

Orchestra to Play at Lafayette

Mrs. Page Praised for Services to Symphony Organization.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

INDIANA Symphony Society members are praising Mrs. Lafayette Page for her success in arranging the out-state programs of the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra, directed by Ferdinand Schaefer.

The first one will be Wednesday night at Purdue university, when students and townsmen will gather to hear the orchestra's program presented here last week. A loyal band of members, headed by Gilbert Hurty, president, will motor to Lafayette to hear the concert.

Others will be Mesdames Herbert Woolen, J. A. Goodman, Charles Latham, Norman Perry, Thomas Harvey Cox, Elsa Panzer Haerle, Sylvester Johnson Jr., Theodore B. Griffith and Mrs. Page.

The group will leave in the afternoon and will dine together in Lafayette. On Wednesday, March 21, the orchestra will fill an engagement at Indiana university.

The orchestra's first out-state concert was given last year at Lafayette.

Mrs. Norman Perry will entertain a group of friends at a house party at her summer home at Lake Maxinkuskee from Thursday until Monday. Her guests will be Mesdames Jesse Fletcher, Anna Marie Gail-Sayles, Thomas Harvey Cox and Elsa Panzer Haerle.

Mingling among the guests at the Little Lamps Club frolic Saturday night at the University Club will be the hosts, members of the bachelor committee.

They include: Herbert J. Reade, Hiram Wasson McKee, Benjamin T. Coburn, Augustus P. Coburn, Robert N. Bowen, Albert O. Deluse, Nelson A. Gladding, Gilbert J. Hug, John Gordon Kinsman, Charles W. Moores, Wilson Mothershead, Henry Severin, Theodore Severin, Elmer W. Stout, John G. Williams, Coleman Atkins, Lyman S. Ayres, Richard F. Buttolph, William Kennedy, Robert W. Kruse, William H. Westford Jr., Dr. Frederick Taylor, Colonel William Guy Wall, Joseph C. Wallace, Paul H. White Jr., Thomas Ruckelshaus, Frederick A. Clark, Nicholas Noyes Jr. and Caleb N. Lodge.

Miss Anne Ayres is cruising in the West Indies with her father, Frederic Ayres. Mr. and Mrs. W. Hathaway Simmons have been vacationing in the West Indies and are expected to return home within a week.

RECITAL ARRANGED FOR JORDAN GROUP

Three readings by Edna St. Vincent Millay, to be given by Florence Evans, pupils of Bessie Van Sickle, and two violin selections to be presented by Mary Margaret Ruddell and Madonna Mullenix, pupils of Hugh McGibeny, will feature a piano recital to be given at 2:30 Wednesday at Odeon hall by the Arthur Jordan Conservatory of Music. They are students of the following teachers of piano at the conservatory: May A. Kolmer, H. Otis Pruitt, Helen L. Quig, Leone K. Rickman and Marie Zorn.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS PRESENT PROGRAM

A program by members of the Washington high school Camp Fire Girls was given Friday at the meeting of the social practice class. Mildred Poland, vice-president of the Camp Fire group, presented the program.

Blanche Chanley, president, explained the requirements for Camp Fire ranks, and told of various troop activities.

Camp Fire Girls at the school meet at 3:10 every Wednesday afternoon with Miss Mary Alice Purves as guardian.

Fable-Inspired Gown

Aesop's fables inspired the pattern for the black thread lace illustrated, here made up over fine white handkerchief linen. Ankle length, with a pleated basque of white crepe, it's quite a startling evening gown. Whoever thought that we'd see lace and linen combined? But here it is. Dikusha makes it.

Chic in Black and White

Black and white is the smart color combination right now, and Glenda Farrell chooses this frock of black wool crepe with huge white leather lapels which extend around her neck to form a flattering high collar effect. The shoulders are framed by piping in matching white leather.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

Parents who are puzzled over problems that arise in training their children are invited to write to Jane Jordan for advice. She will answer their questions in this column.

Dear Jane Jordan—I would like a little advice on how to handle my boy. I have tried everything I know. The problem is that he steals. Then when I catch him at it, he lies so. I have told him that when he wants money to come and ask me for it, and if it is possible I will give him money. I am having a hard time to make the living for him and the other child; so I don't have a whole lot to give him to spend, but I could let him have a little change if only he would ask for it when the time comes that he needs it. I try to do everything I can for him, and I don't know what has got into him. Please help me.

A DAILY READER.

Answer—I suggest that you give your boy a regular allowance, no matter how small. Don't make him ask for it. Let him know he can count on it and spend it as he pleases.

It also would be a good idea to let him have a share in helping you spend your money. If you could interest him in keeping a little budget book for you, he might feel more responsible for the family finances. Let him know that you rely on him to keep track of all the money that comes in and what it is spent for.

As a rule it is not the stupid children who steal, but the smart children who are insufficiently occupied. It would be an excellent idea to let this boy sell newspapers or magazines to employ him in his spare time and to give him extra money.

Another good outlet for your boy's acquisitive instincts is to be found in the collecting hobby. Some boys collect stamps, match box tops or bottles of all shapes, colors and sizes. With the exception of stamps, none of these hobbies need be expensive. Almost any one is glad to save his discarded match boxes for an eager small boy, and some children have made amazing collections without spending a dime. In this way your child can gratify his passion to own things without stealing. It will teach him that self-importance can be achieved without money.

