will Have to Call Special Session, Is Baker's Belief.

PONDERS WHOLE ISSUE

Makes Informal Comment as He Studies Beer Act Case.

"I do not think we have any liquor law, and I believe the Governor will have to call a special session of the legislature," Criminal Judge Frank P. Baker said today in announcing he would continue until after Dec. 5 all liquor cases coming into his court.

The judge's comment was made when he continued the appeal case of Edward Turner, 1341 Kentucky avenue, who was fined $300 in municipal court three for selling beer without a license.

Explaining that he did not expect many appealed liquor cases, Judge Baker said he felt they were a matter for judgment after the date when repeal becomes official through certification of the states' votes to Washington.

Comments Are Informal

Judge Baker said he has not made up his mind on the liquor situation, as he commented informally in connection with his continuance ruling.

The judge explained that he has discussed the future of liquor trials with attorneys and has learned their opinions fall into two schools of thought.

One view frequently expressed to him, he said, is that repeal will abolish the state liquor control law and other regulatory measures. This contention, he said, appears to be based on the belief that the Indiana control act was predicated on the Volstead act.

Discuss Other View

The other view he has encountered, Judge Baker said, is that the state control act would be abolished, but that the medicinal whiskey act would remain in force and the handling of whiskey after repeal necessarily would be handled in drug stores alone.

"Summarized," the judge said, "the general feeling seems to be that there either will be a wide-open sale of liquor by any one or the sale will be confined to drug stores."

Before coming to Butler, Tackett started at Martinsville high school. In college he was regarded as one of the greatest back-guards ever developed at the local university. At present, Tackett is working as a salesman in Martinsville.

TRACK ELEVATION IS NEAR, LEAGUE SAYS

Rail Heads Confer With Mayor on Big Federal Loan.

Members of the South Side Track Elevation League today claimed success in sight for their plan to elevate the Belt railroad on the west and south sides, following conferences held with railroad officials in the office of Mayor Reginald H. Sullivan.

The plan, which involves a loan and grant of approximately $8,000,000 from the federal public works administration, and would give jobs to 5,000 men, was referred to legal departments of the city and county to work out a method of assuming the indebtedness.

Bacteria Which Destroy T. B. Germs Under Study of Experts

By United Press

SHELTON, Conn., Nov. 14.—Two tiny bacteria were viewed by tuberculosis specialists today as possible destroyers of tubercle bacilli, representing a new hope in the long battle against the white plague.

The growing of these types of bacteria, described as cocci and diplococci, was described by 1,800 physicians at Laurel Heights Tuberculosis Sanatorium by Dr. Stephen J. Maher, international tuberculosis authority, who developed the technique after twenty-five years of research.

Tuberculosis bacilli in human beings, cows, and some species of birds have been destroyed by these bacteria, Dr. Maher said. They are produced from the tubercle bacilli themselves by feeding the bacilli sterile milk through the Maher process.

The cocci and diplococci, while producing an acid harmless to themselves, are nevertheless "full of harm to the tuberculosis germs from which they are derived," Maher said.

Dr. Maher

"We have not as yet," Dr. Maher cautioned, "secured any convincing evidence from animal experiments that these cocci and diplococci have any preventive or curative effect on tuberculosis in guinea pigs or rabbits, but we have abundant evidence that these cocci and diplococci, whether derived fromavian, bovine, or very pathogenic human tubercle bacilli produce no harmful effect when injected into guinea pigs or rabbits.

"In itself, this is a very important matter if we are to consider any possible curative use of these cocci and diplococci.

"Despite its present accessibility, this new field contains, in the opinion of some of us, the long-sought and greatly needed specific cure for tuberculosis."

Believing greater research work would result if his discovery was placed in the hands of other specialists, Dr. Maher confided his secret to a number of New England specialists last July, he said. Other physicians were successful in developing the bacteria from the tubercle bacilli, he said.

Indiana NRA Progress Pleasing, Johnson Says; Plans Restaurant Study

Administrator Commends City in Interview With Times.

BY BASIL GALLAGHER Times Staff Writer

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 14.—A message of encouragement and satisfaction with NRA progress in Indianapolis was given The Times today by General Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, before leaving here for Washington.

In an exclusive interview snatched hurriedly between conferences with Governor Ruby Laffoon of Kentucky and Indiana NRA officials, the dynamic recovery chief praised the entire Indiana recovery program and talked briefly of freedom of the press, rugged individualism, and the restaurant situation in Indiana.

