JOHN HAMILTON REPORTED NEAR DILLINGER JAIL

Fugitive Terror Mobster Is Believed Chased by Gary Police.

By United Press
CROWN POINT, Ind., Feb. 5.—Reports that John Hamilton, alleged killer and bank robber, was hiding within striking distance of the Lake county jail, led to new precautions as John Dillinger, Hamilton's friend, faced arraignment on murder charges.

Hamilton was blamed for the shooting to death of Police Sergeant William Shanley in Chicago recently. Dillinger will be tried on charges of shooting policeman William P. O'Malley in East Chicago.

The reports that Hamilton was in the neighborhood of Crown Point came from Theodore Mikalovich and Matthew Tetak, Gary policemen. The pair were driving from Gary to Crown Point to aid in the guarding of Dillinger.

Near Merrillville, Ind., they saw an automobile containing Hamilton and another man and a woman, they said. The automobile bore Ohio license plates. After a short chase, the policemen were out-distanced.

Dillinger has claimed that Hamilton was killed in the East Chicago raid. It was known that Dillinger, Hamilton and other members of their gang have sworn an oath to come to each others' aid when captured. All were escaped convicts.

Consider the Railroads —for Safety

The safety of the service that is provided by the railroads is usually taken for granted.

There could be no greater tribute to a safety record, but the things that are responsible for such a record cannot be taken so lightly.

On the physical side, railroads can give safe service because they have their own roadways, the track is solidly built, flanged wheels hold the trains to their course, and signals guard the way.

On the human side, too, there are reasons for railway safety. Trains are operated according to rules and orders which give safety first place, and every employee who has any part in their operation is sober, physically fit and thoroughly trained.

Safety is one reason why it pays to ship and travel by rail.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.
