Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

Whenever you have something to add to the advice you read in this column, write your reactions in a letter! The best letters will be published.

Dear Jane Jordan—My troubles are the old, old ones of a girl who has loved too wisely, but too well. I'll be perfectly frank and tell you that for three years I was the mistress of a married man whom I adored. I call it a mistress, but during that time I supported myself, although he was in a position to keep me in story book fashion if I had demanded it. At no time was I dependent upon him except for love and attention.

Within the last few months I have lost my job and him. Due to circumstances beyond our control we were separated and our relationship discovered by both his family and mine. I have been practically cast off by my family. I am endeared, that is all. He has told me never to communicate with him in any way again. That statement did what nothing else has been able to do. It killed my adoration of him.

But life is empty. Everything I have done for the last few years has been centered around him. I never dared make an engagement until the last minute because he might want me. I wore certain clothes, certain colors, said certain things, went certain places just because he demanded it.

I'm told I'm too smart to attract the normal run of young men. As you know, men like to think their women are beautiful but just a little dumber than they are. I will watch with interest to learn just what you think you would do in my place, and earnestly hope you can set me straight on a new course.

THREE YEARS LOST

Answer—No three years are lost that have been spent in learning. Even mistakes have value if they're educational. The important thing for you just now is to understand what happened to you and how to avoid making a similar mistake in the future.

To begin with your love affair with this man was not on a reality basis. According to your own confession you were not being yourself at all, but the woman your lover hoped to find in you. You acted a part, you dressed a part, you thought a part. Sooner or later a love affair founded on this basis is bound to fail, because it depends on illusion for its life instead of reality.

According to Jung, the Zurich psychoanalyst, every man has certain feminine characteristics of which he is completely unconscious. He goes about searching for a woman who symbolizes the represented feminine element in his nature. If this theory is correct, the chances are your lover saw in you only the feminine counterpart of himself. It was not the actual you whom he loved, but this feminine half of himself which he projected on to your person.

The story of creation in Genesis beautifully symbolizes man's unconscious need for a feminine personality. Eve is made from Adam's rib. She emerges as a part of himself and exists not for herself but as a helpmeet for man. In the early stages of her development, almost every woman strives to play this role. She does not conceive of herself as a separate entity at all, but only as the feminine soul of man.

Some women have a sort of genius for playing this part. They are girls who attract flocks of boys without knowing exactly how they do it. Every one is familiar with the little nit-wit who leads the men around by the nose, while her more intelligent sisters wonder why they are wall flowers. It merely means that she is the universal symbol of femininity for which men unconsciously hunger. Possibly it explains the enormous vogue of some movie stars.

Jung claims that the woman thus gifted is never a decisive personality, but a vague sort of person who acts as a mirror for man's moods. When he laughs, she laughs. When he grieves, she grieves. Always he sees the submerged element of himself reflected in her. He never conceives of her as a person in her own right, with ideas of her own. She lives in his accomplishments, but does nothing of her own accord.

This is what we mean by love which is based on illusion instead of reality. The lover who sees only himself in the beloved is doomed to disappointment. After all, woman has come a long way since the fable of Adam and Eve. She has discovered herself as a separate entity with a will and wishes of her own.

When love is on a reality basis, the partners do not seek to project their own unconscious values on to each other. Each loves the other for what he is and for the real values which he contributes to the union. They find a certain strength in each other which they could not achieve alone.

The next time you fall in love, subject your feeling to a more critical analysis instead of hiding your brains in order to play a part,

FOR RELIEF AND PREVENTION OF PERIODIC PAINS

Daily Recipe PLANKED GROUND BEEF

Season two pounds of ground beef with salt, pepper, minced onion, and Worcestershire sauce; bind all together with one egg beaten into one-half cup of milk. Form into a thick steak and cook for fifteen minutes in a hot frying pan, turning once during cooking.

When nicely browned remove steak carefully, to avoid breaking, to the center of a hot plank. Pipe a border of mashed potatoes around the edge of the plank. Arrange around the steak small cooked carrots and small white onions which have been boiled until tender and a little of the center scooped out and filled with buttered crumbs.

Season all with salt, pepper, and butter and put in the oven for ten or fifteen minutes until the steak is cooked and the potatoes are nicely browned.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Big Saving! No Cooking! So Easy!

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It takes but a moment to prepare, and costs very little, but it positively has no equal for quick, lasting relief.

From any drugist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils and children love its taste.

This simple mixture soothes and heals the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.
