Brighter Side of Modern Warfare

"C'est la guerre," that fatalistic comment, "It is war," gave many American soldiers opportunity to relax with the French mademoiselle. These are some Indianapolis boys of the base hospital corps No. 32 with their wartime acquaintances. Submitted by Edward Kurr.

Presented above is another picture chosen from those submitted for The Indianapolis Times war picture contest. More are being accepted and The Times will pay for suitable photos.

This is important: Pictures submitted must be of Indiana troops, taken either overseas, at home or in training camp. It will be useless to submit general war scenes of unidentified troops.

To insure return, each picture must have on the back the name and address of the sender and to have a chance of acceptance, the persons or scenes shown by the pictures must be identified.

Several pictures will be used each day and $1 will be paid for each one used. Best of the day will draw $2 and best of the week $10.

Look through your scrapbooks and souvenir collections and see if you can find photographs which answer requirements. Remember they must be of Indiana troops and be good enough to reproduce properly.

Mail them to the War Picture Editor.

LOOPHOLE SEEN IN CITY LABELING BILL

No Fund for Enforcement
Provided, Says Chief.

Belief that an unenforceable act was written on the books was expressed today following the city council action in passing the liquor labeling ordinance.

The council passed an ordinance requiring dispensers of alcoholic beverages to specify on the label the content of the bottle. A penalty of $500 and a maximum imprisonment of six months is provided for violators, but the council made no provisions for the police department to carry out enforcement of the law.

Belief that it will be difficult for the police department to enforce the ordinance was expressed by Police Chief Mike Morrissey.

"We have no funds to make purchases of the beverages," he said. "All that the police department can do is to act upon the complaints when the illegally labeled beverages are brought to us."
