

POWERS FORCE U. S. TO PONDER BIGGEST NAVY

Wilson Plan for Huge Fleet May Be Revived if '35 Parley Fails.

By Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance
WASHINGTON, June 28.—If British and Japanese demands for bigger navies wreck the 1935 conference, and a new building program is forced upon the United States, a return to the Wilson formula for an unexcelled fleet for this country is already practically assured.

Driven against his will by a menacing world situation, President Wilson, in 1916, sponsored a navy "equal to the most powerful maintained," a navy of titanic battleships and super battle cruisers, specially designed for a great power with adequate bases few and far between.

Unless prolonged by agreement among the principal powers, the existing naval limitation agreements of Washington and London will come to an end in 1936. If this happens, each nation will be free to build as it pleases. This means the United States will be right back where it was in 1921, prior to the Washington conference, except to say that its tremendous sacrifices to bring about world naval limitation will have gone for nothing.

United States Has Ace in Hole
Opinion on capital hill and among naval experts, says Representative Fred A. Britten, ranking Republican member of the house naval affairs committee, is practically unanimous that battleships are still the backbone of the fleet, hence the building of new and bigger battleships is to be expected if the 1935 parley fails.

The naval appropriations act of 1916, backed by President Wilson, called for ten first class battleships and battle cruisers. They were to average more than 48,000 tons each, carrying, some of them, monster guns throwing eighteen-inch shells. If forced to it by the other powers, observers here agree, the United States will likely provide itself with up-to-the-minute capital ships almost certainly larger than the 35,000 tonners now permissible under existing treaties.

1921 Repeats Itself
Not since the world war has the United States been in a better position to build, if it has too, than now. Billions of dollars are to be expended on public works in the next few years, and the President is already empowered to direct these expenditures pretty much as the executive may require. Warship construction comes under the heading of public works.

This gives the American delegation an ace in the hole when the coming naval discussions begin. The United States manifestly can not offer any such price for naval limitation in 1935. But its delegates should not have much trouble convincing Europe and Japan that unless there is agreement the Wilson program can be revived in modernized form and that the money with which to do it would not be hard to find.

ASTOR INVITES 100 TO WEDDING

Crowning Newport Social Event Takes Record for Exclusiveness.

By United Press
NEWPORT, R. I., June 28.—It will be "the one hundred" instead of "the four hundred" on Saturday at the Astor-French wedding, ace event of Newport's 1934 social season.

Establishing a new all-time record for exclusiveness, it became known that the list of guests invited to witness the marriage of young John Jacob Astor III to Ellen Tuck French had been pruned to an even hundred. And only 250—a mere handful according to Newport social standards—will attend the subsequent reception.

The list of the "chosen few" was closely guarded.

Eileen Gillespie, who jilted young Astor, early this year, will be on the high seas bound for Europe when the wedding starts.

Miss Gillespie reportedly has booked passage on a boat sailing only one hour before the ceremony at 4 p. m.

BISMARCK, N. D., June 28.—Governor William H. Langer, convicted two weeks ago of a federal felony and facing a possible penitentiary sentence or heavy fine, apparently had won a smashing victory today in his fight for renomination and popular confidence.

In partial tabulations of balloting in the state primary yesterday, Governor Langer raced far ahead of two Republican opponents.

He not only carried the home county of one of his opponents, but ran up 50-to-1 majorities in districts which never before had been carried by a nonpartisan league candidate.

Roosevelt Not Radical Enough, Norris Declares

President Saved U. S. From Ruin, Will Be Re-elected, Senator Adds.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, June 28.—That veteran liberal and progressive statesman, Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, believes that President Roosevelt should "go a great deal farther to the left" than he is doing in some aspects of his recovery program.

Mr. Norris, leaving Washington revealed he believes: That the United States was on the verge of dissolution and that this country faced "utter ruin" when Mr. Roosevelt was elected.

That Mr. Roosevelt has provided a sound leadership, that he will be re-elected, although the President could have been more radical in some policies and has made some mistakes.

That there is no hope of liberalism in the present Republican party. That neither is for nor against a third party movement.

That he will press at the next session of congress for a bill to put the postoffice department on a non-partisan basis.

That the movement to drive politics out of government should be continued vigorously.

Brain Trust Is Named to Aid Treasury Chief

14 College Professors and Economists Will Study Monetary System.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, June 28.—A treasury department "brain trust" to study new monetary and taxation legislation for the next session of congress was appointed today by Secretary Henry Morgenthau Jr.

The group, numbering fourteen, includes ten college professors and several economists. It will work under the direction of Dr. Jacob Viner, formerly of the university of Chicago, who recently was brought here as principal economic adviser of the treasury.

Eight of the new members will comprise a revenue and taxation group; the remainder a currency and banking group. Findings of the two groups will be presented to Secretary Morgenthau about mid-September to be used as a basis for possible new legislation.

