

Women and Economics Hold Stage

Seven of Twelve Books on Single Shelf Devoted to Feminine Sex.

BY GRETTA PALMER
Times Special Writer
NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Nowadays there are two subjects which certainly command the human intelligence. They are women and economics.

Looking over any civilized bookshelf, one is astonished to find to what an extent the role of modern woman is involved. One is also astonished to discover that our future, in terms of wheat and oil, is being wisely discussed on all sides. Looking over a shelf of our library and without cheating we find seven titles in which the word woman is involved, out of a possible twelve. That, mesdames, is high marksmanship. It means that we, as a subject for controversial writing, are pretty fancy stuff.

Great Progress Cited
And, as a matter of fact, we are. For we have made more tremendous strides toward achievement than any other group within the memory of the current generation. Women, if you remember, were conspicuous some fifty years ago as the little ladies who gilded fly swatters as a decoration for the home—in a word, they were the complete intellectual washout. Today they have changed somewhat.

Today a woman like your humble servant can, without shame, admit to running a woman's page. Today a woman can confess that she lives in a woman's hotel without fear of being accused of being a perfectly splendid force in the W. C. T. U. movement.

Today, in a word, a woman can express an interest in the progress of her sex without any intimation of her being a shudder of sweetness and light, or a prude.

Economics Interest Many
There was a time, not so long ago, when nobody talked economics except solemn young men with Ph. D.s and radicals. Those days have passed. Now, any one with a vestige of interest in current affairs must evince some appreciation of the experiments under consideration in our nation's capital. And, by the same token, everybody today who is alive to contemporary happenings must be awoken to the fact that woman is a brand new element in national affairs.

Perhaps she will be a permanent institution. Perhaps she will not. Nobody can tell. There have been too many ages in which woman was thoroughly negligible for the most sanguine feminist to predict what will happen now.

But we are, quite obviously, in a state of flux and change, so far as woman's status is concerned. And it behooves nobody to be too cocksure on what the outcome is bound to be.

"Perhaps Women" as Sherwood Anderson said in his last book—meaning that the idealism of the race might find its final hope in womanhood. Perhaps we must accept a less glorious future. But one thing is certain that it is an exciting and unpredictable thing to be a woman in 1934.

This is the kind of a frock that one wears and wears. Its flattering diagonal lines and the tiny bit of ruffling are important style notes. Easy to make.

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

BY W. E. MCKENNEY
Secretary American Bridge League

NATURALLY, when a pair is vulnerable and you believe they have bid too high, you are anxious to double, to gain the large award for defeating a doubled vulnerable contract. However, just because you have a lot of trump is not enough justification to double.

A good rule with which to govern yourself when making penalty doubles is, "Do I have more than one way of defeating this contract?"
For example, if you have a sure trump trick and what looks like a good side trick and the contract is six, it does not pay to double unless you have some other possibility of getting a trick in case the first side trick should fail.
In today's hand, Aaron Frank, one of the younger players of Cleveland, who has been making a good tournament record for himself, shows how to take advantage of a double.
WEST'S opening lead was the eight of hearts, which East won with the king and returned the queen, which Mr. Frank, in the South, trumped with the deuce of diamonds. Three rounds of spades were taken, the third spade being won in dummy with the king.
A heart was played back, which Mr. Frank ruffed with the five of diamonds. He now cashed his ace and king of diamonds, and then led the ace of clubs, followed by a small club, which was won in dummy with the king.
The ten of clubs was returned. East played the queen, but as West had nothing but diamonds left, he was forced to trump with the eight.
He now held the jack and nine of diamonds, while Mr. Frank's dummy held the queen and ten over it, so that, regardless of how West played the diamonds, the last two tricks were won by Mr. Frank in the dummy and his contract was made.
If Mr. Frank had attempted to draw trump, his contract would have been defeated. The double, however, warned him that West undoubtedly held the majority of the outstanding trump.

Daily Recipe

BRAISED MEAT BALLS

2 cups meat
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Bacon fat
2 tablespoons fine bread crumbs
1 egg
½ can tomatoes
1 cup carrots, diced
1 cup celery, diced
1 slice green pepper

Wipe carefully and remove most of the fat from ends of uncooked beefsteak or other meat trimmings of beef or lamb, or both. Put them through a meat chopper or chop fine. Mix all together and form into balls. The amount given above will make eight medium sized balls. Brown lightly in a little bacon fat. Put tomatoes in a casserole. Add the carrots, celery, green pepper, salt and pepper. Lay the meat balls on top, add any bacon fat left from browning them and cover the dish tightly. Cook slowly in a moderate oven until the vegetables are tender, about 2 hours.
