STALIN LIKENED TO WASHINGTON BY BROOKHART

Dr. Wirt's Charges Ridiculed by Former Senator From Iowa.

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Former Senator Smith W. Brookhart today described George Washington as an advocate of world revolution and a man of ideas not very different from those held by Stalin today.

The startling comparison was drawn by the outspoken, one-time Iowa senator as he ridiculed the stir caused by charges of Dr. William Wirt, Gary school superintendent, that "brain trusters" were plotting a revolution in which President Roosevelt would play the part of Kerensky.

A house committee to investigate the Wirt affair is to be named shortly.

The philosophies of Washington and Stalin have many points in common, Mr. Brookhart told the United Press. He cited passages from Washington's farewell address which he said showed clearly that the first President favored world revolution.

The United States would do well to take a few pointers from Soviet Russia, Mr. Brookhart said.

Such a course would not imply disrespect or alteration of the Constitution, he said.

"Recent charges that brain trusters are seeking to overthrow the government are all bunk. It's that old Wall Street government that we have to overthrow."

FORTUNATE INVESTORS

Months ago this League advised building and loan stockholders to "hold" their pass books... Fortunate are those investors who have done this... Time DOES tell a valuable story to the thinking investor. Glance backward. How many other stocks have given investors the protection, the returns and value that building and loan association stock has provided for over 100 years?
