

CHUCK KLEIN finally has received the long-sought break. The popular Indianapolis major leaguer, home run artist and all-round slugger, was sold by the Philly Nationals to the Chicago Cubs yesterday, moving from a financially-embarassed club to one with "plenty of tobacco in the old tobacco box." The Bruins, backed by the Wrigley interests, are well-heeled in the bankroll and Klein naturally will be cut in for a sizable hike in salary and also will be placed in a better position to perform in a world series while at the peak of his baseball career.

It is said more than $100,000 in cash was turned over to the Phillies in the transaction along with three players. Klein's long term contract with the Quakers expired this year and the guess is that he'll be offered in the neighborhood of $20,000 by the Cubs for 1934 service. His 1933 salary was about $17,000, it is said.

IT'S possible the wealthy Cubs will increase Klein's pay over the $20,000 mark as a gesture of implicit confidence in his ability to continue to knock down National League fences. The Hoosier Hercules was tops over all in both big leagues this year with a swatting record of 368. Next high was Jimmy Fox in the American League with 356. Chuck batted in 120 runs, scored 101 runs, and collected twenty-eight home runs, which was high in the National.

Chuck pounded out 223 base hits in 606 times at bat, and no other National leaguer was close to that achievement. He has been a star on the big line since breaking in and is only 27, which means he is good for many more years. The big fellow keeps in superb condition, and always is ready for heavy work when spring rolls around.

THE well-known Chuck "went up from nothing." After playing high school ball at Southport, he appeared with the old Keystone, a fast semi-pro club that played its games out on the bluff road. He also performed in local Saturday leagues and at one time was a member of the champion Indianapolis Power and Light nine. Klein stepped out into professional ball with Evansville, was sold to Ft. Wayne for a small sum and then rocketed to the majors, bringing a price of $7,500. Chuck was reared on a farm south of Indianapolis and later was employed in local steel mills, where life was always a burning question. He stands 6 feet, weighs about 175 and is of the blond type. Chuck's hobbies aside from shinning on the diamond, are hunting, fishing and bowling. When in the city, Klein may be found nearly every day at the Jess Pritchett bowling alleys. Pritchett is a former league ball player and has passed along many valuable pointers to the young diamond idol.

KLEIN made good with his bat during his tryout days with the Phillies. After joining them from Ft. Wayne in 1928. His record for the latter part of the 28 campaign in the majors was 368. In 1929, as a regular, he pounded the leather at a pace of 356 and in 1930 posted a mark of 386. The year of 1931 was his low mark, 337, but that kind of clubbing is better than most big leaguers. In 1932 the Hoosier climbed back to 348 and this year improved his figures to 368. His "life time" big league average, covering five full seasons and part of 1928, is .359, proving he has been consistent. It is said the late William Wrigley of the Cubs made a cash offer of $250,000 for Klein three and one-half years ago.

THE Klein deal is said to have been closed in August and kept under cover. However, reports went the rounds of big league circles, claiming an agreement had been reached between Cubs and Phillies. It was learned locally, today, that Klein had learned of it in advance of the official announcement. The players who will accompany the small for official announcement. The players who will accompany the small for official announcement. The players who will accompany the small for official announcement.

ALL aboard for Pickerville on the Perfect Picker Pete band wagon! It keeps rolling along! The new group of games for Times readers to forecast the scores appears below and the fan football experts are urged to oil up the old noodle and start slugging away. Twelve winners represented high last week, with three misses and one tie. Perhaps the upsets won't repeat, as of Nov. 18, and there will be a golden opportunity for the fans to sweep the entire field of sixteen games. Any way, it's worth the old try. Mark your forecast on the scores in the brackets after each team, attach your name and address and mail or bring to Football Score Editor, The Times, Indianapolis. Coupons must arrive before Saturday noon. The selection coupon will not appear after today. Clip and fill out at once. Happy landings!

Versus	Versus
Indiana ()	Purdue ()
O. State ()	S. Calif. ()
N. D. ()	Illinois ()
Michigan ()	N. W. Stern ()
Wisconsin ()	Minnesota ()
Iowa ()	Nebraska ()
Mich. St. ()	Detroit ()
Chicago ()	Dartmouth ()
Georgia ()	Calif. U. ()
Harvard ()	Yale ()
N. Y. U. ()	Carnegie ()
Syracuse ()	Army ()
Navy ()	Rutgers ()
Auburn ()

Name
Address

The Times' football selection coupons are being compared with crowd puzzles. At the time a grid fan sees one, he starts filling it out. The proof boy in The Times' composing room brought a coupon proof to this desk, accompanied by a second proof, with all brackets marked with scores. The cunning devil!

Hold Purdue Five Minutes and Win, Say I. U. Scouts

By Times Special
BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 22.—If Indiana gridmen can halt Purdue's first five-minute rush they may have a chance to upset the Boiler-makers.

That was the opinion that scouts, who watched Purdue in his earlier games, delivered to Coach Billy Hayes as the Crimson varsity and freshmen tangled in scrimmage yesterday, the rhinies using Purdue plays against the varsity.

Because they were defeated by Iowa, Purdue will come on the field here Saturday with the geniality of a wounded wildcat, was the verdict of W. H. Thom, assistant coach, who scouted the upstarts.

But for that matter, Coach Hayes is planning that the eleven men who line up in front of the Purdue powerhouse will be thinking of things other than tea parties.

His call for this week's training was "for men who can fight." Wendell Walker, full back, is out for the game. Charley Burton, Bob Keck, and John Leach are staging a scrap for his place.

