

NEW YORK CITY 'CAPTURED' BY 30,000 SAILORS

Fun-Seeking Gobs Swarm
Streets After Huge
Naval Review.

By United Press
NEW YORK, June 1.—Thirty thousand carefree sailors, the rigors of strenuous war maneuvers and the tenseness of a review for the President over, swarmed over New York today, taking their fun where they found it.

From battleships, cruisers and destroyers they poured ashore last night as fast as they could obtain leave after the big battle wagons dropped anchor in the Hudson. Shortly after nightfall the sailors had "taken" Riverside park. From Sixtieth street northward to the George Washington bridge the snappy blue uniforms and the perk white sailor hats were everywhere. Those looking for romance found it. Wives and sweethearts were on hand to greet some, but for the others there were plenty of girls who seemed to like the swaggering seamen.

CWA Artist Upheld

Judging from a cursory glimpse of the park, it appeared that the CWA artist who recently sketched "The Fleet's In" and invoked the wrath of high navy officials, knew just a little something about sailors. Officials protested the drawing was not representative of seamanly dignity. The sailors' enthusiasm for land after the long and tedious voyage from the west coast met a responsive chord in the metropolis. The spirit of the New York of old, of the boom days when it showered upon returning heroes a world-famous welcome, apparently has been slumbering through the depression and needed for its reawakening only the words "the fleet's in."

A million strong, New Yorkers turned out yesterday to see the magnificent splendor of the armada passing in review before President Roosevelt, catapult scores of fighting planes into the air for daring maneuvers and formation flying, and then steam gracefully up the harbor at sundown.

Roosevelt Is Pleased

President Roosevelt, who holds a secret pride for the navy, gave a benediction of "well done." When he returned to his home after an eventful day and departed last night for Groton, Mass., he was beaming with pleasure at the strength displayed by the first line of defense and the corps of pursuit planes nestled within it.

A busy program of receptions, parties and balls were scheduled for the fleet for the next six weeks. One of the most brilliant was to be held tonight, a ball at the Waldorf-Astoria. Officers will be in full dress uniforms of plumed hats and braided coats.

All the ships of the fleet will be open for inspection. Parked in regular rows along the eastern bank, they were expected to be visited by thousands before they sail June 18.

Senator Robinson Tells Veterans

Senator Arthur R. Robinson has been "marked for defeat" by the Economy League because of his fight against the Roosevelt economy act, he told a meeting of Republican veterans last night at the Claypool. The senator said that when he began his fight a year ago, he was warned then that "organized wealth had singled him out as the one man to defeat."

Approximately 300 veterans attended the meeting with Delbert O. Wilmeth, Republican nominee for congress, also a speaker.

HIGH SCHOOLS TO GRADUATE 2,738 IN CITY

4,400 Others to Receive
Certificates in Grade
Schools.

High school days, filled with a thousand golden memories, will come to a close for 2,738 graduates in the city within the next few days. Many students will lay down their books for the last time, terminating the educational training provided by the public school system.

Hundreds of the graduates of the 1934 class will continue their studies at colleges and professional schools, indications show. More students will pursue a higher education at colleges next fall than for any year since 1930, school authorities believe. There will be approximately 4,400 elementary school pupils receiving certificates entitling them to enter high school.

Commencement exercises will be held for the Crispus Attucks high school graduating class tonight with Merle Sidener, school commissioner, making the address; 205 students will receive diplomas.

Manual high school exercises will be held Monday night with Russell Wilson, school commissioner, handing out diplomas to 253 students. Fifty-six Broad Ripple high school graduates will hold their exercises Monday night. Paul C. Stetson, school superintendent, will make the address.

Tuesday night, Julian Wetzel, school board president, will address 1,115 Technical high school graduates in the Butler fieldhouse. Samuel E. Garrison, school commissioner, will address the Short-