Through Edward F. McGrady, new assistant secretary of labor, General Johnson revealed that he may stop in Indianapolis during a proposed trip to the Pacific coast in two weeks.

Shows Signs of Fatigue

While a crowd of Kentucky politicians, officials, and autograph hunters milled around outside General Johnson's room at the Brown hotel here, following his speech at the Jefferson county armory, the representative of The Times was permitted a short, rapid-fire interview.

Heavy-jowled and jovial, General Johnson led the reporter through his suite and into his private bedroom.

The general showed signs of fatigue following his long trip through what he called "the corn belt." He pulled out his watch as the reporter began to question him and said, laughingly, "Three minutes, shoot."

"Situation Is Good"

The general was asked what he thought of the NRA situation in Indiana.

"Very encouraging," he answered in his staccato manner. "I haven't the comparative figures here to show you why, but I have been pleased with the work done in Indiana, and particularly in Indianapolis. I think the general situation in the state is very good."

"What is your opinion of the restaurant situation there?" asked the reporter.

"You mean that recommendation by the state restaurant association to remove blue eagles? Well, that broke after I started on this tour. I'm going to give that some personal attention when I get to Washington. Of course, you know that the President's covenant prohibits voluntary removal of the blue eagle."

Using Different Methods

"How about 'rugged individualism' like Henry Ford, general. Have you evolved any way of dealing with them?"

General Johnson asked which "negged individualists" were meant. When one outstanding person in Indiana, who might properly qualify in that category, was mentioned, General Johnson said he had never heard of him.

"Every 'rugged individualist' is an individual case," said General Johnson. "I'm using different methods on all of them to make them see the light."

How about all this talk of freedom of the press, general?"

"How about all this talk of freedom of the press, general?"

Welcomes Criticism

"That is something that needs a lot of elucidation," said the general. "The government has no thought of censoring the press. Since this trip, I have heard much talk of censoring the radio, too. You wouldn't think so, would you, when you hear harsh critics of NRA, like Milo Reno, Senator Hatfield and others on the air? I want to dispel that idea. The government welcomes constructive criticism."

At this point, a petite girl with alert brown eyes, dressed in a black velvet evening gown and an ermine wrap draped about her shoulders, appeared at the door. It was "Robbie"—Miss Francis Robinson—the general's secretary and "Cerberus."

Bull-etin Crash Frees Cattle and Cops Go Toreador.

A HURRY-UP call for bull fighters was received by police today when twelve head of cattle were turned loose in the 5700 block West Washington street, by collision of a truck with a horse and wagon.

Officials sent Sergeant (Toreador) William Marks and Patrolmen (Picadors) William Marks, and Oren Mangus to aid citizens of the vicinity in the roundup.

The volunteer cowboys had great difficulty in herding the cattle into a garage, particularly with one lame old bull, who objected strenuously when pushed too hard by pursuers.

Boyd Youngblood, 28, Evansville, a passenger in the truck, driven by Honest Sanders, 48, Evansville, sustained a broken ankle in the crash. He was treated at city hospital.

ASK ANNULMENT OF CITY GIRL'S MARRIAGE

Elopement to Kentucky Illegal, Father Asserts.

An elopement to Covington, Ky., resulting in the marriage of Evelyn Miller Sutherland, 16, to Monroe Cox, 18, of Covington, culminated today in circuit court with the filing of a suit for annulment of the marriage by the girl's father.

Charging that his daughter was under age and that the marriage was invalid because the laws of Kentucky provide that minors wishing to marry must have consent of their parents, Fred Sutherland, 1035 North Belleville, filed the annulment papers in circuit court today.

$270,000 in Bonds Are Reported Missing From Meyer-Kizer Bank, Judge Earl Cox Discloses

Search for $270,000 in bonds alleged to have disappeared from the defunct Meyer-Kizer bank shortly before liquidation was started in May, 1931, was begun today by Thomas E. Garvin, receiver.

At the same time Mr. Garvin and his attorneys, headed by Walter Myers, will continue investigation of a lead which was divulged in circuit court late yesterday afternoon, pointing to shipment of the bonds to Sol Meyer, former president.

According to Circuit Judge Earl R. Cox, the court received information yesterday that a bank messenger, accompanied by detectives, had sent the bonds, addressed to Mr. Meyer in Miami, Fla., in April, 1931.

Just after Mr. Garvin had asked yesterday for a continuance of the hearing until Thursday, in order to investigate "additional information," Judge Cox startled the crowd of courtroom by divulging that the purported missing bonds were the new developments.

