

Ruth Page Will Offer New Dances

Kreutzberg and City Artist to Appear in Chicago.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN

MRS. LAFAYETTE PAGE is eager to see the five new dances which her daughter, Ruth Page, and her partner, Harold Kreutzberg, will present in Chicago at their first recital of the season. The dancers will appear at Orchestra hall for the benefit of Emerson House, a settlement home.

Mrs. Page will go to visit her daughter Friday and will remain with her until Monday. Miss Page and Kreutzberg will tour the Pacific coast before they leave April 1 for a two months tour of China and Japan. Mrs. Page explains that Miss Page already has her admirers in Japan. About five years ago during the coronation ceremonies of the emperor, her daughter danced several celebrations. She appeared a month at the Imperial theater in Tokyo.

Admirers of Kreutzberg frequently have wondered why he keeps his head shaved. "Is it because he is eccentric?" they have asked. Or is it because he affects the fashion as appropriate for his modernistic type of dancing?"

At last he has relieved the public's curiosity. He says that about seven years ago he shaved his head for an important part in a Berlin opera house performance. Later he created some dances in which the shaved head was effective. He became accustomed to it as did others. Finally it has become a sort of trade mark.

He appeared once at a costume party with long Chinese braids suspended from his ears and a great red dot on his shaven pate.

Miami, Palm Beach and Nassau counties are a-dither because the prince of Wales has announced that he is coming from London to Nassau in February. Every cottage in the Bahamas group and rooms in Nassau hotels are being reserved for the days when the most popular bachelor in the world will be dining and dancing, swimming and deep sea fishing.

Visitors at Florida resorts are hoping that the prince will leave the coral strands of Nassau for a little sunning in the States. At any rate, many of his socially prominent friends are planning to entertain him.

Mr. and Mrs. Cortland Van Camp Martindale have joined Mr. Martindale's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Martindale, at their winter home in Miami, Fla., where they will stay for the remainder of the season.

Ranch life has lured Mr. and Mrs. William Ross Tell and their daughter, Mrs. Howard B. Mettel, to Arizona. Accompanying them was Mrs. Mettel's son, Robert Teel Papan. They will sail from San Francisco in March and cruise through the Panama canal to New York before their return home.

Contract Bridge Played at Club by Thirty-Six

Thirty-six attended the duplicate contract bridge play last night at the Little Knickerbocker Club. Open team championship of Indianapolis play will open tomorrow night at the club.

Winners North and South were Edson T. Wood Jr. and Fritz Schneider. T. C. Alexander and Mrs. Kay Coffin were second.

Don Brewer and J. E. Cain held top scores for East and West and Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Smith were second.

MISS DICK TO BE HOSTESS AT TEA

Valentine tea, Feb. 11, at the home of Miss Eva Dick, 301 North Bradley, will open rush activities of Beta chapter, Rho Delta sorority.

The committee in charge of the tea includes Miss Jeanne Starbuck, Mildred Stodghill and Dolores Harris.

A bunco party is scheduled for Saturday night, Feb. 17, at the Lincoln with Mrs. Kenneth Hibner and Miss Dick and Miss Ramona Bausman in charge. Supper and business meeting will be held Thursday night, Feb. 22, and rushes will be honored at a slumber party later in the month. Pledging will be held in March.

MRS. TODD TO BE HONORED GUEST

Mrs. Joseph R. Todd will be honored guest at a bridge party to be given tonight by Mrs. Frank Johnson Welch at her country home, Indian lake.

Guests will include Mesdames A. S. Catterton, Stanley Cain, F. Noble Ropkey and F. C. Goodrich, Misses Martha Bryan and Rosalind Woods.

A Day's Menu

Breakfast—Stewed dried apricots, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, fried cornmeal mush, syrup, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Beef broth with noodle balls, shredded cabbage and carrot salad, baked cinnamon apples, hermits, milk, tea.

Dinner—Meat and vegetable pie, iceberg lettuce with Russian dressing, canned peaches in raspberry jelly, coconut cake, milk, coffee.

Children Await Riding Tournament

The first children's riding tournament of the season at Bob Brown's riding stable will be held tomorrow night, when all the youthful riders at the stables will enter the ring in competition for three cups.

Mrs. Margaret Abram Feore, riding instructor, has made preparations for the tournaments which will continue monthly until spring. Among the children to participate are Letitia Sinclair, Cynthia Rice, Shirley Williams, Jo Ann Rice, Arlene Dalton and Lucius Hamilton.

