

Seafaring Men Suffer From Error

Laggards in Love Rather Than 'Devils With the Ladies.'

BY GRETTA PALMER
Times Special Writer

NEW YORK, June 2.—There were a lot of new men in town this week. The fleet is in. There is probably no body of men in the world against which the American girl has been more forewarned than the sailors.

Every little boy who runs away to sea, she has been assured, grows up to claim a wife in every port and to be an expert at lovemaking who will combine of Clark Gable and fifty million Frenchmen to shame.

Not only that, but she has been told, via the play, "Sailor, Beware!" the alarming news that sailors kiss and tell.

Now, Riverside drive, trolling never has been one of the major activities of the conductor of this department. But an occasional midshipman has drifted my way, and it is my seasoned decision that if those I have met may serve as a criterion for the fleet there is no need for the landlubber girl to worry. The concern, indeed, should be all on the sailor's side.

For these young men in their immaculate uniforms are undeniably attractive, but in as innocuous a tugging men who are utterly at sea when the nicer sort of girls are brought up for inspection.

And the knowledge that he is something of a curiosity in the life of the average flapper and incapable of understanding many of her references to terrestrial affairs does not help out a bit.

Courteous Crowd
The men of the navy are a courteous and charming crowd for the most part. They have managed to retain a gentleman-of-the-old-school gallantry which the women of New York will find vastly endearing.

But as for being dangerous! The poor lads, from the point of view of feminine experience, are hardly dry behind the ears.
