

Mothers of Today Don't Desire Dais

Day Set Apart for Them Implies Too Much Sentimentality.

BY GRETA PALMER
Times Special Writer

NEW YORK, April 28.—Mother's Day is soon to be with us. And we shall be called upon, all writers, to produce beautiful and admirable sentiments on the subject.

Miss Martha Heller

The difficulty is that mothers have suffered, through the centuries, from a process of idealization which has robbed them of their integrity. What mothers we see around us are nice, simple human beings. They have none of the paths of Mr. Walter's maternal ancestor. Nor do they partake of the qualities beloved of A. A. Milne.

Mothers, nowadays, seem to take motherhood in their stride—as casually as buying a spring dress. They are not afraid of its torments, nor do they hesitate before the difficulties of its obligations. And it is extremely doubtful if they relish the kind of sentimentality that goes their way on Mother's Day.

You and I have, let us assume, a fairly kindly and understanding relationship with our infants. They are fond of us, as rather aloof but devoted adults, and they consult us on their major problems. Their mother, to them, is simply a wiser and more lovable adult than the rest. And then comes Mother's Day. What happens?

A thoroughly artificial situation is produced. "Mother"—a sort of Al Jolson mammy-song character—appears. The mother who was a companion and a playmate yields her place to a mysterious and rather foggy character who has those beautiful and eternal qualities of motherhood rarely encountered outside of mythology.

Mothers are human nowadays. We don't need the exorcist sentimentality of the Mother's Day sponsors. Mothers, in 1934, are beyond the absurdity of being raised upon a dais for the sheer fact that they are mothers.

A Woman's Viewpoint

BY MRS. WALTER FERGUSON

ALTHOUGH Dr. Wirt may not have succeeded in proving there is treason in the brain trust, he did prove that one man can out-talk two women and that gossip is not entirely a feminine art.

I hope the General Federation of Women's Clubs will confer a medal on the man. He has so indisputably demonstrated that our real monologues are male, our serious scandal-mongers trou-sered.

It's like this, you see. Women—or so we have been told—are occupied with small things. Their gossip concerns itself with petty happenings. The tales they peddle are but neighborhood news, hence their tongue clankings are trivial.

Not so the men. Their affairs—or so we have been told—are vast, important and serious. Their brains bulge with great thoughts, and the famous Educated Wogglebug of Oz has nothing on them in the way of mighty meditating. Such being the case, when they speak their words carry weight. Grave attention is given to their remarks. Their tattlings are

FUR MISSING FROM COATS FOR SPRING

Ordinary furs have taken a back seat in this spring's fashions. Scores of coats are designed without any fur trimming, many of them having high, collarless lines or big outstanding fabric revers. Striking scarves or cravats are often worn with them.

Leopard, panther and ragonin, a fur which resembles beaver, appear in some striking trims, however. Richly spotted leopard makes the bold revers on a greige tweed coat, while panther and ragonin line the three-quarter length cape of wool ensembles.

Dean Bailey to Speak

Dean Albert E. Bailey of Butler university, will give an illustrated lecture on Palestine Thursday night at the First United Lutheran church under sponsorship of the Martha Society. Church members and their friends are invited.

Literary Club to Meet

Meeting Postponed

Student section of the Indianapolis Matinee Musicals announces the postponement of the meeting scheduled for next Thursday until May 18. Mrs. E. O. Nogle, Cold Springs road, will be hostess.

Sets Easy to Make

Girls who spend their summers in town, particularly in cities, should have several extra white collar and cuff sets to freshen up dark colored silk dresses. Linen, organdy, pique and novelty cottons—all these materials lend themselves well to collar and cuff ensembles. Even an inexperienced seamstress can make them—the patterns are so easy to follow.

Cotton Lace for Evening

Cotton lace is especially good for evening and daytime. One long-sleeved dance frock is fashioned of orange cotton lace. Several chic daytime dresses are of white cotton enlivened with gay colored buttons. One smart model of dark brown lace is trimmed with dollar sized orange buttons.

North is declarer at three no trump. East opens the queen of diamonds. How should North play to play the hand? Here is a tip-off—when the queen of clubs is finessed, the ten drops from the East hand.

Solution to Previous Contract Problem
BY W. E. M'KENNEY
Secretary American Bridge League
THE earliest and perhaps the most interesting of the Sims theories first introduced to contract by that great card player, P. Hal Sims, and generally used by tournament players throughout the country today, was his no trump theory. We all realize that, to make game at no trump, you must have a suit that will establish in one round and protect against a long suit of your opponents. Therefore, until the holes are blocked, it is not wise to bid no trump originally unless you hold an exceptionally powerful hand.
I want to get you straight on this particular point—when your partner opens with one no trump, your response that you make is forcing. If you hold an exceptionally weak suit, take out with two of that suit on north does today.
Of course, that two diamond response may be weak or semi-strength, but, remember, it is forcing to your partner.
Now if south were to respond with two no trump, north bids three diamonds and says, "I have a weak suit and no entries in my hand. Even though you do establish the diamonds, you will not be able to get into my hand."
OVER North's bid of two diamonds, East steps in with two spades. Naturally South—not being vulnerable—knows that if his partner's bid of two diamonds was not based on weakness, they will gain more by setting the opponents than they could by making game themselves.
Therefore, he doubles two spades. North, of course, must not leave the double in, but should bid three diamonds, just as though the bidding had gone one no trump, two diamonds, two no trump by South, three diamonds by North.
His bid of three diamonds says, "Partner, my diamond take-out was based on weakness."
Many players with South's holding might now make the mistake of trying for a game at no trump, or bidding hearts. But your partner has definitely told you that his hand is based on weakness, that the diamonds are no good to you unless the hand is played at diamonds, and that he has no help for you on the side.
Therefore, with South's big hand, you must pass and allow your partner to play the hand at three diamonds, which of course he can make.