Others to take part will be Barbara Hickam, Joan, Dorothy and Ab Metzger, Barbara Masters, Jane Norris, Jean McKibben and Jane Abraham.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

"It's a relief to tell it to some one," wrote the man whose letter is published below. Would you like the same relief for your pent up feelings? Then write your letter to Jane Jordan now!

Dear Jane Jordan—A worried man of family would like to have your opinion. I did not have a day's work for two years. Then by pulling all the wires I could, I got a ready workman's job at such little pay you would laugh if I told you. We had no place to live as we had fallen down on the payments on our house; so we took a cheap but roomy house for the rest of the loan, on payments like rent. I made it into a double by working at night and on Saturdays and Sundays. I have it nearly ready to rent and have had calls for it. I can get $20 per month for it and that will be two-thirds of my payment.

Now my son, 18, gets married to a girl of 16. We could have made trouble for them in 15 years. I presented their age. But we took them in as there was no one else to do it. My son has a part time job at $7 a week. I insist on his putting $1.50 in the bank, and he gives me $2 for the actual groceries they eat. That doesn't pay half, but I don't mind that. It leaves them $3.50 to spend.

The girl is always pouty and dissatisfied. She goes out every afternoon to window shop and tries on clothes she knows she can't get. She comes home and sneers at our furnishings and tells what she is going to get. I hope to God she does, and soon.

Now she has got it into her head that she wants to rent my double and put in some furniture her divorced sister has stored some place. She says, "You had as well rent to us as any one." That reads well, but I won't never get the rent, and I have got to have the rent or none of us will have a place to lay our heads.

My wife is soft and she says better let them have it or we will get a bad name for being trouble makers. I will let them keep their room, and my wife bought them a little table and set of dishes so they could eat alone if they want to. However, I won't have the girl's kin eating here with me. I don't object to her mother as a girl likes to have her mother, but I don't want a Coxey's army coming in and eating enough for six horses. There isn't one of her kin who has a job or who is very much worried about it either. I'll be darned if I let them have my double unless somebody convinces me that I am low down and selfish. What do you think?

J. W. B.

Answer—You are neither low down nor selfish, but only are showing the hard common sense which the rest of your family lacks. Unless some one keeps a firm hand on the purse strings, there won't be enough money to go around, and you'll have a load which you can't carry. If they haven't sense enough to figure this out for themselves, then you will have to set your foot down on their foolhardy plans and let them think what they will.

For the last few days I have been scoring stern fathers who rule their families with a rod of iron. It occurs to me that you have erred on the other side of the fence. In palmy days you were too indulgent. The result is a son who still expects his father to shoulder his responsibilities, including a wife whom he had no right to marry. Of course the boy is not to blame for the fact that he is a lecher. His naive assumption that his parents should provide for his wife is bound to be based on previous experience. He has not been trained to be independent, or to consider his parents. Parents who spoil their children when they are little can not expect them to become full-fledged adults merely because of their chronological years.

You are starting on your son a little late, but for his own sake, as well as your own, you would do well to stick to your guns. The young couple must be compelled to take the consequences of their own acts. It is generous of you to help them make a success of their premature marriage, but you can not do so by relieving them of too many of their responsibilities.

I see no reason why the young wife should feel free to invite guests to your dinner table. She has to realize that she is no longer a privileged daughter, supported by her father, but a wife whose husband must provide her pleasures. If he can not do so, then she must do without. Criticism of the home which so kindly added her to its burdens and feeds her from its slender stores is decidedly out of place.

Dear Jane Jordan—I have girl trouble. Up until now I have been very satisfied with myself. I am not of the nature that demands company, male or female. I've kept to myself a great deal and therefore am lacking in social ease to a marked extent. But now I've met a girl whom I like very much.

After remarking that it will probably not rain four or five times it becomes rather boring. What are girls in general interested in? My interests lie in boxing, horses and diamond mining. You could not expect a girl to be interested in these things. I would be most grateful for any hints of the right method of attack.

THANK YOU.

Answer—Girls in general are interested in love and marriage and personalities. But you want to study a particular girl. Ask her what she does with herself all day, what she reads, what her pet opinions are and so on until you get a line on her interests. If you care enough for her to make her interests yours, you will have something to build on.

Take her to a thoughtful, provoking show and discuss it with her afterward. All girls are interested in movies. Read some of the screen magazines and tell her the latest gossip about her favorite star. The news of the day is pretty exciting just now. If she isn't interested in what's going on, see if you can't stimulate her curiosity a little by your own comments.

