BY W. E. M'KENNEY

THE question recently was asked me, "Where do you get the hands you write about every day?" I get practically all of them from tournaments. I believe these are the best types of hands, since they give the bidding and play as they actually come up in good competition.

But I often have wondered what I would do for hands if I became ill—and now that I have been laid up in the hospital for a week, I have learned the answer to that problem.

My various bridge-playing friends, as soon as they learned of my illness, came in with interesting hands—hands that they thought might be used in the daily articles. We

FINNEY WARNS AGAIN
OF TAG DEADLINE

No Cars Without New Licenses After Jan. 1, Order.

Motorists were reminded by the state administration today that they had better include a pair of 1934 automobile license plates in their Christmas shopping.

All cars without new plates will be ordered off the roads on Jan. 1, for the first time since the license law was passed, it was pointed out by Frank Finney, chief of the automobile license division.

This decision for enforcement without delay was made by Mr. Finney and Governor Paul V. McNutt on the basis of time extensions being both unfair and contrary to the law.

The doctor brought up this point when you have a finesse that can be taken either way, how should you guide yourself in taking this finesse?

My reply was that in many such cases you simply do not bother with that finesse at all, but force your opponents to play the hand safely for you.

And so we laid out today's hand. Even though North holds 100 honors in hearts, he can not risk a vulnerable overall of two hearts over one spade, as it might prove very disastrous.

NORTH opens the king of hearts and follows with the ace and queen. West, the declarer, ruffs the third round with the four of spades. A small spade is led by West and is won in diamonds with the king. A small spade is returned. West winning with the ace.

The declarer already has lost two hearts and now must lose a trump trick. Of course, if he can guess the diamond finesse right, the contract is made, but there is nothing to guide him in selection of the diamond finesse—it is purely a guess.

Therefore, the safest way to play the hand is to lead a small club, win in dummy with the queen, and return the seven of hearts. South drops the four of diamonds and West, the declarer, trumps with the nine of spades.

Declarer then should take two more rounds of clubs and play a small spade from dummy. South discards the ten of clubs and North wins the trick with the queen of spades.

North is forced to lead a diamond, and it now makes no difference where the queen of diamonds is. The contract is assured.