LINDBERGH MAY FLY ATLANTIC

Planning to Cross Ocean by Plane Coming Home, Reporters Told.

By United Press

CALEDAS DE TUY, Spain, Nov. 14.—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were reported by American consular officials today to be planning a nonstop flight to New York from Lisbon, Portugal, their next scheduled halt.

The flight would be one of 3,000 miles across the southern Atlantic and, in the Lindbergh manner, would mark a new trail for westward nonstop flights.

An American consular attaché, sent from Vigo to give the Lindberghs any possible assistance, informed the United Press of the reported plan.

The Lindberghs slept aboard their seaplane off Caledas de Tuy in the river Mino that forms the boundary at this point between Spain and Portugal.

The Lindberghs planned to take off this morning for Lisbon, 235 miles southwest.

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh rose early and at 9 a. m. were giving their plane a final inspection preparatory for taking off presumably for Lisbon.

Portuguese and Spanish rivermen probed the river and marked a course for the take-off, so Colonel Lindbergh could avoid shallows and numerous rocks dotting the water.

U. S.-SOVIET PACT MAY COME FRIDAY

Successful Conclusion to Parley Expected.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Successful conclusion to negotiations on American recognition of the Soviet Union before President Roosevelt leaves Friday for a vacation at Warm Springs, Ga., was hoped for in administration circles today.

The negotiations assumed an informal character. Foreign Commissioner Maxim Litvinoff held himself ready for conferences either at the White House or state department.

It was indicated that resumption of formal conversations depended possibly on word from Moscow.

Involved in the negotiations were the broad subjects of debts and claims, propaganda and trade, with negotiators on each side officially silent.

It was thought likely that on both sides study was being given technical points raised at Litvinoff's Sunday night conference at the White House.

The possibility of increasing American imports of Soviet goods, to insure American credits extended to the Soviet, was understood to be under study on the American side.

ACQUITTED OF KILLING, FACES ROBBERY CHARGE

Stanley Parker Goes on Trial in Jack Werner Case.

Set free by a Shelby county jury on a murder charge, Stanley Parker began a fight today in criminal court against a robbery indictment.

Parker was charged with the murder of Jack Werner, Indiana avenue pawn broker, in an attempted holdup, in August last year. After his acquittal, he was indicted on a charge of robbing Mr. Werner, who died from wounds received in a gun battle with the bandits.

Prospects of obtaining a jury by the close of the day was foreseen by attorneys as the morning session ended. A venire of fifty prospective jurors had been called. Alex Cavins is presiding as special judge.

U. S. EMERGENCY RELIEF BOARD MOVES TO AID JOBLESS WOMEN AND GIRLS THROUGHOUT NATION

INDIANA DOOMED? IS DISASTER NEAR?

"Indianapolis must be evacuated—OR CENTRAL INDIANA IS DOOMED!"

IS this the mad ranting of a power-drunk mob of escaped convicts? Or is it the grimly serious warning of some fanatical arch-criminal, a thousand times more dangerous than the feared "Terror Mob?"

Police officials are worried. The federal government is taking immediate action. They are convinced that the warning notes are not the work of some harmless madman, but the product of a super-fine—some one with the power to carry out the threats of his deadly notes.

Already the first of these dangerous threats has been carried out. There has been a strange and mysterious bombing near Indianapolis.

Explosives experts can not explain the mystery. The notes warned of the time, the place, and the resultant damage with unerring accuracy.

The signature on the notes—all the notes—is "THE BLACK HAWK."

Who? What? Why?

INDIANAPOLIS—crossroads of the nation—impelled with imminent doom? Is it possible? Is it plausible? Can it happen?

IT CAN!

The Times is keeping close tab on every development in this amazing, startling case. Exclusively, The Times is carrying on its investigations with the federal and local police officials.

On Thursday, The Times will publish the first of an amazing, nerve-grIPPING series of the invasions of the "BLACK HAWK."

More details follow tomorrow.

But remember—

"Indianapolis must be evacuated—OR CENTRAL INDIANA IS DOOMED!"

R. Earl Peters Resigns, Enters Senatorial Race

Quits as State Democratic Chairman at Session Here; Announces His Candidacy.

Announcing his candidacy for the United States senate, R. Earl Peters, Democratic state chairman, today handed in his resignation to the state central committee.

