

Officials' Wives Win 'New Deal'

Picket Duty by Mate of Pennsylvania Governor Proves Point.

BY GRETTA PALMER
Times Special Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, appeared today in the picket lines of laundry strikers at two Brooklyn plants and in an address at strike headquarters urged strikers to stand firm, "according to a pithy little item in the papers. And with this news a death blow was struck to the old-fashioned belief that a woman must mince through life with infinite caution simply because her husband happens to be in public office."

Do you remember the days when no President's wife dared to express her views on a controversial matter because such evidence of opinion was not seemly in a "First Lady"? They were not long ago. Do you remember when it was considered politically dangerous for the wife of an official to speak to the press on any more dangerous question than the color of her inauguration dress? Then such a woman felt that she had gone as far as was safe, if she expressed complete disapproval of the man-eating shark.

Helps Explode Myth
Mrs. Gifford Pinchot and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt have put a stop to all that. They have exploded the absurd myth that a woman leaves her individuality behind her when she becomes an official hostess and that the main thing for her to remember is that she must never "offend" the prejudices of potential voters.

Now, a person whose entire attention is riveted on not offending any one is bound to be a pretty colorless individual. Not only must she keep her patrician trap shut, but she must avoid any activity which suggests the heedlessness to the most conservative of her critics.

It was Mrs. Herbert Hoover who first took the plunge and drove herself around Washington instead of sitting staidly behind a chauffeur and a footman. Yet driving your own car seems, to the emancipated mind, to be an activity that is neither vicious nor controversial.

Old Fear Vanishes

Wives of men who owe their success to their electoral popularity have been afraid to smoke in public. They have drawn back their skirts from the prospect of serving so much as a glass of legal beer. They have shied away from expressing an opinion more daring than a whole-hearted endorsement of motherhood and the administration. And now we have the picture of a Governor's wife in the picket line.

It is somehow, profoundly reassuring. It shows that women, nowadays, need not direct their entire lives in order to further their husbands' careers—that even when a man is in so ticklish a position as that of Governor, who must stand or fall by his popularity, his wife may dare to be herself and to let the world know what she thinks. Mrs. Pinchot undoubtedly will be criticized by scandalized Pennsylvanians, as Mrs. Roosevelt has sometimes been criticized for the many activities which crowd her days. But their departure from the namby-pamby position of official wives of the past is as courageous and admirable a step as the most ardent feminist could demand.

There are more precious things in the world than discretion. The outspoken expression of one's profound convictions, in the teeth of a critical world, is one of them, as Mrs. Gifford Pinchot is wise enough to know.

HAVE you ever been the dummy and been forced to sit and watch your partner, with an abundance of high cards, get blocked in one hand or the other, or fail to provide entries into the proper hand?

I often have said—and here repeat—that you must take inventory of your hand before carelessly playing a card. Don't waste re-entries—they may prove valuable toward the end of the hand.

Today's hand is not a difficult problem, but one that requires careful attention to every trick. Some players might prefer to open North's hand with one no trump. However with just a blank ace in the club suit and the diamond suit wide open, a spade bid is the better.

South is confronted with a problem over his partner's one spade bid. It is a question whether to support the spades or to bid no trump, because of the two kings.

However, due to the fact that North has opened with a spade, showing that he has a real hand, South's kings perhaps are in no danger.

The hand is not quite strong enough to jump to two no trump—one no trump may sound very weak—therefore it is better to support partner with a bid of two spades.

Sunday Sermon

MANY BLESSINGS GIVEN TO THOSE WHO NEED AID

Honest, Earnest Souls Derive Gain From Teachings of Jesus.

TEXT: MATT. 5:1-48

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of the Indianapolis Times

The kingdom of heaven begins in blessedness, and blessings are the portion of all who enter into it and who continue in it. Not blessings as the world too often counts them. Not the blessings of ease or of pleasure or of material satisfactions.

Jesus never promised to his followers, and to those who would establish the truth in their hearts and lives, an easy way. On the contrary, it was to these that he offered burdens and sacrifices and ways of service.

Our lesson begins in what have been called the Beatitudes—that is, the roll of blessings. It is instructive to study the blessings that are promised and those to whom they are offered. They offer to the persecuted and the harassed inner peace and satisfaction, but beyond this they express also great spiritual laws or compensations that are operative in life.

Offers Comfort Blessing

The poor in spirit—that is, the ingenuous, honest, simple, earnest souls, who are not concerned about worldly gain, or power, or anything that enables them to dominate over their fellowmen—have the blessing of the kingdom of heaven.

The blessing of comfort is offered to those who mourn. It is doubtful whether those who never have mourned ever have discovered the real meaning of comfort. There are spiritual satisfactions that one can know and understand only as one has felt the need of them through suffering and sorrow.

Perhaps the strangest of all the blessings is the pronouncement of the inheritance of the earth for the meek. It seems to contradict almost all the experiences of human life, where it is apparently the aggressive, and the selfish, and the exacting, who win the greatest rewards. But it will be asked whether the success of these is as great as it seems.

Many Inglorious Souls

It was this same Jesus who pronounced these blessings, who inquired concerning the worth of a man who had all the world, but who had lost his own soul. Surely the world is full today of people who have attained great world success, who seem to inherit the earth, but in whose lives there is little that makes the soul either glorious or worthwhile.

Does not experience, when we search into its meaning, reveal something of the truth that Jesus emphasized? The blessings upon the merciful, and the pure in heart, and the peacemakers, speak for themselves.

The framers of this lesson have shown insight and good judgment in attaching to the Beatitudes the closing verses of the fifth chapter of Matthew, which lay stress upon the good human life as like the life of God in the boundlessness of its love and magnanimity.

Spiritual Value Cited

This triumphant description of the good life is related closely to the way of blessing. It is a life in which man is lifted into a different atmosphere from that of worldly and selfish passions and interests. It is a life in which even toward one's enemies reconstructive powers begin to operate when one meets enmity not with enmity, but with love.

Selfishness never can conquer selfishness, hate never can conquer hate, but when one meets selfishness with unselfishness a foundation is laid for something new.

The cost is small; the service instantaneous; and the helpfulness unlimited. Any telephone employee will gladly take your order for telephone service!
