

Rapid Rise of Insanity Is Alarming

Cost of Care Takes Nearly Fifth of Each Tax Dollar.

BY GRETTA PALMER
Times Special Writer.

NEW YORK, April 25.—A high school graduate in Norman, Okla., is eager to marry and have children. But she has been recently discharged from the State Hospital for the Insane, where she underwent treatment for dementia praecox. And, in accordance with the state law, she must submit to sterilization.

Miss Palmer

The problem of whether the feeble-minded and insane should be forcibly prevented from parenthood is as controversial a question as you will find in a day's search of the medical journals.

Conservatives of every camp and color consider such a tampering with nature's processes exceedingly wicked. Some of the liberals, who are strong for birth control legislation, hesitate to deprive any one sane enough to walk the streets of his individual liberty. And the physicians and biologists are at odds as to just how effective sterilization would be in ridding us of the number of mental incompetents, who are becoming, with each generation, a more alarming burden on the state.

To rob a mental patient or expectant of his right to have children is most definitely an infringement of his liberty. So, for that matter, is confining him to an institution, putting him in a straight jacket and refusing to give him a butcher knife with which to run amuck. The good of society constrains him to give up some very precious possessions, and the good of society, according to the present laws of twenty-seven states, requires that he be sterilized as well.

Nature Often Defined

Opponents of sterilization further point out that it is in defiance of the intention of nature, as it most certainly is. But the intentions of nature have already taken pretty severe likings at our hands.

If we had let nature have her ruthless way and had not suspended the laws of the survival of the fittest, the feeble-minded would be in no position to marry, because they would have starved to death, untended, at an early age.