Above all it is extremely important for you to make him feel that he is a necessary part of the household, responsible for certain duties which he alone can do. Make him feel proud of himself and let him know that you consider him a very fine fellow indeed.

Remember that children steal to compensate for an unhappy feeling of inferiority. Spending money makes them feel big and strong. Outwitting others to get the money makes them feel clever. Give your child plenty of opportunities for little successes in school, at home or in the friendships he forms, and he will not feel the necessity of gaining personal prestige in anti-social ways.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am a girl of 17. Not long ago I met a very nice looking boy. All the time we were having dates he was talking about me behind my back. My best girl friend told me he said I was an iceberg. He is going with some one else now and I am unhappy about it. Are there any boys on earth that like to have a good time without sitting in a car spooning all the time?

DISTRACTED.

Answer—Yes, there are plenty of boys who can enjoy a girl's society without perpetual spooning. Your boy friend probably interpreted timidity as coldness. Forget him and try to cultivate a little more warmth of manner. Don't be afraid to be enthusiastic and vivacious. No one mistakes a lively girl for an iceberg.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am 23 years old and the girl I love is 19. She's the sweetest girl in the world and I am very anxious to marry her and make her happy. I work at nights and go to college classes in the morning. She, too, is a college student, and wants to teach school for several years before she gets married.

I love her so much I feel I can't do without her. With her to help me I'd be stronger in every way. We are very congenial and talk over everything of any importance. We share everything together and delight in each other's company.

I know that if I married her I'd be interfering with her college career, but I feel that I must have her. I've tried to find a possible solution to this problem, but as yet I have failed. I am seeking advice and suggestions.

A PUZZLED READER.

Answer—The sensible thing to do is to wait until both of you have completed your education. Then you will be better equipped to shoulder the duty of marriage.

I know this is cold comfort for impatient youth, but what else can you do? You only endanger your happiness by jumping into a situation for which you are unprepared.

Long engagements are not good for the young, but they are made tolerable when the lovers are making definite progress toward a date when fulfillment will be possible. You are not facing impassable barriers. You are merely giving yourself time for certain necessary preparations which are moving you steadily toward your goal.

Dear Jane Jordan—This is all about a boy and a girl, each 17 years old, madly in love. Our conduct and conversations have become careless during the six months we have gone together. My mother took me to task regarding this. At the time I resented it very much. However, she did not threaten me with any sort of punishment and did not ask me to stop seeing the boy. She did make it plain that she wanted the condition corrected and asked me to build character and have principles. She would make our friendship beautiful instead of common.

I have had two weeks to turn this conversation over in my mind and instead of thinking my mother a wet blanket or a reformer I think she is the best pal in the world. Should I tell the boy about this conversation, and will he want to stop seeing me? He has been sick and I have not had a chance to talk to him. I wonder how it will all end?

NOT REALLY MAD.

Answer—If you are tactful, I imagine that the boy will take your mother's suggestions in the right spirit and be as appreciative as you are. Be sure not to hurt his pride, or make him feel inferior. Stress your great faith and confidence in him. Instead of chiding him for lax conduct, ask his advice. I do not anticipate any trouble with a mother as reasonable as yours, but if the boy should become permanently offended, he just isn't good material anyway.

Rubinstein Beauty Salon Opened by Ayres; Modern Motif Marks Decoration

Representative of World-Famed Expert in City for Event; Black and Red Form Color Scheme.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

IMPRESSED with the need for special beauty consultants in Indianapolis, Madame Helena Rubinstein made arrangements with L. S. Ayres for a special salon to be conducted here on her first visit to Indianapolis last fall.

The salon was opened yesterday at the Ayres store, with a representative of Madame Rubinstein in attendance. Although the New York representative will be here only one week, Madame Rubinstein will keep in communication with the permanent representative by letter and cable throughout the year. In this way, she will learn the latest developments both in the New York laboratories and in those conducted in Paris by Madame Rubinstein.

The beauty booth which was opened yesterday at Ayres was designed by Witold Gordon. Mr. Gordon is a well known artist, who created the murals for the powder room and the map room in Rockefeller Center. He is instructor in decorative design at the New York School of Decoration. For the last twenty years Mr. Gordon has collaborated with Madame Rubinstein, designing many of the interiors of her salons both here and abroad.

Utility and beauty have been combined in the design of the new booth at Ayres. The modern motif, of which Madame Rubinstein was one of the first advocates, has been used in the decoration. Two sides of the booth rise high, forming cabinets built on sky-scraper lines, giving great visibility. A striking color scheme has been attained by the use of gleaming black forms and red lacquer, with silvery stainless steel utilized for cubist ornamentation.

The booth has been built around a huge supporting column, on which, in stainless steel, and in modernistic letters, Madame Rubinstein's name is used.

Wedding Continues to Hold Interest

THE aftermath of the McMillan-Roosevelt wedding at Christ church, Oyster Bay, L. I., continues in special press dispatches. Somehow, whatever these Roosevelts do is of interest to the public. The scheme of the wedding was spring-like in color and choice of flowers. White spring flowers banked with green formed a background for the wedding procession. Against this background the bride was effective in her mother
