

REEVES TAKES COMMAND OF U. S. FLEET

Sellers Will Assume Post as Superintendent of Naval Academy.

By United Press
NEW YORK, June 15.—Admiral David Foote Sellers hauled down his four-starred flag from the mainmast of his flagship Pennsylvania today and turned over the United States fleet to the command of Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves.

The transfer of the great American naval armada from the hands of Admiral Sellers was marked by a stirring naval ceremony on the quarterdeck of the Pennsylvania. It was a poignant note in the ceremonies and excitement which have attended the first visit of the fleet to New York harbor for a naval review since 1918.

Bugles and drums on the flagship sounded four flourishes and the "Admiral's March" was played as the incoming commander stepped on the flagship's quarterdeck, where officers in bright uniforms and sailors at attention awaited him.

Guns Salute Sellers

Admiral Sellers and his staff greeted Admiral Reeves and orders detaching the former from duty as commander-in-chief of the fleet were read. Then Admiral Reeves' orders as new commander were read.

The fluttering flag of the retiring commander drifted down from the mast. The big guns of the Pennsylvania boomed a seventeen-gun salute to Admiral Sellers.

From the giant California came an echoing seventeen-gun salute in honor of the new commander, whose flag was hoisted on the Pennsylvania's main mast.

New Mexico Temporary Flagship

Admiral Sellers will report at Annapolis, Md., for his new duty as superintendent of the naval academy.

As the Pennsylvania is to proceed to the Bremerton (Wash.) navy yard after departure of the fleet on June 18, Admiral Reeves will make the U. S. S. New Mexico his flagship temporarily, it was announced.

Other changes occurred also on flagships of major divisions.

Vice-Admiral Frank H. Brumby, scouting force commander, assumed former duties of Admiral Reeves as battle force commander, and was elevated to rank of admiral on the U. S. S. California.

Vice-Admiral Bromby Succeeded

with accompanying rank of vice-admiral on the U. S. S. Indianapolis.

Rear Admiral Thomas Tingey Craven first battleship division commander, was commissioned vice-admiral and succeeded Vice-Admiral Walton R. Sexton, to command of battleships, battle force, on the flagship U. S. S. West Virginia. Admiral Sexton has been ordered to Washington as member of the general board.

Rear-Admiral Thomas J. Senn, ordered to duty as commandant of the twelfth naval district, San Francisco, was relieved by Rear-Admiral George Tilford Pettengill, as commander, base force, on the U. S. S. Argonne.
