

Junior League Members Turn Hands to Various Money Raising Projects

Teaching French, Selling Honey, Cakes, Books, Beer and Holly and Sponsoring Dances, Demonstrate Wide Range.

MEMBERS of the Junior League of Indianapolis were given an opportunity this year to test their ingenuity in raising money for their individual pledges to the occupational therapy department of the James Whitcomb Riley hospital for children. When league members were given permission to sponsor more than one money making project they began the planning for raising money without burdening friends.

Mrs. Robert Rhoads decided to cash in on her knowledge of French and she organized a group of ten who wished to improve their knowledge of the language. With Miss Pauline Shellschmidt as leader, the group has progressed rapidly and is planning to celebrate St. Nicholas day on Dec. 5 when they will indulge in French games and tea.

Mrs. Addison Parry remembered the delicious honey gathered from hives on the Parry farm. Her sales talk includes a mouth-watering description of the delicacy of honey with hot biscuits. She receives orders from friends and the league shop markets the honey.

Friends of Mrs. William Junglauss were delighted when they learned she had decided to make cakes and cookies for sale as a means of earning her quota. They, like the honey, are sold at the league shop. Miss Helen Fleischer is doing her share toward easing the meal planning problem, for she is selling Erna Rombauer's "Joy of Cooking."

The holiday season will bring a rush of orders for fruit cake, which Mrs. John Roberts Jr. is baking as her project. If you like English tea muffins, Mrs. Robert Hare promises to get them overnight from Boston.

Before ordering your beer, Mrs. Edward Norvell and Mrs. Dudley Pfaff ask you to remember that they're marketing a well known brand. If you need a miniature bar for your home, visit the league shop, which is displaying an attractive style being sold by Mrs. Thomas Harvey Cox. In addition, Mrs. Cox has been selling advertising for civic theater programs.

Holly Wreaths Sold
Mrs. Jeremiah Cadick urges her friends to make their homes festive with holly wreaths during the holiday season. Mrs. Clifford Arrick has sold season and individual tickets for the Martens concerts and dozens are working for Harper's Bazar debutante bureau.

Miss Betty Bertermann, a provisional member, has made appointments in different parts of the state to talk on flowers. Style shows in various stores give opportunity to several to raise their money. Mrs. Kurt Pantzer, Misses Jane Watson and Frances Holliday, Mrs. Conrad Buckelhaus and Mrs. Norman Metzger are popular models in style shows.

Mrs. Sylvester Johnson Jr., Mrs. John Gould and Mrs. Frederick T. Holliday are taking advantage of the Thanksgiving holiday to give a dance the night before at the University Club for young people home for vacation.

Two Sponsor Dance
Misses Jane Watson and Lois Graham will entertain with a subscription dance Dec. 22 at the Indianapolis Athletic Club. Miss Jeanette Craft and Mrs. Wayne Kincaid raised their quota early in the season with a dance at the Indianapolis Country Club.

The first annual saddle horse roundup last month at Gregg farm offered several projects for league members to sponsor. Many members, working under Mrs. Frank Hoke, Mrs. Henry C. Atkins Jr., Miss Holliday and Mrs. Warrack Wallace took charge of sale of boxes, programs, parking and concessions. The Boy Scout troop at Riley hospital provided an incentive for members who wish to save their pennies until the deadline in March. The Scouts designed miniature tin reproductions of the hospital as banks which serve as reminders to members to deposit contributions.

Children's Styles Show Trend With Costumes in Recently Released Films

'Little Women' and 'Alice in Wonderland' Pictures Reflected Strongly in Latest Displays of Fashions.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

CURRENT movies have had an effect on the styles for little girls, in much the same way that they have influenced the mode for mothers and older sisters.

Adaptations of "Little Women" and "Alice in Wonderland" styles are making an impressive showing in the advance fashions for girls. In adapting them from the actual costumes, attention has been given to the need for special clothes for holiday wear as well as more practical dresses.

Following the popularity of the "Alice in Wonderland" head bands and pinafore frocks for young girls, the demure styles of Meg, Jo, Beth and Amy are expected to hold an important place in the youthful fashions of the season.

Taffetas and velveteens are shown for "Sunday school wear" in long-sleeved dresses, some trimmed with braid and silk. One of the dresses shown in a recent opening selection was of checked taffeta, with a tiny short-sleeved jacket of plain taffeta. A velveteen model was made with undersleeves of white and was worn with a huge striped scarf tied in a bow.

Quaint checked and floral patterns are shown in wash materials in the "Little Women" styles. For girls from 7 to 14 there was a checked broadcloth with the skirt length accentuated by deep tucks, and the bodice made with a round yoke and a boyish collar.

Old-fashioned rick-rack has been used in the trimming of some of the girls' dresses shown for the coming season.

Mrs. Lindsay

Older Girl Has Wider Color Choice

WHILE the child from 2 to 6 still wears pastel shades, a more sophisticated choice of colors is shown for the older girl. Taffeta in a variety of colors is shown not only in entire dresses, but as trimming on many. For the very small girl, an unusual dress is of pale blue georgette, with upstanding collar of taffeta. The georgette is made over a slip of pink crepe. Navy blue taffeta is shown in another dress with epaulets and tie quilted in red.

Blouses are made of cottons, jerseys, taffetas and linens, in long and short-sleeved models. Bright colored jerseys are particularly popular now. One of these, recently introduced, is made with shirred shoulders, a deep pointed yoke front and back, and pin tucks to give fullness in front. It is fashioned with a round collar which fits snugly under the chin.

Russian Influence Also Felt

TAILORED blouses for young girls are made of fine wale pique, and are styled with collars that may be worn under pullover sweaters. Smocking has been used in decorative design on printed dimity blouses.

In addition to the influence of the "Little Women" and "Alice in Wonderland" movies on girls' clothing a tendency toward Russian styles also is being noted. The embroidery designs on many of the frocks are characteristic of Russian designers.

Fagotted yokes, extending over the shoulder in epaulet effects are shown in dainty, sheer fabrics. Tea rose has been combined with brown for children's clothing, and in one dress seen recently in the advance showings, a band of gold had been added around the waistline and the puffed sleeves.

Hand Work Trims Wool Robes

OF further interest in the latest news flashes on children's clothing, comment is made on woolen robes of tailored design. Hand worked touches have been used on some of the robes which are made of botany flannel, and elaborate tucking and feather-stitching are also shown on them.

Appliqued animal designs are shown on the pockets of the robes made for very young children. One model had a small sailboat design. Fabrics favored are blazer striped flannel and checkered blanket cloth.