Indiana students, faculty, alumni, and townspeople will gather at 5:30 Friday afternoon for a pep session, featuring fireworks and bonfires, and to be followed by the annual Pow-Wow banquet.

Fraternity and sorority houses will be decorated with Purdue and Indiana colors. Saturday will be Homecoming day here.

N. D. TICKETS IN CITY
Tickets for the Notre Dame-Southern California grid battle at South Bend Saturday are available at the Big Four ticket office, 112 Monument Circle. Railroad officials announce their ducaits call for good seats to the intersectional football feature.

For information call Riley 2442.

'Y' TANKMEN JOURNEY
Ten members of the Indianapolis Y. M. C. A. swimming team today journeyed to Huntington for a meet tonight with the "Y" tankmen there. Making the trip were: John and Billy Marchus, Dick Hunt, Bob and Jesse Kirk, Enos Frey and Harold Trulock. Fred Dickens, physical director, and Jim Clark, coach, accompanied them.

TURKEY SHOOT PLANNED
Riverwood Athletic Club will hold a turkey shoot at 12:30 Saturday afternoon at the club headquarters four miles northeast of Noblesville.

Prep Cage Fives Drill

Campbell Slashes Squad to Twenty Men; Irish Give Schedule.

Their moleskins in mothballs for another year, Indianapolis high school athletes are bearing down on their basketball training, preparatory to the opening of the prep cage season within the next two weeks.

Coach Tim Campbell sliced his squad of net aspirants yesterday to twenty men, indicating the time has been reached in the east side gym when warming up exercises will be abandoned for some detailed instruction in Tech's hardwood offerings this winter.

Tech Opens Dec. 2
Remaining on Campbell's squad are: Brooks, Cliff, Fais, Dobbs, Garten, Hair, Hutt, King, Lehman, Meier, Morgan, Morris, Mounts, Noffke, Ross, Townsend, Vollrath, Wall, F. Wright and O. Wright.

Tech opens the schedule Dec. 2, against Frankfort.

Several members of Manual's grid squad reported yesterday to Coach Oral Bridgeford for cage duty.

Among them were Constantino and Yovan, lettermen from last year's cage team. The Redskins held a hard workout yesterday. They open Nov. 28, against New Palestine.

Cathedral Drills Daily
Twenty-four men, of whom eleven were members of last year's varsity or reserve teams, are reporting daily at Washington's gym. The Continentals will begin the season at Plainfield, Dec. 1.

Cathedral's basketballers are drilling daily for the season opener against Brownsburg, at Brownsburg, Dec. 1. The remainder of the Irish schedule is:

Dec. 9, at Flora; Dec. 15, at Elwood; Dec. 16, Connersville; Dec. 21, at Brazil; Dec. 22, Jeffersonville; Dec. 23, at St. Mary's; Dec. 24, at St. Mary's; Dec. 25, at St. Mary's; Dec. 26, at St. Mary's; Dec. 27, at St. Mary's; Dec. 28, at St. Mary's; Dec. 29, at St. Mary's; Dec. 30, at St. Mary's; Dec. 31, at St. Mary's.

GIAMPAGNINI, Ill., Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Cliff Kuhn, lightweight guard, and Reg Krug, are being groomed to fill the Illinois tackle position left vacant by an appendicitis operation on Bart Cummings. The regulars scrimmaged against Ohio State plays yesterday for the first time.

Plenty of Work Ahead for Jones

Anderson Unsatisfied
Still no kicker could equal Jones' boots. So, when the Crimson team has to kick, Jones come back from his guard job, boots the leather, and trots back into the line.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Confidence in Irish Is Bolstered by Victory

Backers See Notre Dame Win Over Southern California
Possible Since Ramblers Ended Scoreless Games as They Downed Northwestern.

By Times Special
NOTRE DAME, Ind., Nov. 22.—Two weeks ago any trader in football futures who even whispered that Notre Dame had a chance to stop Southern California this fall would have been decorated as a prize humorist.

That was before Stanford rode the Trojan war-horse to a spill. Perhaps even five days ago an enthusiast who forecast even a tie for the Irish would have been spurned as a fit companion for the town dunce.

That was before Coach Hunk Anderson's lads shook off the jinx that nailed them up before the grid world as its most notable scoreless wonders.

But now that Notre Dame has finally crossed a goal line—and Northwestern's goal line, at that—the prognosticators who seek the label of inspired prophets are backing the Irish to hand the Trojans their second drubbing of the current campaign.

Paper Dope Favors N. D.
At least there is an excellent paper-argument to back them up. Stanford, conqueror of Southern California, was held to a scoreless tie by Northwestern earlier this year, and Notre Dame triumphed over the Wildcats, 7-0.

Since last Saturday confidence in the Ramblers is rampant again. Every one believes they have the power to conquer the nation's finest, some think they will put that power into its best usage against the Trojans.

Coach Howard Jones is placing a good portion of his hope for victory, he says, on a great midget half back, Irvine Warburton, who tips the scales at only 147 pounds, but has starred for Southern California in virtually every game this year.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

Fortune Paid for Hoosier

Anderson Unsatisfied
Still no kicker could equal Jones' boots. So, when the Crimson team has to kick, Jones come back from his guard job, boots the leather, and trots back into the line.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when the last whistle blows, he contends.

Anderson is handing out long drills in preparation for the game, which should draw a capacity crowd from the big Notre Dame stadium.

He still is unsatisfied with the results of his running attack.

Any team that advanced the ball 256 yards in one game—as Notre Dame did against Northwestern—should have had more than seven points to show for such gains when