

Orchestra of Indiana Is Unique

World's Only Symphony Group Functioning Co-Operatively.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN

THE Indiana State Symphony Orchestra, directed by Ferdinand Schaefer, has been praised as the most unique symphony in the world, because it is the only known co-operative orchestra of its kind. The musicians are willing to play for any sum which may remain after expenses are paid. The orchestra is entertaining for its fourth year and has gained wide recognition.

Sustaining members and subscribers are among those who support the orchestra, but Mrs. Herbert Woolen, for two years membership chairman, has had her own unique way of contributing. Annually she donates $100 to buy the scores used by the orchestra for a permanent collection in the music department of the Indianapolis public library.

The collection is named in memory of her father, Julius Woolen, member of a former symphony orchestra here. The cello he played is used by Miss Marcena Campbell in the present orchestra.

Up to date thirty-five scores have been donated to the library by Mrs. Woolen, also a sustaining member of the State Symphony Society, and various musical groups have borrowed them. The orchestra always has first choice, but the music is available at all other times.

In the "History of Symphonies of the United States," published by Earl Chateau last year, two pages are devoted to praise of Indianapolis' unique co-operative orchestra.

This winter, with Kreutzberg, she will dance the bolero at the Chicago opera.

Local society is wondering if it will be losing some of its members. Albert Beveridge Jr., for last week Mr. Beveridge, following in the footsteps of his father, the late Senator Beveridge, began his newspaper career in Lebanon. He is working for the Lebanon Reporter. At present he and his father are living at the Beveridge home.

Since Mrs. Beveridge, formerly Miss Elizabeth Scaife of Milton, Mass., has come to Indianapolis with Mr. Beveridge, she has become a busy young matron, enjoying all the entertainments of the symphony, the dramatic and Players Club and parties given by the younger set.

Mrs. Beveridge Sr. and Miss Abby Beveridge, her daughter, will sail soon for Germany. While in Munich, Miss Beveridge will study sculpture.

BRIDGE TOURNEY

Second play of the bridge tournament of the auxiliary of the American Legion, will be held tonight at the home of Mrs. A. H. M. Graves, 5879 North Delaware street. Mrs. Graves will be assisted by Mesdames A. H. Worsham, Charles Belling, G. H. Ream, Frank Friddle, Herbert Winkler, W. R. McGeehan and Hiram Stonelpher.

The auxiliary held an all-day meeting today at the home of Mrs. H. Nathan Swain, 3166 North Delaware street, when the group heard Mrs. Othmel Hitch describe her foreign pilgrimage with Gold Star Mothers. The group sewed for the Red Cross before a buffet luncheon at noon.

The hostess was assisted by Mesdames Claude Record, H. Y. Finch, H. K. Batchelder and Mrs. John Downing, president.

Madrigal Club of Technical High school, directed by J. Russell Paxton, will present a musical program. Proceeds will be used for the class' philanthropic work. Mrs. B. H. Bossart is class president.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

No Cooking! No Work! Real Saving!

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of water and one cup of sugar, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money, and it's a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Have a Hobby More Stamps From Hind Collection Will Be Sold

BY MRS. C. O. ROBINSON
Times Hobby Editor

NO philatelic event of the past year created as much public interest as the sale of the superb stamp collection of the late Arthur Hind. The public press as well as the philatelic publications carried news stories about it; a staff correspondent of a press association and reporters from leading New York and Philadelphia papers were assigned to attend the sale, and even Wall Street Journal considered it worthy of attention.

Arthur Hind was born in England, came to Clark Mills, near Utica, N. Y., in 1890 to establish a branch of his father's plush manufacturing concern, and became an American citizen in 1896. Because the small town of Clark Mills offered few diversions, Mr. Hind began to collect, and as his business prospered, the collection grew until when he died March 1, 1933, he owned one of the few exceedingly valuable collections in the world.

