

Tudor Hall Fete Adds to Gaiety

Holiday Pleasure Seekers Face Continual Round of Festivities.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN, Times Woman's Page Editor

YOU'D think the home-for-the-holidays crowd would be ready to take the next train back to school. The way the debutantes and their swains are filling the days with dancing and dining would do most of us in, but they keep turning up at party after party, fresh and anxious for more excitement.

Many of them were eager for the Tudor Hall Alumnae dance last night at the Woodstock Club, for it meant seeing again their former classmates. The party, resolved into a reunion as alumnae greeted those they hadn't seen since summer, and even some since graduations.

Miss Sally Reard, member of the committee in charge, swept into the ballroom in a grey chiffon gown, with ruffles in the back cascading into a slight train. Vivid red velvet formed a soft girdle, matched in slippers.

Rich brown velvet was contrasted with orange bagheera flowers across the neckline in back of the dress, worn by Miss Betty Reed, and her assistant in arranging the dance. The long sleeves were open at the shoulders, and the back was slit to the waist. A roll of brown velvet with net cap formed Miss Reed's evening hat.

Miss Elinor Stickney's black crepe gown was scintillant with rhinestone trimming edging the arm seams and décolletage which was finished with lapels. Rhinestones glittered across the front of the dress.

Dinner Precedes Party

Fourteen guests went to the dance from the dinner party, given by Mrs. Pauline Moon Hauelsen for her guest, Miss Nancy Kidd, Owen, Wis., and Miss Judith Chambers. Miss Kidd's gown was of gold crepe. Miss Mary Jane Bennett, who was hostess at a dinner party, wore a white satin gown, with silver beading and embroidery on the cape sleeves. Her hair was arranged with a rhinestone tiara.

Miss Irving Moxley entertained with a dinner party preceding the dance. Her guests included Miss Polly Moxley, Shelbyville, Ky.; Misses Virginia and Mary DePrez, Shelbyville; Misses Eileen Becker, Janet Noyes, Ruth Lilly, Dora Sinclair and Benjamin Hardaway, Louisville, Ky.; William Pattison, Robert Smith, John Modrall, Samuel Moxley, John Bennett, Jay Appel, Charles P. Emerson Jr., Robert Rhoades, Evan Noyes and Richard Vonnegut.

Recall Club Founding

When members, alumnae and friends of the Corps of Cadets Tuesday night at the Woodstock Club, they were reminded of the club's founding twenty years ago. Since Nathan Gaston, Robert Chenoweth and Rod Herod, as high school students, were fascinated by the weird name for a dancing club, members have come and gone.

Rod Herod has wandered over Australia in his engineering work while Mr. Chenoweth has remained at home for his career. Ed Graham, who entertained his friends sketching, now amuses readers of the New Yorker and other humor magazines with drawings.

Bob Hollingsworth was another one of the former members, who helped solve the decoration problems for the annual Christmas dances. He daubed about then with his brushes, and now he's responsible for many of the attractive sets for city theater plays.

There has always been about twenty high school boys who have sworn to the ritual of the club. As soon as they finish high school they take back seats as alumni.

Ayres Shows What to Wear at Resorts

The warmth of southern winter resorts has been brought to the Sunshine Shop at Ayres in the new sport costumes. Miss Virginia Judd is shown at the left, wearing the new dressmaker type of bathing suit, of Peau d'Ange's jersey, in blue and white. With it she wears a Mercury beach cape in plain color and beach sandals with heels.

Miss Lucinda Smith, right, is seen in a horizontal striped sport dress, showing the new Mexican colors. She is carrying a plain colored flannel coat, which fastens in double breasted style with brass buttons, an off-the-face hat in white, and brown and white ghillies.

Mrs. Hughes Patten, another chaperon, was attractive in a royal blue crepe dress, designed with long sleeves. Edging revers in back were rhinestone buttons, matched with clips at the neckline. Mrs. Albert Wohlgenuth's gown was of printed chiffon.

Miss Mary Scott Morse wore a pink net dress over a satin slip, and Miss Clara Patton's gold crepe gown was contrasted with a brown velvet sash and trim tails on the sleeves.

Sequins trimmed the net capelet of the black crepe dress worn by Miss Sunshine Colby, visiting in the city during holidays at Principia college.

Long flowing white chiffon sleeves distinguished the black gown of Miss Peggy Chapin, who wore green slippers matching the dress sash. Ruffles trimmed the skirt and sleeves of the yellow taffeta dress of Miss Sue Anne Eveleigh. A plaited collar and sleeves drew attention to the blue satin dress of Miss Helen Hudgins.

'College Corner' Shows Sally Shop's Stock of Bright Wear for Dull Days

Lively Colors Include Aquamarine and Shades of Red; Peplum Effects and Belts Among Style Features.

BY HELEN LINDSAY.

DRESSES to brighten the winter days are being shown in "College Corner," a new department in the Sally Shop. The new colors are bright and lively, with aquamarine and varying shades of red for afternoon frocks. Prints are shown in all-over and bordered designs.

Many of the new dresses have peplum effects, and short belts reaching from the side seams across the back, fastening with large buckles. Necklines on afternoon frocks are high in front, and in many instances slashed in back, where they are fastened with a row of tiny buttons. Shirts and dresses for every occasion are seen, bearing out the earlier predictions in fashion forecasts that this type of dress would be accepted not only for street wear but for afternoon and dinner dresses.

One dress is shown in aquamarine with a peplum hip effect, trimmed with narrow bands of pleating. The sleeves have a flare of the same pleating from the elbows down. The neck is caught with a filigree pin set with a stone in a harmonizing color.

Many of the prints shown are in crepe. One of navy blue pebbled crepe has full sleeves of modernistic print, in which orange, blues and white are seen. A tie of the same print is at the neck, slipped through a spiral pin of antique gold.

Eleanor Blue Frock Is Attractive

THE college girl who plans to attend tea dances will be enthusiastic over an Eleanor blue frock. It is made of crepe, and has sleeves of small full ruffles, edged with silver ribbon. The sleeves are made of French chiffon. The neck is V-shaped both in front and back.

In the shirtwaist dresses, there is one of black crepe, with a white crepe blouse, designed with tiny gold colored triangles. Another is shown in brown, with crepe skirt and moire blouse. The neck is high, and has a turned down collar of the same material, cut wide, and fitted about the throat. It flares over the shoulders and has a matching ascot tie. The sleeves are long and tight.

In evening wraps, velvet, lapin and bunny fur are shown. One which will intrigue the college girl is a short adjustable cape of white lapin, with white bunny fur trimming. The cape fastens at the neck with white satin ribbon ties.
