Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

What problem troubles you the most? Tell it to Jane Jordan and read her answer in this column. Please remember that long letters aid her in making an intelligent reply.

Dear Jane Jordan—I'm a girl of 19 and have been going steady with a fellow 22 for about five months. He says he cares a lot for me, but recently he has been acting rather strange. He has stood me up two different times pretty close together. His excuses were rather poor. What can be the trouble? BABE.

Answer—When a boy deliberately ignores a date with a girl without showing concern over his inability to keep it, she is smart to drop him. No man is ever that rude to a girl he cares two whoops about. It isn't worth while to try to cope with his indifference, for his conduct reveals an inner rejection which his conscious urge is not strong enough to overcome. Try some one else.

Dear Jane Jordan—I had a date with a fellow a few weeks ago, but the second date was spoiled by his getting smart. He sent a note of apology and asked for another date, but I was afraid to trust him. I said some very insulting things to him and now I'm sorry I did. He treats me with a cold shoulder. Should I in turn write him a note of apology? I am afraid I admire him for his coldness. BEWILDERED.

Answer—You would have done better to generously accept the apology when it was made without stressing your own virtue by emphasizing his lack of it. Now you have an awkward situation to cope with. Your belated apology may not be well-received. He is apt to interpret it as pursued because he did not bend low enough. Perhaps he has the same reaction. Who knows? I have no idea how he would view capitulation on your part. You'll have to use your own judgment.

Dear Jane Jordan—I know a couple who love each other dearly, but every time the girl says anything the man doesn't like, he throws her past up to her. They were married young and the girl never had a chance to say her own mind. She did a few things that were not right, but she is a good, true mother to her children now, and has been for years. She loves her husband and can't understand herself in the back years now. Don't you think this man should stop throwing up stuff to her? He was not so hot himself then. Don't you think this makes many a good woman bad again? They get to thinking, "What's the use?" A READER.

Answer—After one partner has forgiven the other, all should be forgotten. When confession has been given, the trouble should never be mentioned again as a matter of delicacy. Some jealous people never find rest. They are constantly renewing old doubts, fear and insecurities. They roll what is past under their tongues with relish; and conjure up imaginary pictures for their own torment.

Such people take secret pleasure in their own distress. They dramatize the past to give a dull present, and whip up emotions which do not respond to normal stimuli.

When a husband reproaches his wife with the past, he probably feels pleasantly superior by contrast. He would do better to rely on achievement for prestige instead of belittling her to make himself feel big.

The best bet would be to show him exactly what he is doing, and then take no further notice of his accusations. When his wife ceases to react to his device, perhaps he will abandon it. People who have trust in themselves are ready to trust others also.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am 16 years old and in high school. I know a boy of 18. He doesn't care for the girls at all, rather avoids them. He seemed to like me pretty well and treated me as a friend. One day recently we were alone in a secluded part of the school building. I was talking and joking with him when I noticed that he was looking at me silently. There was something funny about it and I stopped talking. Then he turned angry and grabbed me and kissed me and then threw me from him and raced out of the door. Ever since he had avoided me and I am all broken up about it.

PEGGY.

Answer—Many boys regard girls as strange creatures from Mars. They are afraid of them and never know how they are going to react. On one side of their natures they prefer to ignore the female of the species as an intolerable nuisance,

Collectors Desire Old Valentines

Cupid's Aids Treasured for Beauty and Messages.

BY MRS. C. O. ROBINSON
Times Hobby Editor

Oh Valentine of long ago, Amidst your fringes and lace, Of romance that you signify Are there not left some traces?

And she who kept you for so long And hoped and loved and trusted, Did she not feel her ardor wain Or was her romance busted?

The ancient and sentimental custom of sending valentines has given the collector a field charged with romance in which to search for trophies. Without the propinquity of the modern rumble seat and movie, courtship in olden days moved with dignified men through various stages of intensity, but on St. Valentine's day the repressed suitor could pour out his heart yearnings in ecstatic rhyme.

When found tucked away between the pages of old books or in keepsake boxes in the attic, these languishing missives conjure up visions of blushing maids and ardent swains in whose palpitating young hearts they had created response sufficient to suggest their careful preservation. Collectors are delighted with these pulsating effusions which some times are exquisite, sometimes amusing, but always intriguing.