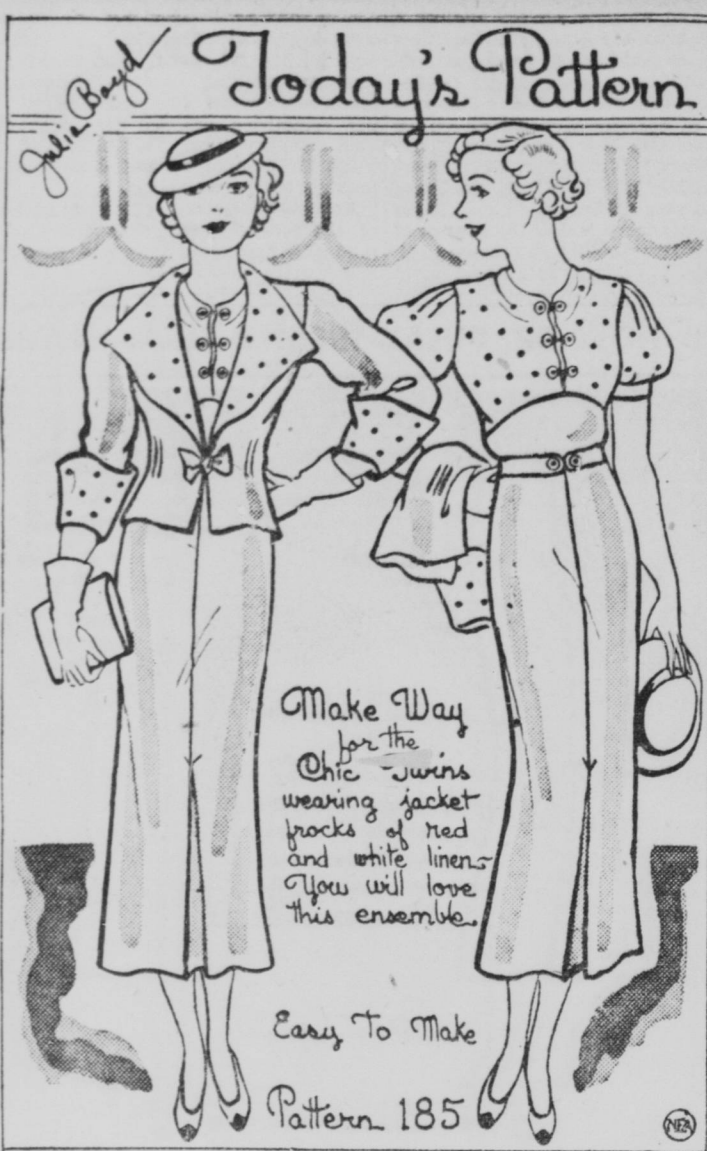

We are a great deal more humanitarian than nature ever was. Today 19 cents out of every dollar paid in taxes by a resident of New York goes to maintain a patient in a mental hospital, according to the figures of the national committee for mental hygiene.

The state in 1930 paid forty-five millions to its insane asylums; the nation spent two hundred and fifty millions.

Insanity Increases

Nobody begrudges the unfortunate mental patient every care and comfort. Heaven knows. But the number of such cases is increasing—75,000 new patients are admitted to institutions in this country every year, and there are many less violent cases at large.

The burden is fast becoming one which citizens will be able to bear only with difficulty. If there is any chance of arresting the increase by sterilization it seems well worth seizing.

Contract Bridge

Today's Contract Problem

South is in a contract of six diamonds. West opens the nine of hearts, the ten is played from dummy, and East covers with the jack. Should the declarer let East hold that trick? If so, why?

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

BY W. E. MCKENNEY,
Secretary American Bridge League

PERHAPS one of the most confusing problems confronting the beginner at contract, with a hand such as held by South today, when his partner opens the bidding with one diamond, which, by the way, I feel is a better bid on this hand than one no trump, is whether to support the diamonds or bid a one-over-one. It is a hand without any primary tricks, but it does have good distribution.

Of course, there is this to remember—partner has opened a third hand diamond bid. He may not have a great deal of strength. However, over his diamond bid, East has passed and you now almost have a right to assume that your partner has a legitimate diamond opening, due to the lack of primary tricks in your hand.

But let us consider the result of each of your bids. If you bid two diamonds, showing partner normal trump support (that is, four small trump) and two in-cards in your hand (if diamonds are trump), what will his next move be?

He may bid two spades, and then all you can do is to sign the hand off with three diamonds. If he bids two no trump, you are faced with the problem of whether to bid three diamonds and have your partner go to three no trump.

The simple response is to make a one-over-one bid of one heart. If you find a fit in your partner's hand, in hearts, game is not at all improbable.

YOU know that you have a fit in diamonds—in other words, you do not fear to lose more than one diamond trick. If it so happens that your partner's side strength is the ace and jack of hearts or the ace and king of hearts, game is more than likely.

So, on a hand of this type, don't support your partner's suit, but make the response of one heart—he can always sign the hand off with two diamonds.

Over one heart, West is justified in bidding one spade even though he is vulnerable. North, by his bid of one no trump, shows that he has a real hand.

Now South can support his partner's diamond suit and show that his hand was a minimum when he responds with three diamonds over two spades.

Realizing that South's bid of three diamonds is a sign-off, North should properly take the strength off the hand with a bid of four hearts.

There is nothing to the play of the hand. The king of spades is opened and the declarer need lose only two club tricks.

Indiana in Brief

Lively Spots in the State's Happenings Put Together 'Short and Sweet.'

INDIANA growers of soy beans may soon have a new market for their crops, according to Philip Pappet, paint specialist of the Indiana Farm Bureau Co-operative Association. Oil from the beans is being used in the manufacture of paints.

Mr. Pappet announces that at the World's fair in Chicago this year, there will be a display of simple devices with which farmers can extract the oil from the beans.

Pulp left after extraction of the oil can be used as stock feed. In making paint, the bean oil is blended with linseed oil, and is said to make paint glossier, tougher and more durable.

Oil from ten bushels of beans is required in painting the average farm house or barn.