In several respects the collection was matchless as it contained many of the world rarities, notably the one known copy of the 1 cent

British Guiana Stamp

British Guiana, here pictured, the highest priced stamp in the world, catalogued at $50,000. In his unrivaled assemblage of "Postmaster" stamps, those issued by U. S. Postmasters before stamps were printed by the federal government, were included the only known copies of the 1846 Boscawen (N. H.) and Lockport (N. Y.) postmasters. The finest cover in the world, graced Mr. Hind's collection. It is franked with a 1p and 2p world's classic error, the "Post-office" Mauritius of 1847, pictured above, which are used as a basis of comparison for all rarities. The word "Postoffice" should have read "Postpaid."

CHARLES J. PHILLIPS, a noted New York stamp authority and Mr. Hind's friend, and Wm. C. Kennett, formerly Mr. Hind's philatelic secretary, appraised and arranged the stamps for sale. The collection was divided according to countries and a series of public auctions planned. The first auction, Nov. 20, at the Waldorf Astoria in New York, offered for sale the most complete collection of United States stamps ever gathered, including United States possessions and Confederate States stamps. Walter S. Scott, son of the founder of the American stamp business, was auctioneer.

Bids were sent from many foreign countries and the attendance set a record for a New York sale. Among the many noted collectors who added choice items to their specialties were Theodore Steinway, of piano fame, and Saul Newbury, Chicago.

The gem of the nineteenth century United States stamps, a 15-cent 1869, unused, with the picture inverted, went for $7,000 to Elliot Perry of Westfield, N. J., $1,000 above catalogue value. The Scott Stamp and Coin Company of New York gave $2,500 for a block of the famous 24-cent United States airmail of 1918 with inverted center.

Dr. Goethe Link of this city has one of these rarities. Warren Colson of Boston bought for $10,500 the 10-cent Baltimore postmaster stamp signed by James Buchanan, one of two known copies. The famous Boscawen went for $5,000 and the Lockport for $2,500, both considered rare bargains.

One of the finest items in the Confederate section was a cover which brought $5,400. It bore a pair of stamps issued by the postmaster of Pleasant Shade, Va., during the Civil war. Many southern postmasters issued stamps during the first four months of the war before the confederacy prepared an issue. These stamps not only are rare but of historic value.

MANY of the twentieth century commemoratives sold for far above catalogue price, probably to be treasured as mementoes of the sale. One unfortunate purchaser lost his valuable items, but since a record is kept of all sale of these rare stamps and certificates of title required, the finder would have difficulty disposing of them. Collectors wishing to have a record of the sale will find a complete list of prices in recent numbers of the magazine, Stamps, ending with the Dec. 30 issue.

The second sale, scheduled for April, will offer the stamps of Great Britain and British Colonies. This will include the Post-office Mauritius, but the British Guiana, which rightly belongs in the group, may not be offered, as it was a gift to Mrs. Hind. If it is placed on sale, the friends of King George of England who tried to buy it from Mr. Hind some years ago may be able to add it to the king's collection.

The European stamps, including the unequalled Spanish group with its startling Goya, will be sold in October, according to present plans.

Dispensing Mr. Hind's magnificent collection once it had been assembled, seems a sacrilege. Unfortunately no provision was made for enshrining it, intact, in a national museum.

However, the gems will find their way into other appreciative hands and grace other fine collections. Probably Mr. Hind, who had proved his deep interest and affection for his hobby by the time, money, thought and care that went into building his collection, wanted others to have the same enjoyment in acquiring the rarities.

Lighting Fixtures Made by Goldstein's Used in Widely Separated States

Indianapolis Product Also Popular Among City Folk; Electric Lanterns Here Are Largest in World.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

HOTELS, clubs and winter resort mansions in Florida; hunting lodges in upper Michigan, and homes and office buildings in Indianapolis are lighted by decorative fixtures made in Indianapolis. They are the product of the lamp and lighting fixture department of Goldstein Brothers, the only place in Indiana where fixtures and lamps of this kind are made. Goldstein's has acquired a national reputation for the individual designing of lights and fixtures.