His resignation does much to clear up the muddled Indiana political picture. Rumors of his resignation had been prevalent several weeks but Mr. Peters had denied that he had taken any formal action.

The resignation clarifies the situation because it brings more into the open the three-cornered fight between Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Governor Paul V. McNutt and Mr. Peters. Both the Governor and the senator are reported unalterably opposed to Mr. Peters' senatorial candidacy.

Marshall Williams, secretary of the committee, also resigned.

Mr. Peters recently obtained appointment of his brother-in-law, Fay Leas, as attorney for the receiver for the Old First National bank of Ft. Wayne. The chairman also obtained appointment of E. C. Miller, Ft. Wayne, as receiver.

Senator Van Nuys objected strenuously to both appointments, but Mr. Peters was upheld by Postmaster-General James Farley, chief patronage dispenser for the national administration.

The dispute between Mr. Peters and Governor McNutt dated from several months. It was brought to a head recently by organization of the Hoosier Democratic Club by McNutt cohorts.

The club was organized to collect party funds by assessing Democratic (Turn to Page Five)

Two-Sided Attack on Unemployment to Include Establishment of 'Resident Schools' in Cities.

DRIVE TO COST MANY MILLIONS

'No Group to Be Overlooked,' Says Director of Division, Working Under Orders of Harry Hopkins.

(Copyright, 1933, by United Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The federal emergency relief organization today extended a helping hand to hundreds of thousands of unemployed women and girls throughout the nation.

The attack on unemployment among women was two-sided:

1. The establishment of "resident schools" where girls and women will receive food, shelter, and clothing, while learning new trades or professions.

2. The creation of thousands of jobs in federal, state and municipal institutions, financed from $400,000,000 recently allotted to the civil works administration by the public works organization.

Heretofore, little has been done to relieve conditions among unemployed women.

Regular relief funds were available to those in dire need, but plans to create jobs for women and girls were shunted aside in the battle to give work to the heads of families on relief rolls.

Meanwhile the situation has become increasingly acute. It is estimated there are between 800,000 and 1,000,000 women in the nation without jobs.

Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, appointed blue-eyed, auburn-haired, middle-aged Ellen S. Woodward as director of women's work for his organization.

Some Cities to Get Several

Mrs. Woodward and members of her staff evolved the two plans which they believe will meet the situation until economic conditions become such that the nation's offices, factories and mills will reabsorb their women employees.

The "resident schools" are to be established everywhere they are needed. Some cities will have several. Others where the unemployment problem is not so serious will have only one. Under present plans, local organizations will provide the living quarters and the equipment while the federal relief administration will provide funds to buy clothing and food.

Cleaning, cooking and other household duties will be divided among the women and girls living at the school. Their activities will be directed by a "house mother," who also is receiving relief.

Trained secretaries, unable to find employment, will conduct classes in office work. Instruction also will be provided in other branches of women's work.

"Every effort will be made to fit every woman living in the schools for some job," Mrs. Woodward said. "In addition to the permanent schools, homes where girls and women may obtain food and shelter temporarily are to be established.

The second phase of the program calls for the creation of jobs in every field of women's activities. The women receiving employment under this program will be paid at the rate prevailing in their community for that type of work.

"We are going to create jobs from the top to the bottom," Mrs. Woodward said, "no group of women will be overlooked."

Millions to Be Spent

Already women are going to work as a result of the plan. Nursing schools where parents are taught child health, conservation and character development have been established in a number of states, giving employment to teachers, dietitians, nurses, recreation directors and domestic workers. Many more of these schools are to be established.

Sewing rooms where skilled workers repair and remodel clothing for use by the unemployed are in operation in twenty-two states. Additional rooms are being set up daily. In Los Angeles alone 3,900 women were given employment in fifty-seven rooms during October.

Thousands of librarians, stenographers and office workers will be given employment in city, county and state offices doing work which previously had been curtailed because of reduced incomes.

Teachers will receive employment in rural schools now closed, in teaching illiterates to read and write, in giving vocational training and instructing the physically handicapped.

The amount to be spent on this program has not yet been definitely determined, but it is expected to total many millions.

Lauds 'First Lady'

Preaching a text of "patience and faith" in President Roosevelt, Miss Mary Hughes, head of the federal bureau of public relations, rejoiced this morning when advised by The Times of the movement of the federal emergency relief organizations to help unemployed women.

"Although I have no authority to say so, I believe Mrs. Roosevelt has been largely responsible for this move," Miss Hughes said. "It is in keeping with her interest in the problems of women."
