FALL FROM CURB IS FATAL TO MAN WHO LAUGHED AT HEIGHTS

By Times Special

CLEVELAND, March 26.—Frank Wilmore could look down on the world from a twentieth story window and laugh. He had no fear. Dizziness he never knew.

For many years Wilmore, a window washer, had defied death daily, hanging precariously above the streets on the outside walls of high buildings, trusting his life to a safety belt.

Today he was dead with a fractured skull. But he didn't fall from a skyscraper window. He stumbled off a six-inch street corner curb.