The finest homes in Indianapolis are graced by wall brackets, chandeliers and lamps which are the products of the store's artists and craftsmen. Among these homes are the old Carl Fisher place, now the Park school; the Charles B. Sommers home on Cold Spring road, and the new home of William Kobin, which is being built on North Meridian street. Some of the most interesting lighting designs have been planned for the latter. In the children's room the fixture was originally planned as a ring with tiny, brightly colored porcelain figures around it. The idea was abandoned for a parchment shade in keeping with other decorative ideas of the room.

The fixtures in the Marrott and the Spink Arms are products of the Goldstein workmen. Huge nine foot lanterns, which light the Chamber of Commerce building, were made at the store. They were suggested by a New York designer, and the designs carried out by Goldstein artists. They are the largest lights of their kind in America.

Not only lighting fixtures and lamps are made in the department, but andirons and fire screens of hand-wrought iron and bronze. One design has been so well accepted that it has been ordered in duplicate for two summer homes in northern Michigan. A pair of andirons is the development of an idea taken from a pair of antique English irons which were brought in by a customer to be copied.

Not only are the metal parts of the lamps made in the department, but also the shades. One of the newest ones is made of desert cloth, much like monk's cloth, popular for drapery use. There is velvet hanging around the bottom of the shade.

Various Glasses Used in Shades

TIFFANY glass has been used in the shades of other lamps. One with a shade of this glass is a man's smoker lamp. The base is solid bronze, and a tiny gnome-like figure is perched in the bronze ashenry. The lamp has an attached electric lighter, and a swinging shade, which is adjustable for reading.

Handel glass is another composition used in Goldstein's new lamp shades. It is a heavy etched glass, not so opaque as Tiffany glass, and is put together with metal bindings.

Elaborate Venetian glass chandeliers are shown. They are imported pieces, which have been assembled in the store workshop. One is in a wide spiral effect, with colored Venetian glass flowers and leaves, in natural colors, decorating it.

One entire room of the department has been set aside for display of English types of fixtures. Among these are wall brackets, showing the linen fold design which is seen in Tudor cabinets of the same period.

Lamps of Oil Era Copied

ANOTHER room displays the fixtures and lamps of the American colonial period. They resemble small oil lamps, with hob-nailed glass bases, which are to be filled with colored liquid, in imitation of the oils used in pioneer days.

The old Cape Cod style of lamps is seen in this room, too, and lamps which have been copied from the old ones in which whale oil was used. Electric lamps of this kind were made by the Goldstein store to replace the old oil lamps originally used in the Lanier home, at Madison. Goldstein workmen copied the old lamps in the more modern ones, and the results of their work now light the old showplace.

A modern fixture, giving indirect lighting, is made of chrome plate with a hand-painted glass bottom through which the light filters. Five of these fixtures were installed recently in the Rivoli theater.

Patchwork Quilts Shown at Ayres

BEGINNING today, Mrs. Scioto Danner, of Eldorado, Kansas, will show her collection of interesting patchwork quilts at the L. S. Ayres store. Included in the collection will be quilts with which Mrs. Danner has won prizes at the Kentucky, Kansas and California state fairs, the Magic Empire Exposition and the Canadian National Exposition.

One of the most unusual quilts is the "Lady's Dream" pattern. The original is owned by Mrs. W. T. Harbison, Plattsburg, Mo. It was made by an ancestor of Mrs. Harbison's, and the story behind it is an amusing insight into the seriousness with which the pioneer woman took her quilt making.

The originator of the "Lady's Dream" quilt tried to find a new and original design. One night she had a dream, in which she saw the quilt she wanted to make in finished pattern. She awakened her husband, who obligingly drew the pattern of the quilt which has since been known as "Lady's Dream."

TRAVEL CHAPTERS TO MEET JOINTLY

Alpha and Edelweiss chapters of the International Travel and Study Club, Inc., will meet jointly tomorrow night at the Washington. Mrs. S. R. Artman will tell "The Story of the Rhine."

Miss Wilmoth Benson and Miss Dorothy Wirth will present a piano duet; Mrs. Margaret Smith will sing several selections, and Miss Nellie Gwin will give readings.

Phi Phis to Meet

Indiana Gamma Alumnae Club of Pi Beta Phi will meet tonight at the home of Miss Sally Bosman, 320 East Maple road.