Secretary Morgenthau said there was no "disappointment" over the p a s t administration monetary policies but that it was desired to "look at the treasury from the inside" to see whether improvement could be made.

He pointed out that the treasury was anxious to do some long-time planning now the rush of winter and spring was passed and that "the intelligent way to go about it was to challenge what has been done."

Few members of the treasury "brain trust" are nationally known. They are to be paid an undetermined amount out of the $2,000,000 emergency banking act of 1933 appropriation.

The monetary group comprises: Lachin Currie, instructor of economics, Harvard university, and professor of international economics at the Fletcher school of law; Harry D. White, professor of economics, Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis.; Albert G. Hart, instructor in economics, University of Chicago; Benjamin Caplan, candidate for Ph. D., University of Chicago; Virginia F. Coe, Brookings institution, Washington, D. C.; Edward C. Simmons, Brookings institution, Washington, D. C.

The taxation study group is: Carl Shoup, assistant professor of business administration, Columbia university, New York; Roy G. Black, professor of economics, University of Minnesota; Malcolm Bryan, associate professor of economics, University of Georgia; Reavis Cox, instructor in business administration, Columbia university, New York; Louis Shore, officer of instruction in the extension department, Columbia university, New York; Henry F. Walradt, professor of economics, Ohio State university; E. M. Williamson, professor of economics, Wesleyan college, Middletown, Conn.; Richard A. Lester, Princeton university.

"The currency and banking study," Mr. Morgenthau said, "is surveying the currency and credit situation in the United States, including the question of monetary standards, the various types of currency, the various types of institutions in the country, their inter-relationships and the existing methods of regulation and control thereof, and the relation of credit and currency policy to business stability and maintenance of steady employment."

"The revenue and taxation group is studying the federal tax system with special reference to need for administrative revision and simplification, to the distribution of tax burdens, to the relationship between the federal and the state and local revenue systems, and to the possibility of making use of revenue provisions as a business stabilizing device."

CITY RESIDENTS DEPLORE TRAGIC START OF WAR

Veterans Condemn Great Tragedy; Archduke Shot 20 Years Ago.

Twenty years ago today, while all good Bosnians were celebrating Vidov Dan, the feast day of St. Vitus, and a great patriotic holiday among the Slavs, a match was thrown into the powder barrel which was Europe, armed to the teeth and suspicious, much as it is today.

The Archduke Franz Ferdinand of the now vanished Austro-Hungarian empire, and his consort, a princess of the Germanic house of Hohenberg, were assassinated at Sarajevo by a 19-year-old student, one Garbrie Princip—and the World war was started.

That war cost 8,000,000 lives. It cost untold billions of dollars, still is costing billions. It left broken and destitute veterans. It recast the map of Europe and left danger spots scattered over the new map.

Cause of Depression
It leveled some of the greatest architectural monuments to medieval culture. It ruined great portions of the European countryside. It was potent among the causes of the great depression.

Today men who participated in that war looked back on it and, almost without exception, found it not good, as did organized peace workers.

In Yugoslavia, one of the men who plotted the assassination, Bora Jetic, said it never would have occurred had the war been foreseen.

Some Indianapolis comments follow:
Major H. Weir Cook, Indiana War Ace—"The whole thing was tragically futile. That sums up my sentiments. There was no sense in it. Nobody profited by it. It was no good to anybody."

Horrors of Conflict
Frank E. Samuel, National Adjutant, American Legion—"The tragedy that flung virtually the whole world into war, the horrors of that conflict and the abnormal economic conditions that have followed the war with its increasing jealousies and suspicions between nations, all constitute a review on this anniversary that should make us stop and think for a moment about the causes and prevention of war."

We of the legion see in this whole picture the necessity of teaching our youth that war is not an attractive adventure, but, rather, is something to be avoided by every honorable means. We see the need of an adequate national defense and, above all, the enactment into law of the principle of universal service, to be used only if war should be thrust upon us in the future.

This principle, that would place the burden equally on every element of our national life, and upon all resources, would eliminate profit from war and prevent any desire over the part of munition makers, or any other group, to cause war.

War Was Predicted
Major-General Robert H. Tyndall—"Although the war was a surprise to pacifists, we in the higher command expected a war to break between 1902 and 1920. The war was predicted by 'Teddy' Roosevelt's preparedness program and by the fact that General Leonard Wood was in Europe surveying the situation."

War is an evolution that must continue whether we desire it or not. Human nature never can be changed.

E. E. Stacy, Executive Secretary of the Indiana World Peace Committee—"What a twenty years! Unparalleled in the history of this planet! Thank heavens, the peoples of this world are sick and tired of war."

More and more of us are apologizing to the unknown soldier and more and more of us are agreeing with Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt and other outspoken leaders as to "the stupidity of war." More people are "thinking straight" and the peace forces of the world have come to grips with war as never before. Let's have a host of Indiana people actively back of these peace forces this coming year.