Five Indianapolis Women Named as Most Clever in Selecting Clothing

Four Matrons and Miss Abby Beveridge Picked on Basis of Opinion From Several Sources.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

INDIANAPOLIS has at least five women who are outstanding for their clever selection of clothing, according to authorities. Following an announcement of Orry-Kelly's selection of the ten best dressed women in the United States, a survey was made of fashion-minded Indianapolis persons, to obtain a similar selection here. From a variety of expert sources, this distinction was placed on the shoulders of Mrs. Samuel Sutphin, Mrs. John Auderheide, Mrs. Norman Perry, Mrs. William Wemmer and Miss Abby Beveridge. Miss Beveridge is now in Germany, where she is studying sculpture.

Orry-Kelly, whose selection as reported in press dispatches occasioned the query here, is the head of Warner Brothers Pictures designing studios. Before taking up the creation of fashions for moving picture stars, he worked in a variety of arts which have given him an unusual background for designing. He was a painter of portraits and murals, a decorator of Park avenue homes and had a decade of success in stage designing on Broadway.

In his selection, through which, according to press dispatches, he "took his life in his hands," he named three New York women, two from Hollywood, and the rest from various sections of the United States. Here is his selection:

Kay Francis and Bette Davis, Hollywood; Miss Doris Duke, Miss Whitney Bourne and Mrs. Harrison Williams, New York; Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin, Chicago; Miss Charlotte Dorrance, Philadelphia; Miss Betty Edwards, Dallas, Tex.; Miss Marigayle Hopkins, New Orleans, and Mrs. John Garrett Eddy, Seattle.

Smartness Prevailed Over Extravagance

ACCORDING to Orry-Kelly, his judgment was determined by smartness rather than extravagance.

"These are by no means the most extravagantly dressed women in America," he said, in explaining his selection. "I prefer smartness to extravagance. These women know instinctively what to wear, and when to wear it—and know why they wear it when and where they do."

Kay Francis, in Orry-Kelly's opinion, keynotes Hollywood styles at their finest.

"She is probably the most cleverly well dressed woman in the country," the press dispatches quote him as saying. "Miss Davis has been picked from among the younger actresses as the one who, at the moment, has the most definite effect on style trends and fashions for young people in the country. The others on the list need no recommendation. They are known locally and nationally as women who always are smartly gowned."

Orry-Kelly's outstanding accomplishment in costume designing is soon to be seen in Indianapolis in the spectacular film, "Fashions of 1934," which will open at the Circle theater on St. Valentine's day. It is the first full length fashion film. Bette Davis is seen in the film in a variety of striking and spectacular costumes. She wears her hair in a shoulder length bob, and a number of the styles which she and statuette Vera Teasdale wear in the film were inspired by apparel seen in old prints and historical portraits.

Soldiers' Uniform Inspired Blue Suit

A COURTIER of cavalier days was the inspiration for a black dinner dress with a matching washbuckling cape. The square-backed lace collar in the old print becomes a dainty feminine accessory of fine linen and lace in the 1934 adaptation.

A military blue suit, with three-quarter length coat, was inspired by a Revolutionary officer's uniform. With it the mannequin wears a tricorn hat to match.

A tunic dress corded at the waist and worn with a hat which closely resembles a monk's headgear is Orry-Kelly's feminine reproduction of a monk's habit. The formal riding habit shown in the film was inspired by the portrait of a fox-hunting Irish squire, and a Tyrolean mountaineer's outfit has been copied in a sports ensemble made with a figured wool skirt, split slightly up the side, a white blouse with high round neckline, topped by a velvet sleeveless jacket with buttons down both sides.

Indianapolis Athletic Club to Be Host to Wives and Daughters

One of the outstanding events on the calendar of the Indianapolis Athletic Club for February, will be the party for wives and daughters of members, to be held in the Venetian room at the clubhouse Thursday, Feb. 22.

Honor guests for the party will be the wives of members who have joined the club within the past year.

Entertainment will include athletic contests to be held in a ring erected in the Laurn dining room. Two annual dinner parties will be held Feb. 12 and Feb. 22 in commemoration of the birthdays of Lincoln and Washington.

Mrs. Shepard in New York After Trip to Britain

By Times Special

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Mrs. H. C. Shepard, Indianapolis, arrived yesterday on the S.S. Aquitania from Southampton, where she has been visiting friends for the last two months.

Before leaving for her home she will visit in the city for several days. Mrs. Shepard had as fellow-passengers, Walter Hullahen, president of the University of Delaware; Jonathan Cape, publisher, and Jeffery Farnol.

Miss Melissa Wadley and her father, Scott C. Wadley, Indianapolis, were aboard the Aquitania when it sailed last night for a thirty-three-day cruise to the Mediterranean and the Holy Land.