Gifts and the meekness of Valentine acknowledgement and during the reign of Charles II of England, the first friend seen upon St. Valentine's day was chosen as the recipient of the gift. Samuel Pepys, ever the raconteur of intimate detail, is authority for the custom since he recorded the happenings of each Valentine day in his diary.

On Feb. 14, 1661, he wrote: "I and Mrs. Batten, my Valentine, to the exchange and there sent a pair of embroidered and six pence of plain white gloves, I laid out 40s upon her."

Autograph albums were popular in the middle eighteenth century, possibly because they afforded space for poems of devotion. I owe one given to my grandmother before her marriage in 1854, which apparently was a valentine. Between the gilt decorated, pearl inlaid covers, hearts and flowers are drawn with Spencerian flourishes, an accomplishment of that time, James A. B. the dominant theme of the following fervent poem to "Miss Jennie":

Oh, had I the girl's power I'll tell you what I'd do Into a little tempting flower I'd turn myself in.

Then I'd grow down in yonder isle Where Jennie'd come to pick me At first she'd look and then she'd smile And in her bosom stick me.

She did not marry James in spite of—or maybe because of—his poetry.

The oldest paper valentines found by collectors are attributed to the middle eighteenth century. They were made and decorated by hand and often inscribed with tender sentiment expressed in home-made doggerel of exorcising meter. Two of this type, the earliest known examples, are exactly alike. One is in the British museum and the other in the notable collection assembled by Frank House Baer of Cleveland.

They were made by the same gay heart of clever hand but faithless beast, for they were sent to different lady loves. Since both were cherished, his duplicity obviously was not discovered until by a quirk of fate became a museum piece.

About 1825 lithographed valentines were made commercially in much the same manner as Currier and Ives prints, and needless to say these are rare treasures today.

NRA Administrator to Speak

"After the New Deal—What?" will be the subject of an address by Francis Wells, Indiana NRA administrator, in an address before the Economics Research Forum at Crosey hall, Central library, at 7:30 tonight.

but on the other they are unable to resist the tug of their instincts.

Your boy friend probably scared himself to death by kissing you, and took to his heels. You due him, as if nothing of world-shaking importance had occurred. When he gets over his panic, perhaps he will find nerve enough to kiss you again.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am in love with a boy 18 years old. I am 16. He says that I love him, but has never said he loves me. Do you think I have done right by letting him know that I love him? Don't you think if he really loved me he would confess it to me? MISS X.

Answer—An older and more sensible girl would let the young man declare himself first. You let your self be too easily won. Try worrying him a little by the age-old trick of paying attention to some one else. If he really cares, I imagine, he will confess it fast enough when he thinks he is losing ground.

Contract Bridge

Today's Contract Problem

South has the contract at three no trump. Originally, there were four clubs to the king in dummy and declarer proceeded to set up that suit. East won the third club trick with the queen and must lead into one of dummy's tenaces. Which suit should he lead?

BY W. E. MCKENNEY
Secretary American Bridge League

I BELIEVE as many tricks are lost annually by carelessness as are lost by poor judgment.

When your opponent opens a suit from which you can get some kind of reading on his hand (as, for example, in today's hand North opens the queen of diamonds, which shows that he holds the jack), be careful how you play your cards.

North's weak third hand bid of one club is not made with the idea of keeping the bidding open for his partner.

The principle to work on with a third hand opening is that it is your privilege to do anything. Third hand, that you believe may win the board for you. If you feel that, by opening the bidding with one club, you may be able to interfere with the bidding of your opponent, you are justified in making the bid.

East's negative double asks partner to bid spades or hearts if he holds four of either.

West, of course, is glad to respond with spades, and after his partner, by bidding and re-bidding hearts, shows up in making the bid. East is justified in taking the strain off the hand and jumping to four spades.

NORTH's opening lead is the queen of diamonds. If declarer goes up with the king in dummy, his contract will be defeated, because South will win with the ace, cash the ace of hearts, and then lead a diamond to his partner, who will win with the jack.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and let your system get all messed up and bogged down and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up in your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, and when it comes to making the bile flow freely, but don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. Buy at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. C.
